Tafel, John Frederic Leonhard, Ph.D., born in Sulzbach, on the Kocher River, in the kingdom of Wür-temberg, Germany, Feb. 6, 1800. He graduated at the University of Tübingen in 1820, and taught successively at the gymnasiums in Stuttgart and Ulm, and was Principal of the County Academy in Schorndorf. He emigrated to America in the year 1853, and was for three years Pro-fessor of Languages at the Urbana University in Ohio. He resides at present in St. Louis, Mo. His educational works are: Hamilton and seine Gegner, (Hamilton and his Opponents,) Ulm, 1836. From the year 1830 to 1837 he published text-books, according to Hamilton's inter-linear method, for instruction in the following languages, viz.: Latin, Greek, English, Spanish, Italian, French, (two editions.) He also prepared a second course of instruction, according to the same method, in Latin, French, and English. In 1838 he published, in Cotta's Deut-sche Vierteljahrschrift, a review of Hamilton's and Ja-cotot's methods of teaching the languages. In 1845 he wrote his Analytische Lehrmethode, (Analytic Method of Teaching.) His text-books according to this method are Analytisches Lehrbuch der lateinischen Sprache, in 2 vols., Ulm, 1839; Analytisches Lehrbuch der französischen Sprache, Stuttgart, 1846; and Analytisches Lehrbuch der englischen Sprache, Stuttgart, 1847. In 1836 he wrote Die Stadtschulen Württemberg's; ein Vorschlag zu einer Reform, (The Free-Schools of Württemberg: a Proposal for their Reformation.) His philological works are: T. Livii Opera omnia, iii. vols., editit J. T. L. Tafel, Stuttgartiæ, 1823. He translated into German, from the Greek, Xenophon's Anabasis, and Cassius Dio's Roman History, in the collection called Griechische Prosaiker, published by Professors Lucas Tafel, Osiander, and Schwab. The following works have been translated by him from the English: Sir Walter Scott's Waverley, Ivanhoe, Quentin Durward, The Astrologer, The Antiquary, Kenilworth, and The Abbot, Cooper's The Last of the Mohicans, Thackeray's Pendennis, and Dickens's Dombey and Son and Pictures from Italy. From the French he translated The Mysteries of London. His theological works are: Staat und Christenthum, Tübingen, 1851; Der Christ und der Atheist, Philadelphia, 1856.

Dr. Tafel has been engaged in the publication of the following periodicals. From 1827 to 1830 he was co-editor of the Ausland, a weekly periodical published by Cotta, devoted to foreign literature and the discussion of things abroad. In 1851 he was editor of the Reichstagszeitung, the organ of the German Diet after its removal from Frankfurt to Stuttgart. From 1849 to 1853 he participated in editing the Beobachter, a daily paper devoted to the interests of the liberal party, published by his brother, Gottlob Tafel, attorney-at-law, in Stuttgart. A New and Complete English-German and German-English Pocket Dictionary, by J. F. L. Tafel and Louis H. Tafel, Phila., 1870, sq. 12mo. See, also, TAFEL, RUDOLPH LEONHARD.

Tafel, Rudolph Leonhard, Ph.D., Professor of Modern Languages and Comparative Philology at the Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., b. 24th Nov. 1831, in Ulm, kingdom of Württemberg, Germany, emi-grated to the United States in the year 1847.

He published two speeches, a number of single sermons, &c., and a vol. of Twelve Sermons, Lon., 8vo, 1725; 2d ed., 1731. See Nichols's Lit. Anec., vii. 410, 686, (Index); Nichols's Illust. of Lit., i. 417.

Talbot, William Henry Fox, LL.D., a grandson of the Earl of Ilchester, and maternally descended from the Earls of Shrewsbury, was b. 1800, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he gained the Porson prize for Greek Iambic Verse, 1820, and was Chancellor's Medallist on taking his degree, 1821; M.P. for Chippenham, 1832–34. 1. Legendary Tales in Verse and Prose, Lon., 1830, 12mo. 2. Hermes; or, Classical and Antiquarian Researches, 8vo: Pt. 1, 1829; Pt. 2, 1839. 3. The Antiquity of the Book of Genesis illustrated by some New Arguments, 1839, 8vo.

"The object of this essay is to show that the Antiquity of the Book of Genesis may be proved, independently of all other evidence, from the allusions to it in Hesiod and other ancient Greek Writers."—Advertisement.

4. The Pencil of Nature: a Collection of Genuine Specimens of the New Art of Photography, &c., r. 4to, 6 Parts, 1844–46, £3 3s. Mr. Talbot commenced in October, 1833, the series of experiments which resulted in September, 1840, in his making "the discovery which laid the foundation of the present form of the photographic art." On this subject, (Talbotype), and the experiments of M. Daguerre, see Eng. Cyc., Biog., ii. 478, (1856,) iv. 508, (1857,) v. 887, (1857;) Lon. Athen., 1840, 684; 1850, 1852, Indexes; *Lon. Lit. Sir Henry James, R.E., &c., Lon., 4to. 5. English Etymologies, 1846, (some 1847,) 8vo, pp. vii., 492.

"This is the most interesting work on the derivation of the English language which has appeared for many years, and perhaps the most entertaining that has ever been published on the subject."—Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1847, 57. See also, 87, 109.

"We beg pardon for having given so much space to this incoherent and contradictory boobyism. . . . A labyrinth of ignorance and negligence."—Lon. Quar. Rev., Sept. 1847, 500–525.

To this uncomplimentary criticism Mr. Talbot responded in Lon. Lit. Gazette, Jan. 1, 1848, 1–6, (The Reviewer Reviewed;) and the editor of that periodical reaffirms his admiration of English Etymologies.

"Of late years he [Mr. Talbot] has mainly devoted himself to the work of deciphering the cuneiform inscriptions from the East."—Men of the Time, 1862, 841.

Talfourd, Francis, eldest son of the succeeding, joined the Oxford Circuit in 1854, and d. at Mentone, March 9, 1862. He gained some reputation as a dramatist.

"Mr. Talfourd has left the world with little or no adequate witness of his powers,—the travestie and burlesque in which he revelled showing but one, and that the poorer, side of his gay and brilliant intellect."—Lon. Athen., 1862, i. 365.

He was a contributor to several periodicals.

Talfourd, Sir Thomas Noon, D.C.L., the son of a brewer of Reading, Berkshire, was b. January 26, 1795, at Doxey, a suburb of the town of Stafford, where his mother (a daughter of Thomas Noon, minister of a congregation of Independents in Reading) was on a visit; received his education at the Grammar-School of Reading, under the Rev. Richard Valpy, D.D.; was subsequently entered of the Middle Temple; in 1813 began the study of the law under Joseph Chitty; in 1817 commenced practice as a special pleader, and was called to the Bar in Hilary Term, 1821; married the daughter of John Towell Rutt (supra) in 1822; applied for a silk gown in 1832, and, not obtaining it, in Hilary Term, 1833, accepted the coif and became Mr. Serjeant Talfourd, (was also for some years Recorder of Banbury;) M.P. for Reading, 1835, 1837, and 1847 to 1849, when he was appointed successor to Mr. Justice Coltman in the Court of Common Pleas, and received the honour of knighthood; was struck with apoplexy whilst in the act of addressing the Grand Jury from the Bench, at Stafford, March 13, 1854, and d. a few hours afterwards, at his lodgings in that town. As a member of Parliament, he is entitled to the paternity of the Custody of Infants Act, (2 & 3 Vict., c. 54,) and the Copyright Act—introduced by him in 1837, but not passed until 1842, (5 Vict., c. 45,) and then in a modified form, when he was not in the House of Commons.

1. Poems on Various Subjects, (including a Poem on the Education of the Poor; specimens of a didactic poem on The Union and Brotherhood of Mankind; an Indian Tale; and the Offering of Isaac, a Sacred Drama,) Lon., 1811, cr. 8vo, pp. 244, (Longman & Co.) Anon. Published, it will be observed, in his 17th year.

"His lines are smooth, but some of his opinions are rather enthusiastic. . . . Nevertheless, we give this writer full credit for the wish which he expresses to advance the cause of religion and morality."—Lon. Month. Rev., Dec. 1811, 436.

2. An Attempt to Estimate the Poetical Talent of the Present Age, 1815, 8vo. One of the first tributes to the genius of Wordsworth. At this early period of his life he also published (anonymously) a number of political and legal pamphlets; and subsequently contributed to the London Magazine, New Monthly Magazine, Retrospective Review, (see SOUTHERN, HENRY,) Edinburgh Review, Quarterly Review, Law Magazine, and Times, (Reports of Circuit Cases.) A number of his articles contributed to the Encyclopædia Metropolitana have since been republished in the Cabinet edition of that work, viz.: vol. ix., History of Greek Literature; vol. xv., History of Greece; vol. xix., History of the Roman Republic.

He is one of the authors of the addresses collected in the volume entitled Importance of Literature to Men of Business, 1852, 12mo. He also, about 1826, edited the Practical Guide to the Quarter Sessions, 5th ed., 1841, 8vo, (see DICKINSON, WILLIAM,) and has already been noticed (p. 1950, supra) as the biographer and editor of his friend Charles Lamb. See, also, DRACON, W. F.; HAZLITT, WILLIAM; RADCLIFFE, ANNE. We have now (1870) to notice some new editions of Lamb's Works: I. Bost., Crosby, Nichols & Co., 4 vols. cr. 8vo. II. N. York, Widdleton, 1865, 5 vols. cr. 8vo; again, with Eliana, (ut infra). III. Lon., Moxon, 1865, r. 8vo, (see Amer. Pub. Circ., Nov. 1, 1867, 6.) IV. Bell & Daldy, 1867, r. 8vo. V. C. Hotten announces: XV. Poems and Letters of Mary Lamb; with Numerous Illustrations of Favourite Haunts, Portraits, Relics of the Lamb Family, and Fac-Similes. 3. Ion; a Tragedy, in Five Acts, for private circulation; not published; 1835, 8vo, pp. 204; 2d ed., to which are added a Few Sonnets; for private circulation; not published, 8vo, pp. 216; title and prefaces, pp. xxi.; published 1836, 8vo; N. York, 1837, 12mo. Ion was noticed favourably, with qualifications, by Lon. Gent. Mag., 1836, i. 505; unfavourably, with qualifications, by Lon. Athen., 1836, 371; and praised, without qualifications, by Lon. Quar. Rev., July, 1835, 61, n., Sept. 1835, 505, and Blackw. Mag., Feb. 1836, 267. Other notices of it will be found in Fraser's Mag., xiv. 218; N. Amer. Rev., xlv. 485, lxxx. 257, (both by C. C. Felton;) Chris. Quar. Spec., x. 156, (by T. D. Woolsey,) and N. Brit. Rev., May, 1856, art. ii., (Life and Writings of the Late Mr. Justice Talfourd.)

The last-cited critic remarks,

"Altogether, this play may fairly take rank, as the pleasing and blameless production of a refined and cultivated mind, amongst the best dramas that have been composed for the closet; but when the author's friends proceeded to proclaim it as a decided work of genius in the highest sense of the term, they were clearly hurried into a palpable mistake."

President Felton (and there are few higher authorities) pronounced Ion (ubi supra) "the most successful reproduction of the antique spirit with which he was acquainted." See, also, WHITEHEAD, WILLIAM, No. 10. Ion was first brought out for the benefit of Mr. Macready, at Covent Garden Theatre, May 26, 1836, and subsequently acted with success at the Haymarket and other theatres. After a sleep, seldom disturbed, of many years, it was revived at Sadler's Wells, Dec. 11, 1861, "for the purpose of introducing Mrs. F. B. Conway as the representative of the temple-youth, the future monarch, and martyr to his country's welfare." (See Lon. Athen., 1861, ii. 813.)

4. The Athenian Captive; a Tragedy, Lon., 1838, 8vo; new ed., 1848, 8vo; N. York, 12mo. Produced in 1838 at the Haymarket, with moderate success. See Eclectic Rev., 4th Ser., iv. 181. 5. Glencoe; or, The Fate of the Macdonalds: a Tragedy, in Five Acts, not published, (Lon., 1839,) 8vo, pp. 95; Title and Preface, pp. vi.; published Lon., 1840, 8vo. First acted at the Haymarket, May 23, 1840. Nos. 3, 4, and 5 were published together in one volume,—Dramatic Works; to which are added a Few Sonnets and Verses,—in 1843, 8vo, (repub. in N. York;) 10th ed., 1848, 18mo; 11th ed., 1852, fp. 8vo; Bost., 1865, 16mo. To this collection must be added—6. The Castilian; an Historical Tragedy, in Five Acts, privately printed, 1854, 12mo; published 1854, 12mo. Not acted.

"Manifests no enlargement of range or improvement of execution."—N. Brit. Rev., May, 1856, art. ii.

of 1846, fp. 8vo, 1854. See Lon. Athen., 1854, 548; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1854, 437. To the preceding list add (not collected by himself nor ever published in Great Britain)—12. Critical and Miscellaneous Essays of T. Noon Talfourd, Phila., 1842, 12mo, pp. 354. Repub., with Additional Articles: see STEPHEN, Rr. HON. SIR JAMES, K.C.B., LL.D., No. 1. The first edition was reviewed in N. Amer. Rev., Oct. 1843, 333–52, by one of the best critics of the age, Edwin P. Whipple: see, also, his Essays and Reviews, i. 81–102, 109. The N. Brit. Rev. (May, 1856, art. ii.) remarks that, whilst

“many of Talfourd’s critical essays are remarkable for refinement of observation and frequent felicity of phrase, there is hardly one of them which is brought to a close without being partially impaired by that flux of words which was his bane.”

Brit.*, 8th ed., xx., Dec. 1860, (by Robert Carruthers.)

“Of all the men whom I have known, after long intercourse with the business of the world, the Serjeant is the one who most preserves, to all outward appearance, the freshness and integrity of his youthful spirits.”—THOMAS DE QUINCEY: Lit. Reminis., Bost. ed., i. 257, (q. v.)

“He was much more than merely a distinguished leader, an eminent judge, or a great ornament of our literature. He had one ruling purpose of his life,—the doing good to his fellow-creatures in his generation. He was eminently courteous and kind, generous, simple-hearted, of great modesty, of the strictest honour, and of spotless integrity.”—SIR J. T. COLERIDGE: Charge to the Grand Jury on the day after Talfourd’s sudden decease.

“I heard the late Lord Chief-Justice Tindal praise him highly for judgment and skill in the management of business. He said he was altogether a successful advocate. No man got more verdicts, and no man more deserved to get them. Talfourd is a generous and kind-hearted man. To men of letters and artists in distress, such as Leigh Hunt, Haydon, &c., he was always very liberal. He did not forget his early friends, and at the large parties he has hitherto delighted to give, poets, players, authors of every kind were to be seen, together with barristers, and now and then judges.”—HENRY CRABBE ROBINSON: Diary, &c., ed. Bost., 1870, i. 264. See, also, INDEX.

Tannahill, Robert, a popular writer of Scotch songs, the son of a weaver, and himself a weaver, was b. in Paisley, Scotland, June 3, 1774, and drowned himself, whilst deranged, in a pool in the vicinity of that town, May 17, 1810. The Soldier's Return; a Scottish Interlude, in Two Acts; with other Poems and Songs, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect, Paisley, 1807, 12mo. Poems and Songs, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect, to which is prefixed a notice respecting his Life and Writings, 4th ed., 1817, 8vo. Works, with Life of the Author, and a Memoir of Robert Archibald Smith, the Musical Composer, [who set to music and arranged some of Tannahill's finest songs,] by Philip A. Ramsay, to which is added Wilson's Clyde, a Descriptive Poem, by John Wilson, with Life of the Author by John Leyden, M.D., Glasg., 1838, 12mo; Edin., 12mo; Lon., 1848, 12mo; 1851, 18mo, pp. 378. He was a contributor to The Harp of Renfrewshire, a Paisley periodical, and to George Thomson's Select Melodies.

"Some of his songs may be pronounced to be the very perfection of song-writing, so far as that consists in the simple and natural expression of feelings common to all."—Chambers's and Thomson's Biog. Dict. of Em. Scots., ed. 1855, iv. 363, (q. v. for a notice of Tannahill.)

Among the best-known of his songs (which will be found in many of the modern collections of Scottish poetry) are the Song of the Battle of Vittoria, Gloomy Winter's Now Awa, Loudon's Bonny Woods and Braes, The Braes of Balquhither, The Braes of Gleniffer, and Jessie the Flower o' Dumblane.

Tannchill, Wilkins, was born in Pittsburg, Pa., March 4, 1787. He removed to Lexington, Ky., at an early age, and shortly after to Nashville, Tenn., where he died, June 2, 1858, in the 72d year of his age. Mr. T. early became connected with the periodical press, having been co-editor of the Nashville Whig and other papers. He subsequently edited a new literary and independent paper, entitled The Orthopolitan. He then edited the Port-Folio, a Journal of Free-Masonry, from July, 1848, to June, 1849. The failure of his eyesight, which he lost entirely two or three years before his death, obliged him to discontinue the Journal and to cease from his labours.

Mr. T. was also the author of several works of considerable merit. The one that has had the greatest circulation, and has passed through several editions, is the Free-Mason's Manual, with a history of the progress of that ancient order from speculative to practical Masonry, —said to be a standard work among Masons. In 1827 he published, at Nashville, Sketches of the History of Literature from the Earliest Period to the Revival of Letters in the 15th Century, in an octavo volume of 344 pages. In 1846 he published, also at Nashville, Sketches of the History of Roman Literature from the Earliest Period to the Accession of Constantine the Great, 12mo of 167 pages. An enlarged edition of the Sketches of Literature was left in MS., and is now in the Library of the Historical Society of Tennessee in the Capitol at Nashville.

Mr. Tannehill was highly esteemed for his many virtues, and may be justly said to have added much to the literary reputation of his adopted city.

"Tanner's valuable 'Bibliotheca,' being written in Latin, is a sealed book to the multitude, and only useful for reference to the more instructed classes. Even for the latter it abounds in errors, mostly copied from the elder bibliographers; there is little attempt at minute criticism, either in dates or facts; and we can see, through many subsequent publications, how largely their compilers have been led astray by adopting them without examining the original authorities and comparing them with the texts they have so carefully copied."—*Edin. Tate, Nahum, a son of Dr. Faithful Teat or Teate, (q. v.) was b. in Dublin, 1652; matriculated at Trinity College, Dublin, at the age of sixteen; removed to London, where he adopted literature as a profession; succeeded Shadwell as Poet-Laureate in 1690; d. in the precincts of the Mint, Southwark, (where he had for some time taken refuge from his creditors,) Aug. 12, 1715. 1. Poems, Lon., 1677, 8vo, pp. 148. 2. Memorials for the Learned, collected out of Eminent Authors in History, 1686, 8vo. 3. Characters of Virtue and Vice Described and Attempted in Verse; from a Treatise of Joseph Hall, Bishop of Exon, 1691, 4to. 4. Present for the Ladies, 2d ed., 1693, 8vo. 5. Poem on Promotion, 1694. 6. Elegy on Abp. Tillotson, 1695. 7. Elegy on Queen Mary, 1695. 8. Miscellanea Sacra; or, Poems on Divine and Moral Subjects, 1698, 8vo. 9. Elegies, 1699, 8vo. 10. Plantage; a Poem on Tea, 1700, 8vo. 11. An Essay for promoting Psalmody, 1710, 8vo. He published about ten dramatic pieces, (see Biog. Dramat.), including an alteration of Shakespeare's Lear, 1681, 4to, which last kept possession of the stage for nearly a century; and a number of translations from the Greek, Latin, and French; and has long had ascribed to him—it appears, erroneously, (see Blakely's Lit. of Angling, 1856, 317)—The Innocent Epicure; or, The Art of Angling, a Poem, 1697, 12mo; 2d ed., 1713, 12mo; 3d ed., with the title of Angling, a Poem, 1741, 12mo. In 1713 he edited The Monitor, a short-lived penny paper. As a coadjutor of Dryden (p. 523, supra) and of Nicholas Brady (q. v., and STERN-HOLD, THOMAS, No. 1) the psalmist, he has already claimed our notice. His official Birthday Odes are not considered specimens of the loftiest style of poetical eloquence:

"Nahum Tate of all my predecessors must have ranked the lowest of the Laureates if he had not succeeded Shadwell."—SOUTHEY: Life of Cowper.

But Tate's latest biographers are disposed to question the justice of this verdict:

"Could Southey, with all his varied book-lore, have been ignorant of the verses of Eusebius? and is he not in this estimate somewhat polite and merciful to his predecessor, Pyc?"—Austin and Ralph's Lives of the Poets-Laureate, 1853, 222, (q. v.)

"There is an English word-joiner—author we will not call him—who has had the temerity to accomplish two things, either of which would have been enough to have conferred upon him a bad immortality. Nahum Tate has succeeded, to an extent which defies all competition, in degrading the Psalms of David and the Lear of Shakespeare to the condition of being tolerated, and perhaps even admired, by the most dull, gross, and anti-poetical capacity. These were not easy tasks; but Nahum Tate has enjoyed more than a century of honour for his labours; and his new versions of the Psalms are still sung on (like the Shepherd in Arcadia piped) as if they would never be old, and his Lear was the Lear of the Playhouse at the time of the publication of our first edition, with one solitary exception of a modern heresy in favour of Shakespeare."—CHARLES KNIGHT: Pictorial Shakspeare, 2d ed., 1867, v. 465.

"Mr. Bayard Taylor has gained in brilliancy at the expense of simplicity. . . . On the whole, this is a fair parlour-window book; but it is haggard."—Lon. Athen., 1862, i, 753. See, also, 787.

16. The Poet's Journal, Bost. and Lon., 1862, 16mo, pp. 204; Bost., 1863, 12mo. This may be called a poetical domestic autobiography.

"His earlier poems were not only deserving of praise for their intrinsic excellence, but they were rich with a promise which has been amply fulfilled in his later productions; and it is gratifying to add that his last volume is his best."—N. Amer. Rev., Jan. 1863, 268.

Also commended by Lon. Athen., 1863, i, 224.

Dr. Griswold gave his verdict, in 1855, that, 'eminent as he is as a writer of travels, his highest and most enduring distinction will be from his poetry; . . . his travels will hereafter be to his poems no more than those of Smollett are to his extraordinary novels.'—Poets and Poetry of America, 16th ed., 600.

Uniform editions of his Travels were published by George P. Putnam, of New York, in 5 vols. 12mo, 1855; 6 vols. 12mo, 1858; 8 vols. 12mo, 1859; and he issued in 1862 two uniform editions, (Caxton edition and Popular edition,) each in 10 vols., small 8vo, of Taylor's Prose Writings: viz., Travels, (Nos. 2, 4, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, and 15, supra), 9 vols.; A Romance of American Life, (a new work), 1 vol. Mr. Taylor prepared and arranged a Cyclopædia of Modern Travel, Cincinnati, 1857, r. 8vo, pp. 956; contributed notes on Lew Chew and Japan to the Narrative of Perry's Expedition, (see HAWKS, FRANCIS LISTER, D.D., No. 9, and N. Amer. Rev., lxxxiii. 236, 260, by E. E. Hale), and to Voices from the Press, N. York, 1850, 8vo; and an Introduction to The Life, Travels, and Books of Alexander Humboldt, N. York, 1859, 12mo; is the author of The Greeting to America, a prize poem written for Jenny Lind; and has contributed to the United States Gazette, Putnam's Magazine, Saturday Evening Post, Literary World, New York Mercury, Independent, Atlantic Monthly, Hearth and Home, &c. See, also, BURTON, RICHARD FRANCIS, No. 7; RIPLEY, GEORGE, No. 4. Nor should we omit to notice the oral descriptions, conveyed in public lectures, of foreign countries and peoples with which Mr. Taylor has been, for many years past, in the habit of entertaining audiences in various parts of the United States.

We are now (1870) able to enlarge the list of Mr. Taylor's publications. 17. Hannah Thurston: a Story of American Life, N. York, Nov. 1863, 12mo; 14th 1000, Nov. 1864; Lon., Nov. 1863, 3 vols. p. 8vo; red. to 24s., Mar. 1844. In Russian, St. Petersburg, 1864. In German, by the author's wife, Marie Taylor, daughter of Prof. Hansen, the distinguished German astronomer, Hamburg, May, 1864. This was commended by many authorities, of which the London Saturday Review was not one. See Atlantic Mon., Jan. 1864, and New Englander, July, 1864. 18. John Godfrey's Fortunes, Related by Himself: a Story of American Life, N. York, Nov. 15, 1864, r. 12mo; 9th 1000, Jan. 11, 1865; Lon., Nov. 1864, 3 vols. p. 8vo. In German, 1865.

"Mr. Taylor took a great stride forward when he produced his recent story, 'Hannah Thurston'; but he never showed his full force until now. . . . The style is excellent,—clear, decided, and occasionally sparkling."—Dr. R. S. MACKENZIE.

19. The Story of Kennet; a Tale of American Life, N. York, April 2, 1866, cr. 8vo; Lon., 1866, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"In this novel Mr. Taylor has so far surpassed his former efforts in extended fiction, as to approach the excellence attained in his briefer stories."—Atlantic Mon., June, 1866, 775.

20. The Picture of St. John, Bost., 1866, 12mo, pp. 220.

"Will be deservedly praised for its artistic completeness."—The Round Table, Oct. 13, 1866.

"This poem has the prime virtue of narrative fiction,—coherence and easy movement."—Atlantic Mon., Jan. 1867.

21. Colorado; a Summer Trip, N. York, 1867, 12mo; Lon., 1867, p. 8vo. This is vol. x. of Putnam's uniform edition of Taylor's Travels.

York, Leypoldt, 1869, 4 Parts; also in 2 vols. 25. The Ballad of Abraham Lincoln; with Illustrations in Colours by S. Eyttinger, Jr., 1869, (Fields, Osgood & Co.'s Uncle Sam Series.) He contributed to the American edition of Lampadius's Life of F. M. Bartholdy, Phila. and N. York, 1865, 16mo, and is represented in Lyrics of Loyalty, 1864, 24mo. A collective edition of the Poems of Bayard Taylor—containing Poems of the Orient, Poems of Home and Travel, The Poet's Journal, &c.—was issued by Ticknor & Fields, Bost., 1864, 32mo, blue and gold; also 1865, 16mo; a collective edition of his Novels was published by G. P. Putnam & Son, N. York, 1869, 3 vols. 12mo; and the last collective edition of his Travels, (comprising Nos. 2, 4, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, 21, 23,) in 10 vols. 12mo, was issued by the same house also in 1869. He is now (1870) employed upon a translation of both parts of Faust, which "is said to preserve all the metrical peculiarities of the original German, even to the double rhyme, (a very difficult task in English,) without the addition of a word or thought not warranted by the text. The translation will be accompanied by a full and practical commentary, in which the mysteries of the great drama will be elucidated."

Taylor, Isaac, the second, LL.D., son of the preceding, b. at Lavenham, Suffolk, 1787, after a course of theological study with a view to the Dissenting pulpit, and some attention to the literature of the Bar, settled down (at Stanford Rivers) as a literary recluse,—communicating to the world, from time to time, the results of his researches and meditations. In 1818 he was engaged by the editor, Josiah Conder, (p. 418, supra), as a regular contributor to the Eclectic Review. He died June 28, 1865. That he has not been an idler in the Republic of Letters, the following list of his works (some of which were originally published without his name) gives ample evidence.

1. Elements of Thought, Lon., 1823, 8vo; 2d Amer. ed., N. York, 1851, 12mo; 10th ed., Lon., 1853, 12mo; 11th ed., 1867, p. 8vo; red. to 4s., 1868.

"It is an able and valuable condensation of much that has been written on mental philosophy for the last century."—Blakey's Hist. of the Philos. of Mind, 1850, iv. 101.

2. History of the Transmission of Ancient Books to Modern Times, 1827, 8vo. See No. 3. See Lon. Month. Rev., cxiv. 53; N. Amer. Rev., xlii. 1; N. York Rev., iii. 273.

3. The Process of Historical Proof Exemplified and Explained, 1828, 8vo; 2d ed., with 2d ed. of No. 2, both in 1 vol., 1859, p. 8vo, pp. 430. Valuable: see Lon. Athen., 1828; Lon. Gent. Mag., 1859, i. 527.

"These two works [Nos. 2 and 3] are particularly valuable."—DR. CHAMBERS: Lects. on Paley's Evidences.

4. Balance of Criminality; or, Mental Error compared with Immoral Conduct, 1828, 12mo. 5. Herodotus, translated from the Greek, &c.; with Notes, 1829, 8vo, pp. 766. Pronounced superior to the versions of Littlebury and Beloe, and inferior to the new version by Rawlinson, (who praises it in his Preface): see Lon. Gent. Mag., 1829, i. 137; 1858, i. 393. "He is an independent more than an original thinker. He is rather exempt from fear than animated by ardent courage in announcing the fruits of his enquiries. A great master of language, he is himself but too often mastered by it. He is too much the creature, to become the reformer, of his age. His assiduity to please is fatal to his desire to command. His efforts to move the will are defeated by his success in dazzling the fancy. Yet his books exhibit a character, both moral and intellectual, from the study of which the reader can hardly fail to rise a wiser and a better man."—SIR JAMES STEPHEN: Edin. Rev., lxxvii. Taylor, Jane, the daughter of Isaac Taylor the first and Ann Taylor the first, was b. in London, Sept. 23, 1783, d. in Ongar, Essex, April 12, 1824. Her first production which appeared in print was the poem of The Beggar Boy, published in the Minor's Pocket-Book (to which her sister Ann had contributed for some years) in 1804; she afterwards united with her sister in the composition of the juvenile works already noticed, (see TAYLOR, ANN, the second,) and subsequently published the following: 1. Display; a Tale, Lon., 1815, 12mo; Bost., 1815, 12mo; last ed., Lon., 1848, 18mo. Commended by Lon. Month. Rev., 1816, i. 325. 2. Essays in Rhyme on Morals and Manners, 1816, 12mo; Bost., 1816, 12mo; 5th ed., Lon., 1839, 12mo.

"No poet of the time (not excepting the greatest) has shown more exquisite skill in delineating human nature, human manners, and human frailties."—Montgomery's Christian Poet.

See, also, TAYLOR, ANN, the first, No. 8.

After her death, appeared: 3. Memoirs, Correspondence, and Poetical Remains of the Late Jane Taylor; with Extracts from her Correspondence, by Isaac Taylor, 1825, 2 vols. 12mo; Bost., 1826, 12mb; Lowell, 1829, 12mo; 4th ed., Lon., 1848, fp. 8vo; Memoirs and Correspondence, abridged by Rev. "A work which cannot be too highly praised."—Lon. Quar. Rev., lxxiv. 22, (q. v.)

Her contributions to The Associate Minstrels, a vol. of poetry, were repub. in vol. ii. of No. 3. Portions of her writings have been pub. separately in book-form in America, and the following collections have also appeared there: I. The Writings of Jane Taylor, Bost., 1835, 3 vols. 12mo. II. The Pleasures of Taste, and other Stories selected from the Writings of Miss Jane Taylor; with a Sketch of her Life by Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, 12mo, pp. 283, see N. Amer. Rev., April, 1840, 506; new ed., N. York, 1847, 18mo. A notice of Miss Taylor will also be found in Mrs. Elwood's Literary Ladies of England, ii. 262-75. Mr. remarks that the poetic reputation of Jane Taylor rests "on her 'Squire's Pew,' a lyric of exquisite originality and beauty," (Sketches of the Poet. Lit., &c., Lect. VI.): a eulogy which we heartily endorse.

Taylor, Mrs. Janet, "the Mrs. Somerville of the marine world," is well known as the teacher of the Nautical and Mathematical Academy at the east end of London, and as the author of the following valuable works. 1. Luni-solar and Horary Tables, with their Application in Nautical Astronomy, Lon., 1833, 8vo; last ed., 1851, 8vo. 2. Lunar Tables, 1834, 8vo; 2d ed., (1835,) 8vo. 3. Epitome of Navigation and Nautical Astronomy; with Improved Lunar Tables, new ed., 1851, 8vo. 4. Diurnal Register for Barometer, Sympiesometer, Thermometer, and Hygrometer, 2d ed., 1844, ob. 8vo. 5. Planisphere of the Fixed Stars, 1846, 4to. 6. Hand-Book to the Local Marine Board Examinations. 7. Guide to the Use of Maury's Charts: see MAURY, MATTHEW FONTAINE, LL.D. In consequence of his illness, completed and prefaced by his brother, Isaac Taylor.

Taylor, Jeremy, D.D., a descendant of Rowland Taylor, LL.D., the eminent Reformer and martyr, (see FOXE'S ACTS AND MONUMENTS), was b. 1613, at Cambridge, where his father was a barber; entered a sizar of Caius College, Cambridge, 1626, and became Chaplain to Archbishop Laud and to Charles I.; Fellow of All Souls' College, Oxford, 1636; Rector of Uppingham, Rutlandshire, 1638; sequestered by the Parliament, 1642, and after the defeat of the royalists suffered frequent but short imprisonments; during the first years of the Protectorate kept a school in Wales, (in conjunction with William Nicholson, afterwards Bishop of Gloucester, and William Wyatt, afterwards Prebendary of Lincoln,) and officiated as chaplain to the Earl of Carberry, at Golden Grove, Carmarthenshire; in 1658 settled in Ireland, and exercised his ministry alternately at Lisburn and Portmore: returned to London in the spring of 1660, and signed the loyal Declaration of the Nobility and Gentry, dated April 24,—thirty-five days before the Restoration; was consecrated Bishop of Down and Connor, January, 1661; made a member of the Irish Privy Council in February, intrusted with the diocese of Dromore in March, and in the same year was elected Vice-Chancellor of the University of Dublin; d. at Lisburn, August 13, 1667, and was interred in the choir of the cathedral at Dromore. By his first wife, Phoebe Langsdale, he had four sons, all of whom he survived; by his second wife, Joanna Bridges, a natural daughter of his royal patron and friend Charles I., (when Prince of Wales,) and mistress of an estate at Carmarthen, he had three daughters, all of whom survived him: 1, Phoebe, d. single; 2, Joanna, married Edward Harrison, M.P. for Lisburn; 3, Mary, married Dr. Francis Marsh, afterwards Archbishop of Dublin.

Bishop Taylor's funeral sermon was preached by his chaplain, Doctor George Rust, his episcopal successor in the see of Dromore; and a more florid eulogy has seldom been pronounced. We quote a few sentences:

"He was none of God's ordinary works, but his Endowments were so many and so great, as really made him a Miracle. Nature had befriended him much in his Constitution; for he was a person of a most sweet and obliging humour, of great candour and ingenuity; and there was so much of salt, and fineness of wit, and prettiness of address, in his familiar discourses, as made his conversation have all the pleasantness of a comedy, and all the usefulness of a sermon. . . . To these advantages of nature, and excellency of his spirit, he added an indefatigable industry, and God gave a plentiful benediction; for there were very few kinds of learning but he was a myestes and a great master in them. He was a rare Humanist, and hugely versed in all the polite parts of Learning, and thoroughly concocted all the ancient Moralists, Greek and Roman Poets and Orators, and was not unacquainted with the refined wits of the later ages, whether French or Italian. . . . This great Prelate had the good humour of a Gentleman, the eloquence of an Orator, the fancy of a Poet, the acuteness of a Schoolman, the profoundness of a Philosopher, the wisdom of a Chancellor, the sagacity of a Prophet, the reason of an Angel, and the piety of a Saint. He had devotion enough for a Cloister, learning enough for an University, and wit enough for a College of Virtuosi. And had his parts and endowments been parcelled out among his poor Clergy that he left behind him, it would perhaps have made one of the best dioceses in the world."

"He was esteemed," says Wood, "by the generality of persons a complete artist, accurate logician, exquisite, quick, and acute in his reasonings, a person of great fluency in his language and of prodigious readiness in his learning. A noted Presbyterian [Hen. Jeanes, in his Epist. to the Reader before Certain Letters between him and Jer. Taylor, 1660, fol.] also (his antagonist) doth ingeniously confess that Dr. Taylor is a man of admirable wit, great parts, hath a quick and elegant pen, is of abilities in critical learning, and of profound skill in antiquity."—Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., iii. 784, q. v. (and vide Index) for an account of Taylor and his writings.

We proceed to the enumeration of his principal and several of his minor works, with the dates of the first and some of the early editions and of a number of recent editions. 1. The Sacred Order and Offices of Episcopacy, by Divine Institution, Apostolically Tradition and Catholic Practice, Oxon., 1642, 4to; Lon., 1647, 4to; with Clerus Domini, N. York, 1844, 16mo. Lowndes (Brit. Lib., 383) mentions an ed. Oxon., 1638: which we doubt. It was written by command of Charles I.

2. Discourse concerning Prayer ex tempore; or, by Pretence of the Spirit, in Justification of Authorized and Set Forms of Liturgy, Lon., 1646, 4to: anon.; 1647, 4to: anon.; 1649, 4to: with his name. Bishop Heber classes this among the best of his Polemical Discourses.

3. New and Easy Institution of Grammar, 1647, 4to. In this he was assisted by William Wyatt, to whom the book has been ascribed.

4. Discourse of the Liberty of Prophesying, shewing the Unreasonableness of Prescribing to Other Men's Faith, and the Iniquity of Persecuting Different Opinions, 1647, 4to; 1650, 4to. Many edits. With an Introduct. Essay by Rev. R. Cattermole, 1834, 12mo. See RUTHERFORD, SAMUEL, No. 9, (an answer to this); STILLINGFLEET, EDWARD, No. 1.

"The most curious, and perhaps the ablest, of all his compositions. His admirable 'Liberty of Prophesying' was composed, as he tells Lord Hatton, under a host of grievous disadvantages: in adversity and want; without books or leisure; and with no other resources than those which were supplied by a long familiarity with the sacred volume, and a powerful mind imbued with all the learning of past ages."—BISHOP HEBER: Life of Taylor.

"The argument of this important book rests on one leading maxim, derived from the Arminian divines, as it was in them from Erasmus and Acontius, that the fundamental truths of Christianity are comprised in narrow compass, not beyond the Apostles' Creed in its literal meaning; that all the rest is matter of disputation, and too uncertain, for the most part, to warrant our condemning those who differ from us, as if their error must be criminal."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, ii. 344-54. See, also, 19.

"To the principles of Bishop Taylor, first, perhaps, displayed in this admirable work, may be traced the still more clear and irrefragable reasonings of Locke, and finally the Toleration Act itself."—Lon. Quar. Rev. See, also, Edin. Rev., lxxx. 319, n., (by Henry Rogers.)

5. The Great Exemplar of Sanctity and Holy Life, according to the Christian Institution, described in the Life and Death of Jesus Christ, &c., 1649, 4to; 1653, fol.; 1657, fol.; 1667, fol.; with Cave's (see CAVE, WILLIAM, D.D.) Antiquitates Apostolicæ: 1675, fol.; 1678, fol.; 1684, fol., (some 1 p.); 1694, fol.; 1703, fol.; 1742, fol. Later edits.: 1811, 2 vols. 8vo; by Rev. R. Philip, 1835, 4to; 1842, 3 vols. fp. 8vo, (Pickering;) 1849, 3 vols. fp. 8vo, (Pickering;) 1849, p. 8vo, (Pickering;) by Rev. C. P. Eden, 1847, 8vo; 1850, 8vo; by Buckley, 1851, fp. 8vo; Phila., 1832, 12mo; N. York, 2 vols. 12mo; abridged by Rev. W. Darnell, Lon., 1818, 8vo, with Antiquitates Apostolicæ, by Philip, 4to.

"This splendid work luxuriates in a richness of imagery, and a grand eloquence of expression, which breathe in every sentence the vital and essential spirit of poetry. . . . I am acquainted with no work of Bishop Taylor's (I may say of any author) in which more practical wisdom may be found, a greater knowledge of the human heart, and a more touching application."—BISHOP HEBER: Life of Taylor. Later edits.: by Rev. J. R. Pitman, (from Heber's ed. of Taylor's Works,) Lon., 1828, 8vo; 1847, fp. 8vo, (Pickering;) 1850, fp. 8vo, (Pickering;) 1852, fp. 8vo, (Pickering;) 1857, 12mo, (Parker;) 1857, 12mo, (Bell;) 1869, 16mo, (Rivingtons;) Phila., 1869, 18mo; with No. 6: 1668, 12mo; 1674, 2 vols.; 1703, 8vo; 1710, 2 vols. 8vo; 1727, 8vo; 1739, 8vo. Later edits.: 1828, 8vo; by Bishop Heber, 1828, 2 vols. 8vo; by Rev. W. H. Hale, 1838, fp. 8vo; 1845, fp. 8vo; 1840, 2 vols. fp. 8vo, (Pickering;) 1840, 12mo, (Pickering;) 1847, 2 vols. 8vo, (Pickering,—antique type;) 1850, 2 vols. fp. 8vo, (Pickering;) 1852, 2 vols. fp. 8vo, (Pickering;) by Rev. G. Croly, 2 vols. fp. 8vo; 1851, 12mo; by Rev. C. P. Eden, 1856, 8vo; 1857, 12mo, (Bell;) 1857, 2 vols. 8vo, (Bell;) 1859, 12mo, (Bell;) 1869, 16mo, (Rivingtons;) N. York, 12mo. Rev., iii. 126, by Dr. Gardiner, s. 19, by T. Parsons;) Lon., 1817, 3 vols. 8vo; Sermons for all the Sundays in the Year, with XII. Sermons on Various Subjects, by Bishop Heber, 1828, 2 vols. 8vo; Edin., 1839, 2 Pts. r. 8vo; by Rev. C. P. Eden, Lon., 1850, 8vo; 1855, 8vo; Sermons, Complete, N. York, 1849, 8vo; Phila., 8vo; Whole Sermons, and the Rule and Exercises of Holy Living and Dying; with a Biog. Memoir, Lon., 1840, r. 8vo; XV. of his Sermons, ed. by Rev. Daniel Lysons, 1818, 8vo; Select Sermons of Bishop Taylor, with an Introd. Essay by Rev. R. Cattermole, 1834, 12mo, (vol. vii. of the Sacred Classics.)

"His excellent discourses, which are enough of themselves to furnish a library, and will be famous to all succeeding generations for the exactness of wit, profoundness of judgment, richness of fancy, clearness of expression, copiousness of invention, and general usefulness to all the purposes of a Christian."—WOOD: Athen. Oxon., Bliss's ed., iii. 783.

"As essays for the closet, and as intended for those into whose hands they usually fall, few compositions can be named so eminently distinguished by fancy, by judgment, by learning, and by powers of reasoning; few, where the mind is so irresistibly allured; or where so much luxuriance of imagination, or so much mellowness of style, are made the vehicles of divinity so sound, and holiness so practical."—BISHOP HEBER: Life of Taylor.

"The sermons of Jeremy Taylor are . . . far, indeed, above any that had preceded them in the English Church. An imagination essentially poetical, and sparing none of the decorations which, by critical rules, are deemed almost peculiar to verse; a warm tone of piety, sweetness, and charity; an accumulation of circumstantial accessories whenever he reasons, or persuades, or describes; an erudition pouring itself forth in quotation till his sermons become in some places almost a garland of flowers from all other writers, and especially from those of classical antiquity, never before so redundantly scattered from the pulpit, distinguish Taylor from his contemporaries by their degree, as they do from most of his successors by their kind. His sermons on the Marriage Ring, on the House of Feasting, on the Apples of Sodom, may be named without disparagement to others, which perhaps ought to stand in equal place. But they are not without considerable faults, some of which have just been hinted. The eloquence of Taylor is great, but it is not eloquence of the highest class; it is far too Asiatic, too much in the style of the declaimers of the fourth century, by the study of whom he had probably vitiated his taste; his learning is ill placed, and his arguments often as much so; not to mention that he has the common defect of alleging nugatory proofs; his vehemence loses its effect by the circuitry of his pleonastic language; his sentences are of endless length, and hence not only altogether unmusical, but not always reducible to grammar. But he is still the greatest ornament of the English pulpit up to the middle of the seventeenth century; and we have no reason to believe, or rather much reason to disbelieve, that he had any competitor in other languages."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, i. 359-60.

11. Unum Necessarium; or, The Doctrine and Practice of Repentance, Lon., 1655, 8vo. Abridged by Rev. W. H. Hale, 1838, 8vo.

12. Collection of Polemical and Moral Discourses, 1657, fol.; 3d ed., 1674, fol.

"English prose was in his time in a progressive state. It had been advanced very far by the genius of Sidney and the wisdom of Hooker; but the pedantry of the reign of James had done much to eclipse its lustre. In Taylor it broke out from its obscurity with energy and brightness. His Polemical Discourses exhibit a specimen of English composition superior to any that had gone before."—BISHOP RUST: Funeral Sermon on Jeremy Taylor.

"From these Polemical Discourses the theological student must derive the soundest instruction and most important advantages."—BELOZ.

13. Discourse of the Nature, Offices, and Measures of Friendship, with Rules of Conducting it: Written in answer to a Letter from the most ingenious and virtuous M. K. P., [Mrs. Katherine Philips, q. v.], by J. T., D.D., 1657, 12mo; 2d ed., with a second title-page, viz.: To which is added, Two Letters written to Persons newly changed in their Religion, &c., by J. T., D.D., 1657, 12mo, pp. 176; 1662, 12mo; 1678. Of the Discourse of Friendship, Bishop Heber observes,

"It may, without impropriety, be considered as the earliest of his casuistic writings." He commends the lady for having "suggested such a theme to Taylor, inasmuch as it was calculated, more than most others, to elicit the fires of his peculiar eloquence; and accordingly he has produced a splendid and powerful essay."—Life of Taylor.

14. Collection of Offices or Forms of Prayer in Cases Ordinary and Extraordinary, 1658, 8vo; anon.; 1690, 8vo. 15. Ductor Dubitantium; or, The Rule of Conscience in all her General Measures, 1660, 2 vols. in 1, fol.; 2d ed., 1671, fol.; 3d ed., 1676, fol., some 1 p.; 1696, fol.; new ed., 8vo, (Longman;) Abridged by Richard Barcroft, 1725, 2 vols. fol.

"Of this largest and most laborious of Bishop Taylor's works it has been said, without exaggeration, that it is the production of retentive memory and laborious research, of learning various and profound, and of reasoning close and dispassionate."—BISHOP HEBER: Life of Taylor.

"The most extensive and learned work on casuistry which has appeared in the English language. . . . With many of Taylor's excellences, his vast fertility, and his frequent sententiousness, the Ductor Dubitantium exhibits his characteristic defects; the waste of quotations is even greater than in his other writings, and his own exuberance of mind degenerates into an intolerable prolixity. His solution of moral difficulties is often unsatisfactory; after an accumulation of arguments and authorities, we have the disappointment to perceive that the knot is neither untied nor uncut; there seems a want of close investigation of principles, a frequent confusion and obscurity, which Taylor's two chief faults, excessive display of erudition and redundancy of language, conspire to produce. Puley is no doubt often superficial, and sometimes mistaken; yet in clearness, in conciseness, in freedom from impertinent reference to authority, he is far superior to Taylor."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, iii. 301. See, also, 400, 409.

"He has handled his subject with more than ordinary powers of argumentation and casuistical reasoning; but his habits of thinking had too much of the imaginative and excursive cast to fit him thoroughly for that severe method of analysis which this particular train of investigation demands."—T. S. HUGHES, D.D.

"A brilliancy of imagination appears in all his writings; but his 'Ductor Dubitantium' is a signal proof of his judgment."—GRANGER: Biog. Hist. of Eng., 5th ed., 1824, v. 22.

16. The Worthy Communicant, 1660, 8vo; 1667, 8vo; 1671, 8vo; 1674, 8vo; 1676, 8vo; 1683, 8vo; 1686, 8vo. Later edita: 8vo, (Longman;) 1853, 8vo, (Pickering.)

"The last in date, and one of the best and most useful, of his devotional works, is his 'Worthy Communicant,' which is indeed, as its subject required, not only devotional, but practical. This, with the Holy Living and Dying, may be said to offer a complete summary of the duties, and specimen of the devotions, of a Christian."—BISHOP HEBER: Life of Taylor.

But of this "Homer of Divines," (William Thompson: Granger's Biog. Hist., v. 21, n.) this "Shakspeare of the Church," (Hannah More, &c.) this "Spenser of English Theological Literature," we must needs quote some more opinions of eminent authorities. Of the continued popularity of his works after his decease, a distinguished author, born less than four years after Taylor was gathered to his fathers, thus writes:

"We see the Reverend Doctor's Treatises standing, as it were, in the front of this order of authors, and as the foremost of those Good Books used by the politest and most refined Devotees of either sex. They maintain the principal place in the study of almost every elegant and high Divine. They stand in folios and other volumes, adorned with variety of pictures, gildings, and other decorations, on the advanced shelves in glass cupboards of the lady's closets. They are in use at all seasons, and for all places; as well for Church Service as Closet Preparation; and, in short, may vie with any devotional books in British Christendom."—Earl of Shaftesbury's Characteristics, iii. 327.

One of the most zealous of Roman Catholics and most excellent of men characterizes him as

"the highly gifted and learned Jeremy Taylor, than whom the whole Protestant church boasts no fairer name."—CHARLES BUTLER.

Some of his Protestant commentators are not disposed to deal in unqualified commendation of the tendency of portions of his works:

"Bishop Taylor is a writer of the first-rate powers, with a fine imagination, and much devotion, holiness, and humility. Yet he is too ascetic, and has too little of the good tidings of the gospel. . . . He fell into something of Pelagian errors, and, like Warburton, did not consider the immortality of the soul revealed to the Patriarchs. It is also to be regretted that prayers for the dead have received countenance from some passages in his writings. . . . A fine, rich imagination, with great devotion, but a tone of divinity below that of the Reformers, and in some material points erroneous."—REV. E. BICKERSTETH: Christian Student, 4th ed., 249, 245.

"In learning he was scarcely inferior to any theologian whatever; and in richness of imagination he is superior to all. On the subject of original sin, and of the justification of man before God, his sentiments differed from those of the established church of which he was a member; but on other points of Christian verity his views were generally correct. He is one of those few authors 'the dust of whose works is gold'; and as long as the English language is understood, his volumes will constitute some of its choicest treasures. Through the whole of his numerous writings the flame of genius and of devotion burns with unabated and unexampled strength."—DR. E. WILLIAMS: Christian Preacher, 5th ed., 363.

We continue our quotations:

"Taylor and Barrow are incomparably the greatest preachers and divines of their age. But my predilection is for Taylor. He has all the abundance and solidity of the other, with a ray of lightning of his own, which, if he did not derive it from Demosthenes and Tully, has at least as generous and noble an original. It is true they are both imperfect, or, rather, exuberant. But it is for such little preachers as he, the Preacher of Lincoln's Inn (himself) to hide their barrenness by the finicalness of culture."—Bishop Warburton to Hurd: Letters from a Late Eminent Prelate, Lett. I.

"Hooker is the object of our reverence, Barrow of our admiration, and Jeremy Taylor of our love. Few have equalled the latter in variety of learning, in fertility of imagination, in vigour of thinking, in rectitude of intention and holiness of life. His controversial writings, fraught as they are with guileless ardour, with peerless eloquence, and with the richest stores of knowledge, historical, classical, scholastic, and theological, may be considered as irrefragable proofs of his pure, affectionate, and dutiful attachment to the Reformed Church of England. . . . Often has my mind hung with fondness and admiration over the crowded, yet clear and luminous, galaxies of imagery diffused through the works of Bishop Taylor."—DR. PARR.

For other comparisons between Taylor, Barrow, and Hooker, see BARROW, ISAAC, D.D., (p. 132); HOOKER, RICHARD, (p. 880). Hazlitt (Lects. on the Dramat. Lit. of the Age of Elizabeth, Lect. VII.) draws a contrast, which the reader must not fail to peruse, between the styles of Jeremy Taylor and Sir Thomas Browne.

"When the name of Jeremy Taylor is no longer remembered with reverence," concludes Hazlitt, "genius will have become a mockery, and virtue an empty shade!"

"The crowded, yet clear and luminous, galaxies of imagery diffused through the works of Bishop Taylor," are mentioned in glowing terms by Dr. Parr. It must, however, be admitted that his warmth of imagination is sometimes more conspicuous than his sobriety of judgment. His style is distinguished by its vivacity, and is more fluent and unencumbered than that of his most eminent predecessors in English literature. His popularity continues unimpaired.—DR. DAVID IRVING: Life of Taylor, in Encyc. Brit., 7th ed., xxi., (1842), 128.

"Endowed with a mind of prodigious fertility, which a vast erudition rendered more luxuriant, he accumulates without selection whatever presents itself to his mind; his innumerable quotations, his multiplied reasonings, his prodigality of epithets and appositions, are poured along the interminable periods of his writings, with a frequency of repetition, sometimes of the same phrases, which leaves us to suspect that he revised but little what he had very rapidly composed. Certain it is that, in his different works, he does not quiesce adhere to himself; and it would be more advisable to lay this on the partial views that haste and impetuosity produce, than on a deliberate employment of what he knew to be insufficient reasoning. But I must acknowledge that Taylor's fairness does not seem his characteristic quality."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, li. 354, (q.v.) See, also, Index.

"From the little I have yet read, I am strongly inclined to think this said Jeremy is the most completely eloquent writer in our language. There is a most manly and graceful ease and freedom in his composition, while a strong intellect is working logically through every paragraph, while all manner of beautiful images fall in as by felicitous accident."—JOHN FOSTER: Life and Correspondence, ed. 1855, i. 339. See, also, Index.

"The most eloquent of divines! had I said of men, Cicero would forgive me, and Demosthenes not assent."—COLERIDGE.

"The writings of Plato and Bishop Taylor, and the Theoria Sacra of Burnet, furnish undeniable proofs that poetry of the highest kind may exist without metre, and even without the contradicting objects of a poem."—COLERIDGE: Biog. Lit., ch. xiv.

"Jeremy Taylor's 'Holy Dying,' he [Coleridge] affirmed, is a perfect poem, and in all its particulars, even the rhythm, may be compared with Young's 'Night Thoughts.'"—HENRY CRABB ROBINSON: Diary, ed. Bost., 1870, i. 200.

"We have no modern sermons in the English language that can be considered as very eloquent. . . . For eloquence we must ascend as high as the days of Barrow and Jeremy Taylor; and even there, while we are delighted with their fancy, we are in danger of being suffocated by a redundancy which abhors all discrimination,—which compares till it perplexes, and illustrates till it confounds."—REV. SYDNEY SMITH: Works, ed. 1854, i. 10: from Edin. Rev., Oct. 1802, 83.

"Nor are the boldness and the fancy, the endless variety and unexpected sallies, of Taylor, to be matched by other divines, any more than they are to be ventured upon by such as duly regard the severe taste which the solemnity of the occasion prescribes."—LORD BROUGHAM: Contrib. to Edin. Rev., 1856, i. 128.

The singularity of the opinion next to be quoted excites admiration at the boldness of the critic:

"With all his genius, learning, and industry, Jeremy Taylor never could be a poet, because he never went beyond himself,—beside himself, if you will. He has put the question beyond doubt; he tried verse; but his lines are like petrifications, glittering, and hard, and cold; formed by a slow but certain process in the laboratory of abstract thought; not, like flowers, springing spontaneously from a kindly soil, fresh and fragrant and blooming in open day. The erudite divine is always in his study. He never goes out to meditate in the field at eventide, as Isaac did."—JAMES MONTGOMERY: Lects. on Genl. Lit., Poet., &c., Lect. III.

Such a verdict ill agrees with this:

"Whether he describes the duties, or dangers, or hopes of man, or the mercy, power, and justice of the Most High; whether he exhorts or instructs his brethren, or offers up his supplications in their behalf to the common Father of all, his conceptions and his expressions belong to the loftiest and most sacred description of poetry, of which they only want—that they cannot be said to need—the name and the metrical arrangement."—BISHOP HEBER: Life of Taylor.

Or this:

"Some of the old English prose-writers (who were not poets) are the best, and, at the same time, the most poetical, in the favourable sense. Among these we may reckon some of the old divines, and Jeremy Taylor at the head of them. There is a flush like the dawn over his writings, the sweetness of the rose, the freshness of the morning dew. There is a softness in his style proceeding from the tenderness of his heart; but his head is firm and his hand is free. His materials are as finely wrought up as they are original and attractive in themselves, Milton's prose style savours too much of poetry, and, as I have already hinted, of an imitation of the Latin. Dryden's is perfectly unexceptionable, and a model, in simplicity, strength, and perspicuity, for the subjects he treated of."—HAZLITT: Table-Talk, Essay XXIV.: On the Prose Style of Poets.

Or this:

"We will venture to assert that there is in any one of the prose folios of Jeremy Taylor more fine fancy and original imagery,—more brilliant conceptions and glowing expressions,—more new figures, and more applications of old figures,—more, in short, of the body and soul of poetry, than in all the odes and the epics that have since been produced in Europe."—LORD JEFFREY: Contrib. to Edin. Rev., 1853, 377: from Edin. Rev., Aug. 1811, 278.

"Jeremy Taylor," exclaims the author of Ion, "stands altogether alone among churchmen. Who has ever manifested any portion of that exquisite intermixture of a yearning love with a heavenly fancy which enabled him to embody and render palpable the holy charities of his religion in the loveliest and most delicate images? Who has ever so encrusted his subjects with candied words; or has seemed, like him, to take away the sting of death with 'rich conceit'; or has, like him, half-persuaded his hearers to believe that they heard the voice of pitying angels?"—Talford's Miscell. Writings: from London Magazine.

To these enthusiastic admirers of Jeremy Taylor is to be added (on the authority of a letter to the author of this Dictionary) the name of a great master of our language, who has but recently "ceased from his labours."

"I should think any one would guess from his [De Quincey's] works what a great admiration he had for Shakespeare and Milton. I do not think that people would gather the same opinion as regards Jeremy Taylor; and yet I think he would have placed him beside those two great towers of strength."—Emily Jane De Quincey to S. Austin Allibone, Lasswade, Mor. 31, 1860.

"The Spenser Society having now completed their fac-simile reprint of the Works of John Taylor, comprised in the folio of 1630, the Council are desirous to supplement it by a republication of his other pieces which have only appeared in a separate form. Many works have been ascribed to him without sufficient grounds, and the continuing reprint will only include those which either bear his name or contain very strong internal evidence of having him as their author. As these, however, are very numerous, and some of them excessively rare, I venture to hope that the possessors of copies will aid the undertaking in which the Council are engaged, and will allow the use of them for the purpose of transcription, in order to make the collection as complete as possible. Every care will be taken of any volumes which may be intrusted to me for that purpose. I shall also be obliged by any additions which your correspondents may point out to the list of John Taylor's works given by Mr. Hazlitt in his Hand-Book, which appears to be the most complete and correct one yet published, but which is, as must naturally be supposed, capable of enlargement."—JAS. Taylor, John, son of the preceding, (q. v.) and his successor as Oculist to Geo. III.

Taylor, John, of York, England. Account of his Labours, Exercises, Travels, &c., Lon., 1710, 12mo.

Taylor, John, LL.D., b. about 1703, at Shrewsbury, where his father was a barber chirurgion, was educated at, and in 1730 became Fellow of, St. John's College, Cambridge; Librarian to the University, 1732; Registrar, 1734; Advocate in Doctors' Commons, 1741; LL.D., 1742; Chancellor of Lincoln, 1744, and some years later took holy orders: Rector of Lawford, Essex, 1751; Archdeacon of Buckingham, 1753; Canon Residentiary of St. Paul's, 1757; d. 1766. 1. Music Speech, July 6, 1730, Lon., 1730, 8vo. See No. 2. 2. Oratio, Jan. 30, 1730, 1730. This and No. 1 were repub. by John Nichols in Two Music Speeches at Cambridge, &c., by Roger Long, M.A., and John Taylor, M.A., with Dr. Taylor's Latin Speech at St. Mary's, Jan. 30, 1730; several of his Juvenile Poems; some minor Essays in Prose; and Specimens of his Epistolary Correspondence; to which are added Memoirs of Dr. Taylor and Dr. Long, 1819, 8vo. See Lon. Gent. Mag., 1825, i. 371, (by Dr. Parr.) 3. Lysiae Orationes et Fragmenta, Gr. et Lat. ex Recens. et cum Notis Joan. Taylor, auctorit. Jer. Marklandi Conjectura, 1739, demy 4to, 300 copies; l. p., r. 4to, 75 copies; best paper, thick writing, royal, 25 copies: Drury, 2783, £10 10s.

"This is an incomparable edition, and hardly exceeded by any which this country can boast of."—DIBDIN.

"I read the sixteenth volume of the Bibliothèque Raisonnée. It contains the Oration of Lysias, by Doctor Taylor; a good and beautiful edition of a languid orator."—GIBBON: Miscell. Works, ed. 1837, 500. See his D. and F., ch. xlv., n.

Partially repub. in Usum Studiosæ Juvēntutis, Camb., 1740, 8vo. This excellent edition should accompany Taylor's Demosthenes, infra. To the ed. of 1739, supra, add Lysias, Opera, Gr. et Lat. castigavit, Taylori et Marklandi Annotationibus suas adjectit, editionem curavit Reiske, Lips., 1772, 2 vols. 8vo. 4. Commentarius ad Legem Demetrialem de Inope Debitoris in partes dissecando, &c., Cantab., 1742, 4to. As Bynkershoek argues that the creditors divided not the body, but the price, of the insolvent debtor, Taylor labours to prove that it was the goods only which were thus apportioned. But in opposition to these, see Quintilian; Cæcilius; Favonius; Tertullian; Aulus Gellius, (Noct. Attic., xxi.) Gibbon's D. and F., ch. xlv.

5. Marmor Sandvicense, cum Commentario et Notis, 1743, 4to. Brought from Athens by Lord Sandwich in 1739. 6. Orationes duæ, una Demosthenis contra Midiam, altera Lysurgæ contra Leocratem, Græce et Latine, 1743, 8vo. With notes and emendations. Published as a specimen of the following work, intended to be in 5 volumes, but vols. iii. and ii. only of which he lived to publish: Demosthenis, Æschinis, Dinarchi, et Demadæ Orationes: Græce et Latine, cum notis edidit J. Taylor: vol. iii., (includes ten orations of Demosthenes,) 1748, 4to, l. p., r. 4to; vol. ii., (containing the controversial orations of Demosthenes and Æschines, together with the epistles ascribed to the latter,) 1757, 4to; l. p., r. 4to; again, 1774, 4to; l. p., r. 4to. As supplementary to these two vols., (MacCarthy's copy on large paper was sold for 500 francs,) should be procured: Demosthenes et Æschines, Gr. et Lat., edidit Auger, vol. i., (all pub.,) Paris, 1790, r. 4to. The booksellers printed a new title-page for Taylor's vol. iii., making it vol. i., and selling vols. iii. and ii. as vols. i. and ii.

"Taylor's edition is founded on that of Wolff, the whole of whose notes, together with those of Markland, are inserted in it. In the notes of the editor, which are written in very pure Latin, the student will find a valuable illustration of the Athenian law and the antiquities of Greece: he has displayed a great deal of sound judgment and critical sagacity in this laborious and difficult undertaking."—Moss's Classical Manual.

See, also, Dibdin's Introduct. to the Classics.

Reiske does not seem to have appreciated Taylor's "very pure Latin."

"Dictio Taylori Latina haud placeat: obscura, affectata, putida est. Sed paucos novi Anglos, qui Latine scribere didicerunt. Latine linguae neglectus illi genti communis est. Et tamen Taylor, si ad alios Anglos spectetur, adhuc bene scribit. Melius si scisset Latine, non vituperasset Wolfium."

See, also, Blackw. Mag., xxix. 776, (by De Quincey.)

"Dr. Parr considered his Latin style to be sometimes incorrect, as he introduced Anglicisms, and sometimes a violation of the Latin idioms. He particularly (said the doctor) used to blunder about 'ut.' So did Toup and other illustrious scholars."—Lon. Gent. Mag., 1837, i. 463, (q. v.)

After Taylor's death his papers relating to the Orators were by his friend Dr. Askew transmitted to Reiske, then occupied with his edition of the Oratores Græci, Lips., 1770-73, 12 vols. 8vo, (q. v. for Taylor's notes.)

"Reiske appears to have made a too indiscriminate use of the materials thus supplied. The reputation of his predecessor he treats with little tenderness or delicacy. It is, however, admitted by more impartial judges that Taylor possessed many eminent qualifications for the difficult task which he had undertaken."—Dr. DAVID IRVING: Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xxi., (1842), 7.ⁿ

"In a critical point of view, the edition of Taylor is not of any great worth, and its chief value consists in its notes in illustration of the history of the orations and the Attic law."—Knights's Eng. Cyc., Biog., v., 1857, 936.

Taylor's preface and annotations are repub. in Oratores Attici, et quos sic vocant Sophista, curavit Dobson, Londini, 1828, 16 vols. 8vo, £9; l. p., imp. 8vo, £13 13s.; largest p., 25 copies, £16 16s.

"Taylor's Elements of the Civil Law he [John Pickering] completely mastered, making it a point to read entirely through the various recondite Greek quotations with which the work abounds."—JUDGE D. A. WHITE: Eulogy on John Pickering, 1847, 33.

See, also, Evans's Poth., Introd., 62; Warburton's Div. Leg. of Moses, iii., xxxv.; Hurd's Works, viii. 282; Tracts by Warburton and a Warburtonian, 223; Lett. from a Late Em. Prel., 225; Disraeli's Quarrels of Authors, (Warburton.)

Taylor took no notice of Warburton's and Hurd's insolence; but an anonymous pamphleteer arraigned the former in Impartial Remarks upon the Preface of Dr. Warburton, in which he has taken Uncommon Liberties with the Character of Dr. Taylor, 1758. Of little value. Taylor also published two papers on Roman Inscriptions in Phil. Trans., 1746, '63. For further notices of this learned critic, see Nichols's Lit. Anec., vii. 411, 687, (Index;) Nichols's Illust. Lit., viii. 106, (Index;) Hist. of Shrewsbury, 1810, 12mo; Chalmers's Biog. Dict., xxix. 179-87; Reiske, Prefatio ad Demosthenum, 42 et seq.

Taylor, John, M.D. Paper in Ed. Med. Ess., 1733.

Taylor, John, D.D., a learned Unitarian, b. near Lancaster, 1694; was for nearly twenty years minister and schoolmaster at Kirkstead, Lincolnshire; became pastor of a Presbyterian congregation at Norwich, 1733, and left this place to superintend an academy at Warrington, Lancashire, 1757; d. 1761. His principal works are the following: 1. The Scriptural Doctrine of Original Sin proposed to Free and Candid Examination, Lon., 1738, 8vo; 1740, 8vo, (Supp., 1741, 8vo; 1761, 8vo;) 3d ed., Belfast, 1746, 12mo; Lon., 1750, 12mo; 4th ed., so called, with Supp., &c., and, now added, A Reply to Wesley, 1767, 8vo. John Wesley's Answer to Taylor is entitled The Doctrine of Original Sin according to the Scripture, Reason, and Experience, 1757, 8vo. Jonathan Edwards's answer, (pub. after his death,) The Great Christian Doctrine of Original Sin Defended; containing a Reply to the Objections of Dr. John Taylor, 1758, 8vo; 1767, 8vo, (see, also, Edwards's Works), has been already referred to, (EDWARDS, JONATHAN, pp. 545, 546.) See, also, NILES, SAMUEL, No. 4. Taylor (ut supra) notices some other opponents. 2. A Paraphrase and Notes on the Epistle to the Romans; to which is prefixed a Key to the Apostolic Writings, &c., 1745, 4to; Dublin, 1746, 8vo; 2d and best ed., 1747, 4to; 3d ed., 1754, 4to; 4th ed., 1769, 4to. The Key is repub. in Bishop Watson's Collection of Tracts, who observes that it

"is greatly admired by the learned, as containing the best introduction to the Epistles, and the clearest account of the whole gospel scheme, which was ever written."

But see MENDHAM, REV. JOSEPH, No. 1. The Key, abridged, &c. by Thomas Howe, was pub. 1805, 12mo.

Of Taylor's Paraphrases and Notes, &c. it has been remarked,

"It would be wrong to deny that it contains marks both of learning and genius, and that several things in it are worthy of attention. But its complete perversion of scriptural doctrine on the most important topics, and the latitude of its principles of interpretation, render it a very dangerous book. Dr. Doddridge said very justly of it, that Dr. Taylor had broke his key in Paul's epistles."—Orme's Bibl. Bib.

An eminent prelate declares Taylor's system in this Key to be "nothing more than an artificial accommodation of Scripture phrases to notions utterly repugnant to Christian doctrine."—ARCHBISHOP MAGEE: Discourses on the Atonement, 181-188, 191-201, 322-333.

"The author that lately has been so famous for his corrupt doctrine. In his piece which he calls A Key to the Apostolic Writings, where he delivers his scheme of religion (which seems scarcely so agreeable to the Christian scheme as the doctrine of many of the wiser heathen.)" &c.—JONATHAN EDWARDS: Reply to Williams, Part 3, sect. iv.

"Contains several valuable philological illustrations of the Epistle to the Romans."—Horne's Bibl. Bib., 319.

See, also, LOCKE, JOHN, No. 6, (p. 1115.)

3. The Scripture Doctrine of Atonement Examined, 1750, 8vo; 1753, 8vo. 4. The Hebrew Concordance adapted to the English Bible; disposed after the Manner of Buxtorf, 1754-57, 2 vols. fol., £10.

"This is one of the most laborious and most useful works ever published for the advancement of Hebrew knowledge and the understanding of the Old Testament in its original language. It is, in fact, a Grammar, Lexicon, and Concordance, founded on the Concordance of Buxtorf, all whose errors Dr. Taylor has corrected. . . . The price of this Concordance varies from nine to twelve guineas, according to its condition."—Horne's Bibl. Bib., 1839, 366.

In sale-catalogues of the last few years it is generally priced between two and three guineas, (1863.)

"This is by far the most complete and the most useful work of the kind, especially to the English scholar."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., 1824, 113.

"May be considered as an abridgment of the united labours of Buxtorf and Calasio."—Williams's C. P., 5th ed., 281.

See, also, Bickersteth's C. S., 4th ed., 421.

But the Biblical student of the present day has greater treasures in the following works, by Dr. Julius Fuerst: I. Librorum Vet. Testamenti Concordantie Hebraicae atque Chaldaicae, &c., Lipsie, 1840, r. 4to; II. Bibliotheca Judaica, &c., 1849-63, 3 vols. r. 8vo.

5. A Scheme of Scripture Divinity, 1762, 8vo; 1763, 8vo. Posth.: pub. by his son. Repub. in Bishop Watson's Collec. of Tracts, vol. i. For a notice of Taylor and his other publications, see Chalmers's Biog. Dict., xxix. 177.

Taylor, John, LL.D., Rector of Bosworth, Leicestershire, Minister of St. Margaret's, Westminster, the school-fellow and for many years the intimate friend of Dr. Samuel Johnson, was appointed Preb. of Westminster, July 11, 1746, and d. Feb. 19, 1788. After his death the Rev. Mr. Hayes published Sermons on Different Subjects, left for publication by John Taylor, LL.D., &c., Lon., 1788-89, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1790, 2 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., 1795, 2 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., 1800, 2 vols. 8vo; 5th ed., 1812, 8vo. The 25th and last sermon was written by Dr. Johnson on the death of his wife; but we doubt not (we have read them all carefully) that Dr. Johnson is entitled to the credit of all of them:

"There is not a man in England who knows any thing of Dr. Johnson's peculiarities of style that will not instantly pronounce these sermons to be his."—Bishop Porteus to Dr. Beattie, 1788.

"There can be no doubt that the sermons were Johnson's."

—CROKER, 1847: Boswell's Johnson, ed. 1843, ch. ix. See, also, Index.

Boswell also believed them to be Johnson's.

"Indeed," continues Bishop Porteus, "they are (some of them, at least) in his very best manner; and Taylor was no more capable of writing them than of making an epic poem."

"They possess the manly strength, the nervous perspicuity, the pointed energy, of Johnson's own works."—Critical Rev.

Taylor, John, grandson of the Chevalier John Taylor, and son of John Taylor, also Oculist to George III., was in early life, in conjunction with his brother Jeremiah, Oculist to George III., and subsequently for many years connected with the theatres (as author of poetical sketches, prologues, epilogues, addresses, &c.) and the periodical press, (The Morning Herald, The Sun, &c.) and d. Cupid and Psyche; from the Latin of Apuleius, 1795, 8vo. 14. The Metaphysics of Aristotle; from the Greek, with copious Notes, Introd., and Dissert. on Nullities, 1801, r. 4to, £2 2s. A 2d ed., without the Introd. (pp. 55) and Dissert., forms vol. ix. of No. 24. 15. New edition of Hedericus's Greek Lexicon, with Additions, 1803, 4to. 16. Dissertation on Diverging Series, 4to. 17. History of the Restoration of the Platonic Theology, 4to. 18. The Dissertations of Maximus Tyrius; from the Greek, 1804, 2 vols. sm. 8vo. 19. Answer to Dr. Gillies's Supplement to his New Analysis of the Works of Aristotle, 1804, 8vo. 20. The Works of Plato—viz., his Fifty-Five Dialogues and Twelve Epistles, translated from the Greek; Nine of the Dialogues by the Late Floyer Sydenham, [q. v.] and the Remainder by Thomas Taylor; with Occasional Annotations on the Nine Dialogues translated by Sydenham, and copious Notes, by the Latter Translator; in which is given the Substance of nearly all the existing Greek MS. Commentaries on the Philosophy of Plato, and a considerable Portion of such as are already published, 1804, 5 vols. r. 4to. Printed at the expense of the Duke of Norfolk, who locked up nearly the whole edition in his house, where it remained until long after his decease. The publication price was £10 10s.; but the copies were sold off in 1848, and the price reduced to £5 5s.

"Thanks to the learning and industry of Messrs. Sydenham and Taylor, we have now the whole of the works of this wonderful philosopher brought within the reach of the English public, with a great variety of learned notes and instructive dissertations. The works of Plato may be properly considered the Scriptures of the ancient heathen world."—DR. ADAM CLARKE.

This edition is critically reviewed in the Edinburgh Review for April, 1809, 187–211; and, whilst Sydenham's scholarship is commended, Taylor is castigated without mercy:

"Mr. Taylor has done it shockingly. His language is stiff and awkward, and uncouth to a degree that has hardly any example even among those literal translations which have been provided for the use of schools. Nor is this the worst. Mr. Taylor has by no means given us a fair representation even of the meaning of Plato. He has not translated Plato; he has travestied him in the most cruel and abominable manner. He has not elucidated, but covered him over with impenetrable darkness. . . . Any competent scholar has but to open the book, and if he compares one page with the original the change is great that he will light upon more blunders than one. . . . We are quite satisfied that his general practice has been to interpret directly from the Latin translation, without so much as looking at the Greek; for the cases are so numerous in which we have found his translation an exact copy of the Latin, and in which an inspection of the Greek could hardly have failed to convince him he was wrong, that we have been unable to form any other conclusion. . . . We have already adduced abundant proof of Mr. Taylor's lamentable deficiency in every requisite for the performance of his arduous task."—Pp. 190, 201, 211.

To Plato's Works add, Plato and the other Companions of Socrates, by George Grote, 1865, 3 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1867. New editions of Grote's great History of Greece were published in 1863, 8 vols. 8vo, £5 12s., and 1870, 8 vols. 8vo, £2 8s.

21. The Pythagoric Sentences of Demophilus; printed with Mr. Wm. Bridgeman's Translations, 1804, 8vo, and in No. 9. 22. Miscellanies in Prose and Verse, 1805, cr. 8vo; 2d ed., 1820, 12mo. 23. Collectanea, 1806, cr. 8vo: 50 copies privately printed. 24. The Works of Aristotle, Translated and Illustrated with Notes, &c., 1806–12, 10 vols. r. 4to, or, with No. 14, (which should accompany the 2d ed. of the Metaphysics, vol. ix., infra,) 11 vols. r. 4to, (£57 5s.), viz.: vol. i., 1806; ii., iii., 1807; iv., 1808; v., 1809; vi., 1810; vii., viii., 1811; ix., 1812; x., Dissertation on the Philosophy of Aristotle, by Thomas Taylor, 1812. Of this translation, the only complete one in English, 50 sets were printed at the expense of William Meredith, (by whose aid several of Taylor's works were issued.) Of all the vols. save i. and iii., a few extra impressions were taken off: G. Watson Taylor's set brought £36 15s., and North's set (Pt. 1, No. 280) £30 9s. Copies are in the Bodleian Library and London Institution. Of vol. ix. 25 copies on l. p., fol., were taken off for presents.

The Rhetoric, Poetic, and Nicomachean Ethics (which compose vol. vii.) were also pub. 1818, 2 vols. 8vo. 25. The Elements of the True Arithmetic of Infinites, 1809, 4to. Also appended to vol. vi., No. 24. The Emperor Julian's Arguments, taken from Cyril, with Extracts from his other Works relative to the Christians; trans., 1809, 8vo. 27. The Six Books of Proclus on the Theology of Plato, &c.; from the Greek, 1816, 2 vols. r. 4to, £5 10s.; 250 copies. 28. Theoretic Arithmetic, in Three Books; containing the Substance of all that has been written on this Subject by Theon of Smyrna, Niomachus, Iamblichus, and Boëtius, &c.; from the Greek, 1816, 8vo. 29. Select Works of Plotinus, &c.; from the Greek, with an Introd., 1817, 8vo. 30. Life of Pythagoras by Iamblichus; from the Greek, 1818, 8vo. 31. Commentaries of Proclus on the Timæus of Plato; from the Greek, 1820, 2 vols. r. 4to, £5 10s. 32. Iamblichus on the Mysteries of the Egyptians, Chaldeans, and Assyrians; from the Greek, 1821, 8vo. 33. The Metamorphosis, or Golden Ass, and Philosophical Works of Apuleius; from the Latin, 1822, 8vo; l. p., r. 8vo. Some copies of the small-paper, and all the large-paper, copies have suppressed passages, generally placed at the end of the volume. 34. Political Pythagoric Fragments and Ethical Fragments of Hierocles; from the Greek, 1822, 8vo. 35. The Elements of a New Arithmetical Notation, and of a New Arithmetic of Infinites, &c., 1823, 8vo. 36. Select Works of Porphyry; from the Greek; with an Appendix by the Translator, 1823, 8vo; 50 on large thick paper. 37. The Fragments that remain of the Lost Writings of Proclus; from the Greek, 1825, p. 8vo: 250 copies. 38. Arguments of Celsus, Porphyry, and the Emperor Julian against the Christians; also Extracts from Diodorus Siculus, Josephus, and Tacitus, relating to the Jews, 1830, 12mo. Wm. Meredith, at whose expense this was printed, ordered all the copies to be burnt. 39. Ocellus Lucanus on the Nature of the Universe, Taurus on the Eternity of the World, Julius Firmicus Maternus of the Thema Mundi, &c., and Select Theorems on the Perpetuity of Time, by Proclus; from the Greek, 1831, p. 8vo. 40. Proclus on Providence and Evil; from the Greek, 1833, p. 8vo: 250 copies; again, 1841, p. 8vo. 41. Plotinus on Suicide, with Extracts from Olympiodorus, and two Books on truly Existing Being, &c., with Notes from Porphyry and Proclus, 1834, 8vo.

He published the Abridgment of Edwards's History of the West Indies, 1794, 3 vols. 8vo, (see EDWARDS, BRYAN, M.P.), and contributed many papers to the Classical Journal, Nos. 32, 33, 34, 42, 43, 45, 47, 48, 51, 52, 55, 56, 57, and 58, and the European and Monthly Magazines. Of these fugitive pieces a complete collection of the Chaldean Oracles was republished by Mr. Cory. These and Mr. Taylor's other persevering labours in his chosen department of research failed to kindle the first spark of gratitude in the bosom of the "Literary Idler" of Blackwood's Magazine, who thus irreverently assails the Philosopher of Walsworth:

"If I knew Valpy, I should certainly expostulate with him for allowing Taylor the Platonist to write in his journal. The man is an ass, in the first place; secondly, he knows nothing of the religion of which he is so great a fool as to profess himself a votary; and, thirdly, he knows less than nothing of the language about which he is continually writing."—June, 1825, 737: Note-Book of a Literary Idler, No. 1.

Mathias is as little disposed to be complimentary to our translator:

"Thomas Taylor, . . . the would-be restorer of unintelligible mysticism and superstitious pagan nonsense; in short, of all that Iamblichus revealed to Aësius."—Pursuits of Lit., Dial. III., No. 15.

De Quincey, having occasion to refer to William Taylor of Norwich, remarks,

"Taylor the Platonist, who was far more distinguished for absurdity, is now equally illustrious for obscurity."—Philosophical Writers, i., (Sir James Mackintosh.)

The author of the obituary notice of Taylor in the London Athenæum tells us that

"Mr. Taylor was not so much a Platonist as a Neo-Platonist; he followed less the pure doctrines of the Academy than their extension by the school of Alexandria and the Sophists. . . . The compound of all Eastern and Western metaphysics preached by the later Platonists, patronized by the emperor Julian, and advocated by the Sophists, as a rival to Christianity, is really the Platonic system developed by Mr. Taylor. His admiration of these writers was unbounded; and his enthusiasm was not at all abated by finding himself alone in his worship."—1835, 874.

W[elsh], Esq.; Blakey's Hist. of the Philos. of Mind, iv. 66; Knight's Eng. Cyc., Biog., v. (1857) 938. In an account of his second visit to Wordsworth, (in 1848,) Mr. Emerson remarks,

"We talked of English national character. I told him it was not creditable that no one in all the country knew any thing of Thomas Taylor the Platonist, whilst in every American library his translations are found. I said, 'If Plato's Republic were published in England, as a new book, to-day, do you think it would find any readers?' He confessed it would not: 'and yet,' he added, after a pause, with that complacency which never deserts a true-born Englishman, 'and yet we have embodied it all.'"—Emerson's Representative Men, Lon., 1850, 39. Rev.*, Mar. 1831, 151–180: repub. in Carlyle's Crit. and Miscell. Essays. For two years (1802–4) Taylor edited the Norwich Iris, the organ of his political party. It was not successful. See, also, SAYERS, FRANK, M.D., No. 6. After his death appeared: Memoir of the Life and Writings of the Late William Taylor, of Norwich; containing his Correspondence of many Years with the Late Robert Southey, Esq., and Original Letters from Sir Walter Scott, and other Eminent Literary Men; compiled and Edited by J. W. Robberds, F.G.S., 1843, (some 1844,) 2 vols. 8vo. Reviewed in Lon. Quar. Rev., Dec. 1843, 27; Eclec. Rev., 4th Ser., xv. 638; N. Brit. Rev., (same in Liv. Age, xxv. 97); Lon. Gent. Writers, i., (Sir James Mackintosh); Coleridge's Biog. Lit.; Diary, &c. of Henry Crabb Robinson, 1869, 3 vols. 8vo.

Taylor's written prose style is very peculiar, and not readily to be mistaken: one of his old friends remarks, "It is easy to trace, or rather it is impossible to overlook, him. . . . It is true that he does not speak [write] . . . any other language but the Taylorian; but I am so fond of his vigour and originality, that for his sake I have studied and learned his language. As the Hebrew is studied for one book, so is the Taylorian by me for one author."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH: Life, chaps. v. and viii.

Temple, Sir William, M.P., son of Sir John Temple, (supra), and grandson of the preceding, and one of the most eminent of English statesmen and diplomatists, was b. at Blackfriars, London, 1628, and educated at Emmanuel College, Cambridge; after performing many important political services,—the negotiation of the Triple Alliance, of the peace between England and Holland, the marriage between Lady Mary and the Prince of Orange, &c.,—retired to his seat at Moor Park, Surrey, (from which King William vainly endeavoured to tempt him,) in 1681, and d. there, Jan. 27, 1699.

For estimates of his political character we must refer to the authorities subjoined. Collective editions of his Works, (for separate publications, see his Life and Negotiations, with an Account of his Writings, 1714, '15, 8vo, by Abel Boyer, Bibl. Brit., and SWIFT, JONATHAN, D.D.,) with his Life prefixed, were pub. Lond., 1720, 2 vols. fol., some 1. p.; 1723, 2 vols. fol.; 1731, 2 vols. fol.; 1740, 2 vols. fol.; 1754, 4 vols. 8vo; 1757, 4 vols. 8vo; 1770, 4 vols. 8vo; 1814, 4 vols. 8vo. Of this last and best edition the contents are as follows:

Vol. i., Life; Essay on the Original and Nature of Government; Observations upon the United Provinces of the Netherlands; Letters by Temple and other Ministers, containing an Account of Transactions from 1665-72. Vol. ii., Sequel of the Author's Letters, to supply the loss of the first part of his Memoirs; Survey of the Empire, Sweden, Denmark, Spain, Holland, France, and Flanders, 1671; Letter to the Duke of Ormond, Oct. 1673; Memoirs of what passed from 1672 to '79; Memoirs from 1679 to his Retirement from Public Business. Vol. iii., Advancement of Trade in Ireland; Essay of Popular Discontents; Introduction to the History of England; Essays: Gardening; Cure of the Gout by Moxa; Health and Long Life; Heroic Virtue; Poetry; Ancient and Modern Learning; To the Countess of Essex on Excesses of Grief; Different Conditions of Life and Fortune; Heads of an Essay on Conversation; Poems and Translations. Vol. iv., Letters to the King, the Prince of Orange, &c.; Index. To these four volumes must be added (for they contain some heretofore unpublished Essays and Correspondence) Memoirs of the Life, Works, and Correspondence of Sir William Temple, by the Rt. Hon. Thomas Peregrine Courtenay, M.P., 1836, 2 vols. 8vo: reviewed by Lord Macaulay in Edin. Rev., Oct. 1838, 113-187: repub. in his Essays. Also reviewed in Eclec. Rev., 4th Ser., ii. 502, *Fras. SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE AS AN AUTHOR.

"Of all the considerable writers of this age, Sir William Temple is almost the only one that kept himself altogether unpolled by that inundation of vice and licentiousness which overwhelmed the nation. The style of this author, although extremely negligent, and even infected with foreign idioms, is agreeable and interesting. That mixture of vanity which appears in his works is rather a recommendation to them. By means of it we enter into acquaintance with the character of the author, full of honour and humanity, and fancy that we are engaged, not in the perusal of a book, but in conversation with a companion."—HUME: Hist. of Eng., ch. lxxi.

"Sir William Temple was the first writer who gave cadence to English prose. Before his time they were careless of arrangement, and did not mind whether a sentence ended with an important word or an insignificant word, or with what part of speech it was concluded."—DR. JOHNSON, in Boswell, ch. lxiii.

If the Doctor had said "one of the first," instead of "the first," he would have been correct.

"He [Johnson] once told me [Boswell] that he had formed his style upon that of Sir William Temple, and upon [Ephraim] Chambers's Proposal for his Dictionary."—Boswell's Johnson, ch. ix. See, also, Malone's note, ch. lxiii.

"Next to Dryden, the second place among the polite writers of the period from the Restoration to the end of the century has commonly been given to Sir William Temple. His Miscellanies, to which principally this praise belongs, are not recommended by more erudition than a retired statesman might acquire with no great expense of time, nor by much originality of reflection. But, if Temple has not profound knowledge, he turns all he possesses well to account; if his thoughts are not very striking, they are commonly just. He has less eloquence than Bolingbroke, but is also free from his restlessness and ostentation. Much also which now appears superficial in Temple's historical surveys was far less familiar in his age: he has the merit of a comprehensive and a candid mind. His style, to which we should particularly refer, will be found in comparison with his contemporaries highly polished, and sustained with more equability than they preserve, remote from anything either pedantic or humble. The periods are studiously rhythmical; yet they want the variety and peculiar charm that we admire in those of Dryden."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, iii. 558.

"Swift represents him as having brought English style to perfection. Hume, I think, mentions him; but of late he is not often spoken of as one of the reformers of our style: this, however, he certainly was. The structure of his style is perfectly modern; and I have not marked above half a dozen words that are become obsolete. He has, indeed, several Gallicisms, but they are chiefly in letters written in Flanders and Holland, when he was every day speaking French."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH: Life, ii. ch. iii.

"Milton's prose works are exceedingly stiff and pedantic, and Sir William's as remarkably easy and graceful; but he should have attended more to the minutie of names and dates."—DR. RICHARD FARMER: Letter on the Study of English History.

"Temple is a very sensible writer, and draws more from his own stock of observation and reflection than is usual with the writers of the present day. . . . Temple, whatever topic he treats, always entertains: he has an easy regular stream of good sense, which never overflows, or fails, or stagnates."—Green's Diary of a Lover of Lit., 1810, 4to, 1, 31.

"All is easy and flowing in him; he is exceedingly harmonious; smoothness, and what may be called amenity, are the distinguishing characters of his manner, relaxing sometimes, as such a manner naturally will do, into a prolix and remiss style. No writer whatever has stamped upon his style a more lively impression of his own character. . . . He may be classed as standing in the middle between a negligent simplicity and the highest degree of ornament which this character of style admits."—DR. BLAIR: Rhet. and Belles-Lett., Lect. XIX. See, also, Lect. X.

"Sir William Temple was the D'Ossat of England; but in the views and the style of his Observations, his Miscellaneous Works, and his Memoirs, he is far inferior to our diplomatist."—CHATEAUBRIAND: Sketches of Eng. Lit., ii. 196.

"He had gradually formed a style singularly lucid and melodious, superficially deformed, indeed, by Gallicisms and Hispanisms, picked up in travel or in negotiation, but at the bottom pure English, which generally flowed along with careless simplicity, but occasionally rose even into Ciceronian magnificence."—LORD MACAULAY: Edin. Rev., Oct. 1838, 145: Life and Writings of Sir William Temple: repub. in his Essays.

"It is an ordinary criticism that my Lord Shaftesbury and Sir William Temple are models of the genteel style in writing. We should prefer saying—of the lordly and the gentlemanly. Nothing can be more unlike than the inflated finical rhapsodies of Shaftesbury and the plain natural chit-chat of Temple. The man of rank is discernible in both writers; but in the one it is only insinuated gracefully; in the other it stands out offensively. The peer seems to have written with his coronet on and his earl's mantle before him; the commoner, in his elbow-chair and undress. What can be more pleasant than the way in which the retired statesman peeps out in his essays, penned by the latter in his delightful retreat at Shene? They scent of Nimeguen and the Hague. Scarce an authority is quoted under an ambassador."—CHARLES LAMB: The Genteel Style of Writing: Lamb's Works.

Of Sir William's unfortunate Essay upon Ancient and Modern Learning, already noticed by us, (BENTLEY, RICHARD, p. 170, supra), Lord Macaulay remarks that "It now seems strange that even the eminent public services, the deserved popularity, and the graceful style of Temple should have saved so silly a performance from universal contempt. Of the books which he most vehemently eulogized, his eulogies proved that he knew nothing. In fact, he could not read a line of the language in which they were written."—Life of Francis Atterbury, in Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., iv., (1864:) republished in his Essays.

Tennant, William, LL.D., a poet, and one of the most eminent of modern linguists, was b. in Anstruther-Easter, county of Fife, Scotland, May 15, 1784; entered the University of St. Andrew's, 1799, pursued his collegiate studies for two years, and subsequently became a clerk to his brother, a corn-factor, first at Glasgow, and afterwards at Anstruther-Easter; schoolmaster at Dunino, 1812-16, and at Lasswade, 1816-19; teacher of Oriental and Classical Languages at the Academy of Dollar, Clackmannanshire, 1819-34; Professor of Oriental Languages at St. Mary's College, St. Andrew's, 1834, (he also filled the Hebrew chair at Edinburgh College,) until his death, Oct. 15, 1848. 1. The Anster Concert, Cupar, 1811, pp. 12. This purports to be by W. Crookleg,—a name suggested by his lameness, which obliged him to use crutches all his life. It is in the Scottish dialect. 2. Anster Fair; a Poem, in Six Cantos, Anstruther, 1812: Anon. 2d ed., with other Poems, Edin., 1814, 8vo, pp. 255; Balt., 1815, 12mo; 4th ed., 1820, pp. 8vo; again, 1821, pp. 8vo; 1838, 12mo; 1849, r. 8vo, (Chambers's People's ed.) The first edition was neglected for a year, when A. F. Tytler (Lord Woodhouselee) was struck with its merits, and requested of the publisher the name of the author. The second edition was favourably reviewed by Lord Jeffrey in Edin. Rev., Nov. 1814, 174-182. Anster Fair is written in the ottava rima of the Italians, much neglected by English poets since Fairfax's translation of Jerusalem Delivered, in which it was introduced to English readers.

"William Tennant, in his very original poem of 'Anster Fair,' gave Frere and Byron more than a hint for 'Whistle-craft' and 'Beppo'; nor is it unjust to say that the imitators have not at all equalled the life, the naïveté, the ludicrous dashed with the solemn, and the witty with both, which characterize the poet of Dollar."—ALAN CUNNINGHAM: Biog. and Crit. Hist. of the Lit. of the Last Fifty Years.

Tennyson, Alfred, D.C.L., the greatest of living poets, (1870,) was b. 1810, at Somersby, Lincolnshire, of which parish the Rev. Dr. George Clayton Tennyson (a descendant of the ancient and noble family of D'Eyncourt, now represented by the poet's uncle, the Rt. Hon. Charles Tennyson D'Eyncourt, M.P.) was Rector. Dr. Tennyson's three eldest sons, Frederick, Charles, and Alfred, were all educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and pupils of the Rev. Dr. Whewell, afterwards Master, then one of the tutors, of that famous seat of learning, which has fitted so many disciples for eminence in scientific lore and literary research. In 1828 Frederick Tennyson took the medal for a Greek poem recited at the commencement of that year; in 1829 Alfred gained the Chancellor's medal for his English prize poem (consisting of about 250 lines) of Timbuctoo; also published in 1829; in 1827 Alfred and Charles had published, without their names, a small volume, entitled Poems by Two Brothers, (Simpkin, 12mo, 5s.; cr. 8vo, 7s.;) long liber rarissimus. Charles's portion of this collection was preferred by Coleridge to that of Alfred; and in his account of his second visit (in 1848) to Wordsworth, Mr. R. W. Emerson tells us,

"Tennyson he [Wordsworth] thinks a right poetic genius, though with some affectation. He had thought an elder brother of Tennyson at first the better poet, but must now reckon Alfred the true one."—English Traits, Lon., 1857, 166. See TENNYSON, CHARLES.

"I saw Tennyson in London several times. He is decidedly the first of our living poets, and I hope will give the world still better things. You will be pleased to hear that he expressed, in the strongest terms, his gratitude to my writings."—Wordsworth to Prof. Henry Reed, 1845.

Since this joint venture, Alfred (who succeeded Wordsworth as Poet-Laurate, Nov. 21, 1850, and received the degree of D.C.L. from Oxford in 1855) has given to the world the following volumes.

1. Poems, chiefly Lyrical, Lon., 1830, fp. 8vo.

"Mr. Tennyson has made some very touching and some very animating melodies; he is master of musical combinations; his songs set themselves, and generate their own tunes, as all songs do which are good for any thing."—Westm. Rev., xiv. 210.

"We are extremely pleased with Mr. Tennyson. . . . Some of his scattered thoughts are eminently beautiful."—Lon. Atlas, June 27, 1830.

The volume was commented on by Professor Wilson in Blackwood's Magazine, May, 1832, (xxxi.) 720-741, (repub. in Wilson's Works, vi. 109-152, 1856,) with both praise and censure. In the Noctes Ambrosianæ for the preceding February, Wilson remarks,

"He has a fine ear for melody, and harmony too—and rare and rich glimpses of imagination. He has genius. . . . I admire Alfred, and hope—nay, trust—that one day he will prove himself a poet. If he do not—then am I no prophet."—xxxi. 277. See, also, Feb. 1836, (xxxix.) 265.

2. Poems, 1832, (some 1833,) fp. 8vo, pp. 163. Consisting partly of reprints with alterations, partly of new pieces.

"Lately I have been reading some of Alfred Tennyson's second volume, and with profound admiration of his truly lyric and idyllic genius. There seems to me to have been more epic power in Keats, that fiery, beautiful meteor; but they are two most true and great poets."—JOHN STERLING: Lectures.

"He has lyrical ease and vigour, and is looked upon by sundry critics as the chief living hope of the Muse."—ALLAN CUNNINGHAM: Biog. and Crit. Hist., 1833.

Reviewed with great severity in Lon. Quar. Rev., xlix. 81-96, and with mingled praise and censure in Lon. Athen., 1832, 770, and Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1832, 772. 3. Poems, 1842, 2 vols. 12mo; 17th ed., 1865, fp. 8vo; Boston (Ticknor & Fields) edits.: 1842, 2 vols. 16mo; Blue and Gold, complete, 1856, 32mo; same, with Idylls of the King, Jan. 1861, 2 vols. 32mo; Cabinet, (uniform with Pickering's Aldine Brit. Poets,) Sept. 1862, 2 vols. 16mo. Tauchnitz of Leipzig publishes Tennyson's poems in 4 vols., in his Copyright Collection of British Authors.

"The first of these two volumes consists of republished poems, and may be regarded, we presume, as all that Mr. Tennyson wished to preserve of his former editions. He has sifted in most cases his earlier harvests, and kept the better grain. There are some additions of verses and stanzas here and there, many minute changes, and also beneficial shortenings and condensations. The second volume, however, is on the whole far advanced in merit beyond the first. There is more clearness, solidity, and certainty of mind visible in it throughout; especially some of the blank-verse poems—a style almost unattempted in the earlier series—have a quiet completeness and depth, a sweetness arising from the happy balance of thought, feeling, and expression, that ranks them among the riches of our recent literature."—Lon. Quar. Rev., Sept. 1842, (lxx.) 395.

"Powers are displayed in these volumes, adequate, if we do not deceive ourselves, to the production of a great work; at least, we should find it difficult to say which of the requisite powers is wanting. But they are displayed in fragments and snatches, having no connection, and therefore deriving no light or fresh interest the one from the other. By this their effective value is incalculably diminished."—Edin. Rev., April, 1843, (lxxvii.) 390.

"Two volumes of poems, partly old ones revised and partly new, which placed him at once at the head of contemporary poetry in England, and have kept him there ever since."—Edin. Rev., Oct. 1855, (cii.) art. viii.

4. The Princess: a Medley, Lon., 1847, fp. 8vo; Bost., 1848, 16mo; 13th ed., Lon., 1865, fp. 8vo.

"This piece, though full of meanings of abiding value, is ostensibly a brilliant serio-comic jeu d'esprit upon the noise about 'woman's rights,' which even now ceases to make itself heard anywhere but in the refuge of exploded European absurdities beyond the Atlantic. . . . Mr. Tennyson has proved himself to be possessed of artistic faculties which put it out of the question that he should himself be thoroughly satisfied with this performance."—Edin. Rev., Oct. 1855, (cii.) art. viii.

"The abundant grace and descriptive beauty which meet the superficial eye constitute but its external charm. Meeting his work with that attention which the labours of a true poet should always command, we soon discover that, while fantastic in its subject, it is eminently human in sentiment, and that the human gradually rises higher and higher into the moral."—Edin. Rev., Oct. 1849, (xc.) 398, (same in Eccl. Mag., xix. 66).

"The Princess is not a drama, nor is it a fairy-tale in verse, but a fantastic metrical romance. . . . The second title of this lively performance points out its principal object: it is a medley, and, we must think, a somewhat incongruous one. The fearless intermixture of the modes and phrases of all ages, past and present, is a resource better fitted for a brief jeu d'esprit than for a work of this compass; but that is not the worst. The main web of the tale is a gossamer fabric, and can ill sustain the heavy embroidery raised upon it: the low key at which it is pitched indisposes the mind for the higher strains to which the piece changes. . . . The faults of the poem are soon numbered and ticketed: it is more difficult to do justice to its beauties."—Lon. Quar. Rev., Dec. 1847, (lxxxii.) 439, 445, 451.

"However it grew, it is a charming melody; and that purposed anachronism which runs throughout, blending new and old, new theory and old romance, lends to it a perpetual piquancy."—Blackw. Mag., April, 1849, (lxv.) 463.

"Taken as a whole, we must pronounce it a beautiful poem, the production of a truly poetical mind, and showing the most indisputable marks of a high artistic power superintending the creation and arrangement and classification of the whole."—Lon. Gent. Mag., 1848, i. 131.

"Regarding 'The Princess,' it is no marvel that such a contrariety of opinion has been expressed by seemingly competent judges. Its beauties and faults are so inextricably interwoven, and the latter are so glaring and many,—nay, often apparently so wilful,—that, as a sincere admirer of the genius of Tennyson, I could almost wish the poem had remained unwritten. I admit the excellence of particular passages; but it has neither general harmony of design nor sustained merit of execution."—D. M. MORR: Sketches of the Poet. Lit., &c., 3d ed., 1856, 316.

5. In Memoriam, May, 1850, fp. 8vo; Bost., 1850, 16mo; 3d ed., Lon., Aug. 1850, fp. 8vo; 4th ed., Jan. 1851, fp. 8vo; 17th ed., 1865, fp. 8vo; on tinted paper, with a Biographical Sketch and vignette of A. H. Hallam, and a steel portrait of Tennyson, Bost., (Ticknor & Fields,—the only authorized publishers in America of Tennyson's works,) Nov. 1861, 8vo. See HALLAM, ARTHUR HENRY,—whose Remains, with the Memoir, pp. 363, privately printed in 1834, (100 copies,) and reprinted in 1853, were first published Lon., 1863, fp. 8vo, Bost., 1863, 16mo; see Lon. Reader, 1863, i. 31; Lon. Athen., 1859, i. 151; 1863, i. 85; Atlantic Mon., Dec. 1860; Arthur Henry Hallam, by John Brown, M.D., &c. Extracted from Horæ Subacivæ, Edin., 1862, fp. 8vo.

In Memoriam appeared without a name, (see Lon. Gent. Mag., 1850, ii. 59, Lon. Athen., 1850, 629;) nor was a name needed.

"Although in some few places this work wants that perfect polish which distinguishes the author's lesser poems, upon the whole it is not only the best specimen of poetical skill which Mr. Tennyson has produced, but it surpasses, in this respect, all poems of equal magnitude written during the past century."—Edin. Rev., Oct. 1855, (lxx.) art. viii.

The same periodical also asserts, in another place, that "In Memoriam is the most exquisite creation by any man of genius during the last forty years."

"'In Memoriam' comes more intimately home to English sympathies than 'Lycidas' or 'Adonais,' and may be pointed to, perhaps, as the one special monody to which beauty of form and feeling have given an universal currency."—Lon. Athen., 1863, i. 85.

Maud, and other Poems, Dec. 1855, fp. 8vo; Bost., 1855, 16mo; 7th ed., Lon., Dec. 1865, fp. 8vo.

"We have at last received Maud, and we have risen from its perusal dispirited and sorrowful. It is not a light thing nor a trivial annoyance to a sincere lover of literature to have it forced upon his conviction that the man who has unquestionably occupied for years the first place among the living British poets is losing ground with each successive effort."—Blackw. Mag., Sept. 1855, (78.) See, also, Sept. 1856, (lxxx.) Macaulay.

"We have in 'Maud' scarcely more than a residuum of Alfred Tennyson; the wide sweeping intellect, the mild philosophy, the healthy pathos, the wondrous melody, have almost all vanished, and left little more than a narrow scorch which piques itself on its scorn of narrowness, and a passion which clothes itself in exaggerated conceits."—Westm. Rev., Oct. 1856: (Contemp. Lit.)

"We now turn with diminished pleasure from 'In Memoriam' to Mr. Tennyson's recently published volume of 'Maud, and other Poems'; for the qualities we appreciate most highly in the former are precisely those which are most wanting in the latter."—Edin. Rev., Oct. 1855, (102.) art. viii.

"Even in the wildest rhapsodies of 'The Princess' Mr. Tennyson has never been so careless, visionary, and unreal as in this poetical treatment of a plain, popular, and literal theme. 'Maud' is an allegory of the War. . . . Little more is to be said in the way of criticism:—and that little we add with great reluctance. This volume is not worthy of its author."—*Lon. ILLUSTRATED EDITIONS OF TENNYSON'S WORKS.

I. Poems, May, 1857, (some 1858,) large 8vo, pp. 376, £1 11s. 6d., (Moxon:) red., 1859, to £1 1s., (Routledge.) With 55 illustrations on tinted paper, by W. Mulready, C. Stanfield, T. Crosswick, D. Macleise, J. E. Millais, J. C. Horsley, W. H. Hunt, and D. G. Rossetti.

"A beautiful and splendid book; worthy of the artists engaged, and worthy of the poet beloved by all artists."—Lon. Athen., 1857, 693.

See, also, Westm. Rev., Oct. 1857, (Belles-Lettres.)

"No reader, young or old, should come to the perusal of Tennyson with such illustrations on the page before him to trammel his fancy and to materialize his conceptions."—Lon. Lit. Gaz.

"The illustrated Tennyson," remarks another authority, "succeeded so little with public taste that 8000 copies were sold to Messrs. Routledge at less than one-third the publishing price."

"Two thousand pounds were paid to the author alone, and not less than sixteen hundred guineas were expended on the exquisite illustrations."—Routledge's Advert., Lon. Athen., 1859, i. 569.

II. The Princess, illustrated by Mrs. S. C. Lees, 1850, r. fol., £2 2s., (Dickinson,) 10 outline engravings on India paper, with borders in gold and colours; the poem printed in gold.

III. The Princess, Nov. 1859, r. 8vo, 16s.; cloth, £1 1s.; mor., £1 11s. 6d.; mor. by Hayday, (Moxon:) red., Nov. 1861, to 10s. 6d., cl., (Routledge.) With 26 illustrations on wood by Thomas Dalziel, Williams, and Green, from designs by D. Macleise, R.A., new ed., 1866, sm. 4to. See notices quoted in Lon. Athen., 1860, ii. 600.

IV. The Lady of Shalott, Reprinted and Illustrated by a Lady, 1852, fol., 10s., (Kent.)

V. Dora: a Poem, Illustrated by Mrs. Mildmay, 1856, fol., £1 5s., (Vernon.)

VI. The Miller's Daughter, 1857, sm. 4to, 16s.; mor., 24s., (Kent.) Illustrated with 17 steel engravings, drawn by A. L. Bond and engraved by Mote; with a Portrait of the Author, 4to.

"This collection of illustrative etchings is the production of an accomplished lady."—Lon. Art Journal.

VII. The May Queen; Illustrated with 30 drawings by E. V. B., (Hon. Mrs. Boyle,) Nov. 1861, sq., 7s. 6d.; cr. 8vo, 5s., (Low.)

VIII. The May Queen; Illuminated by Mrs. W. H. Hartley, 1861, cr. 4to, £1 1s., (Day & Son.)

IX. The Idylls of the King: Sixteen Illustrations, drawn and etched by Amy Butts, 1862, r. 4to, (Day & Son.)

Nor should we omit to include among the illustrations of Tennyson's poems the picture of The Sleeping Beauty, from The Day Dream, painted by Wight, of Boston, Dec. 1860, and the statuette of The Lotus Eater, by Miss Emma Stebbins, modelled at Rome, and exhibited at Boston, March, 1861. Woolmer's marble bust of the poet (see Lon. Critic, 1857) was purchased by the Fellows of Trinity College, Cambridge, and stands in the vestibule of their library. A portrait of Tennyson, from life, was issued separately in Lon., Nov. 1861.

We had designed to close this article with an array of critical opinions on Tennyson's characteristics as a poet from eminent authorities on both sides of the water, but we have already occupied as much space as we can well afford. A few lines, however, must find a place.

Two prominent American critics, both of whom recorded their verdicts (the first in 1844, and the last before 1849) prior to the appearance of In Memoriam, differed very greatly in their estimate of Tennyson's poetical genius:

"I am not sure that Tennyson is not the greatest of poets. The uncertainty attending the public conception of the term 'poet' alone prevents me from demonstrating that he is. Other bards produce effects which are, now and then, otherwise produced than by what we call poems; but Tennyson an effect which only a poem does. His alone are idiosyncratic poems."—EDGAR A. POE: LITERATI; Marginalia, cxxiv.

"The peculiarities of his style have attracted attention, and his writings have enough intrinsic merit, probably, to secure him a permanent place in the third or fourth rank of English contemporary poets."—DR. R. W. GRISWOLD: Poets and Poetry of England.

But Dr. Griswold lived long enough to write,

"Of the living poets of England, Tennyson at this time occupies the highest rank; and he is destined to a wide and high regard."

"He has opened a new vein in English poetry, and shown that real genius, even in the most advanced stages of society, can strike a fresh chord, and, departing from the hackneyed ways of imitation, charm the world by the conceptions of original thought. His imagination, wide and discursive as the dreams of fancy, wanders at will, not over the real so much as the ideal world. The grottoes of the sea, the caves of the mermaid, the realms of heaven, are alternately the scenes of his song. His versification, wild as the song of the elfin king, is broken and irregular, but often inexpressibly charming. Sometimes, however, this tendency leads him into conceit: in the endeavour to be original, he becomes fantastic. There is a freshness and originality, however, about his conceptions, which contrast strangely with the practical and interested views which influenced the age in which he lived, and contributed not a little to their deserved success. They were felt to be the more charming because they were so much at variance with the prevailing ideas around him, and reopened those fountains of romance which nature has planted in every generous bosom, but which are so often closed by the cares, the anxieties, and the rivalry of the world."—SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON: Hist. of Europe, 1815-1852, i. (1852) ch. v. See, also, Alison's Essays, Edin., 1850, iii. 521.

"Now, the particular power by which Mr. Tennyson surpasses all recent English poets is precisely that of sustained perfection of style. Others have equalled or excelled him in other respects, but we look in vain among his modern rivals for any who can compete with him in the power of saying beautifully the thing he has to say; and this, not only in single sentences and passages, but for page after page and poem after poem, without flagging and apparently without effort."—Edin. Rev., July, 1859.

"Tennyson is endowed precisely in points where Wordsworth wanted. There is no finer ear, nor more command of the keys of language. Colour like the dawn flows over the horizon from his pencil, in waves so rich that we do not miss the central form. Through all his refinements, too, he has reached the public—a certificate of good sense and general power, since he who aspires to be the English poet must be as large as London,—not in the same kind as London, but in his own kind. But he wants a subject, and climbs no mount of vision to bring its secrets to the people. He contents himself with describing the Englishman as he is, and proposes no better. There are all degrees in poetry, and we must be thankful for every beautiful talent. But it is only a first success when the ear is gained. The best office of the best poets has been to show how low and uninspired was their general style, and that only once or twice they have struck the high chord."—RALPH WALDO EMERSON: English Traits, Lon., 1857, 144-145.

"M. Tennyson excelle dans la peinture des sentiments tendres et délicats; sa sensibilité naturelle se traduit en beaux vers élégiaques, pleins, harmonieux; le caractère religieux et moral de sa poésie a beaucoup contribué à sa popularité. Avec plus d'imagination et de souci de la forme, il continué modestement l'école méditative des lakers. On l'a surnommé le plus classique des romantiques anglais."—Dict. Univ. des Contemporains, par G. Vapereau, Paris, 1858, 1649.

Like all great and many small poets, Tennyson has his host of imitators:

"The great model of most verse-writers in our time is the Laureate. We wrong many of them, however, to use the word 'model,' for it is incentive enough if they read him and admire his poetry. They sit down forthwith to do something in that style. His muse and his music are alike irresistible. . . . Shakespeare did not tyrannize over the Elizabethans half so much as Tennyson does over the young mind of the present. . . . The art of imitating Tennyson, then, is the fatal facility of our time. . . . No blame can be awarded to the singer for introducing so many mocking-birds. It is something to be grateful for, that his song is so pure, his influence so free from harm. It is something to rejoice over, that he has taken the place of Byron with our verse-writers. It is curious to notice how the imitations rise in the scale of excellence as the Laureate's own works ripen towards perfection."—Lon. Athen., 1861, ii. 241.

"Tennyson's diction and melody are in perfect harmony with his imaginative faculty. To describe his command of language by any ordinary terms expressive of fluency or force would be to convey an idea both inadequate and erroneous. It is not only that he knows every word in the language suited to express his every idea: he can select with the ease of magic the word that is of all others the best for his purpose. Nor is it that he can at once summon to his aid the best word the language affords: with an art which Shakespeare never scrupled to apply, though in our day it is apt to be counted mere Germanism and pronounced contrary to the genius of the language, he combines old words into new epithets; he daringly mingles old colours to bring out new tints that never were on sea or shore. His words gleam like pearls and opals, like rubies and emeralds. . . . Such a poet cannot soon be popular with the million; but as the last and most exquisite culture of educated minds, as the ultimate sublimation of thought and beauty, as the most refined expression of the most refined civilization that ever dawned upon the world, his works must continue to exercise a mighty influence upon the leading intellects of those nations which lead the world."—BAYNE: Essays in Criticism: First Series.

In the (London) Reader of Jan. 31, 1863, we read, "There is good news in the world of literature. Mr. Tennyson's new poems, 'Boadicea' and 'Enoch the Fisherman,' are complete. The latter is a dramatic subject, worked out in powerful and even, it is said, harrowing detail."

We are now enabled to supplement the above, as follows: 9. Enoch Arden, and other Poems, Lon., Moxon, 1864, fp. 8vo; last ed., Strahan, 1869, fp. 8vo. It was in 1865 translated into German, (said to be good,) and into French, (said to be bad;) and in 1867 Professor Selwyn published Enoch Arden, Poema Tennysonianum, Latine Redditum, 4to, Moxon. It was dramatized at the Boston Theatre, Jan. 30, 1865. See reviews of Enoch Arden in N. Brit. Rev., Aug. 1864; Westm. Rev., Oct. 1864; Blackw. Mag., Nov. 1864; Macmillan's Mag., 1864; Lon. Reader, 1864, ii. 186, 328, 354, 543, 768; Lon. Quar. Rev., No. ccxxvii, Jan. 1866; (new) Lon. Quar. Rev., No. xlv., art. vi.

10. The Holy Grail, and other Poems, Lon., Strahan, Dec. 15, 1869, fp. 8vo, 40,000 ordered in advance; Bost., Fields, Osgood & Co., Dec. 1869, 16mo, three editions. In same vol. with first, The Idylls of the King, Complete, Lon., Strahan, Jan. 1870, fp. 8vo. Arranged in the order in which the author wishes them to be read, viz.: I. The Coming of Arthur; II. Geraint and Enid; III. Merlin and Vivien; IV. Lancelot and Elaine; V. The Holy Grail; VI. Polles and Etarre; VII. Guinevere; VIII. The Passing of Arthur.

"The whole may now be pronounced, we are not afraid to say, a poem unequalled in its great, finished, and happy design, since the time of Milton. Its brilliancy of execution often fades; its wings drop earthward here and there; but in its harmonious and fulfilled design, in its fortunate and faultless scheme and arrangement, it has no equal since 'Paradise Lost.'"—Lon. Times, Jan. 1870.

"Our judgment would be held at fault if we were to assert that 'The Holy Grail' is in every respect up to the high standard of the 'Idylls of the King.' Good Homer never nods,—though such weakness has been assigned to him on authority from which one does not assent save deferentially,—but he is not always equally exciting."—Lon. Athen., Dec. 1869.

See, also, Lon. Quar. Rev., No. cciv., Jan. 1870; and The Legends of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table, Compiled and Arranged by J. T. K., 1861, cr. 8vo, 4th ed., 1870; MALORY, SIR THOMAS; WESTWOOD, THOMAS; WRIGHT, THOMAS, No. 58. It is a singular coincidence that just at the time of the publication of Tennyson's Holy Grail the Rev. W. W. Skeat discovered in the Vernon MS. in the Bodleian Library a fragment of 800 lines of an early history, in alliterative verse, of The Holy Grail. It is without beginning or end, but it describes chiefly the wondrous shield prepared by Evalashor Mor dreins (Slow-of-Belief) for his descendant Sir Galahad. Its position in the romance is ascertained by reference to Lancelich's translation of Robert of Borron's History of the Holy Grail, edited by J. F. Fumivall, 1861-63, 2 vols. 4to, (Roxburghe Club.) The newly-discovered fragment is to be published by the Early English Text Society.

Selections from Tennyson will be found in The Poetical Souvenir, 1862, and Household Friends for Every Season, Bost., Ticknor & Fields, 1863, 8vo. The collector must secure, if he can: Poems, MDCCCXXX., MDCCCXXXII., privately printed, (Canada,) 1862, 16mo, pp. 112. "This volume consists of those poems in the volumes of those dates which were suppressed in the subsequent editions of Tennyson's Poems, together with the different readings of those that were altered." Sotheby's, July 19, 1862, 11s. The volume was suppressed. An edition of Tennyson's Poems, in English, in 5 vols., was published at Paris in 1867, 10 francs. It was sold at the rate of 6000 vols. per month. A Complete edition, in English, was published at Amsterdam in 1869, 1 vol. fp. 8vo. To our references we must now add: Lon. Septimus Tennyson, a brother of Alfred, and also a poet, died at Cheltenham, England, Sept. 7, 1866.

"Our voice goes entirely with the public in pronouncing Mr. Tennyson the first poet of our time."—Lon. Times, Jan. 11, 1865.

This is very faint praise.

A new song by Mrs. Alfred Tennyson, the Laureate's wife, entitled The Alma River, was published and set to music by the author in 1864. In 1869 Mr. Tennyson left Farringford House, in the Isle of Wight, and sought a new home in the vicinity of Petersfield, Hampshire, one of the most beautiful of the southern counties of England.

Tennyson, Charles, brother of the preceding, and already noticed as joint-author with him of a volume of poems published in 1829, in 1835 became Vicar of Grassy, Lincolnshire, and about the same time, in consequence of his succeeding, by his grandfather's death, to property which had come into the family through his grandmother, assumed the name of Turner, (Charles Tennyson Turner.) After a silence (at least so far as public knowledge extends) of more than thirty years, he contributed four sonnets to Macmillan's Magazine, June, 1860, and a poem to the same periodical for the month ensuing. An article from his pen, entitled My Timepiece, was published in Good Words, Jan. 1870.

Tennyson, Frederick, brother of the two preceding, and already briefly noticed, (see TENNYSON, ALFRED, D.C.L.,) published in 1854 a volume of poems entitled Days and Hours, Lon., 1854, fp. 8vo.

"Mr. Frederick Tennyson's verse is to that of his brother
As moonlight unto sunlight,
And as water unto wine."

Thackeray, William Makepeace, one of the most eminent of modern English novelists and essayists, (1863,) is a grandson of the Rev. Richard Thackeray, of Hadley, Middlesex, and the son of a gentleman who held a lucrative post in the civil service of the East India Company. The author was born at Calcutta in 1811; came in boyhood to England, and was educated at the Charter-House School and at the University of Cambridge; was left an orphan with a handsome property (not less, it is stated, than £20,000) in his youth; lost part of his fortune by others, and the remainder by himself, and was thus obliged to look around for a livelihood; paid some attention to law, at the Middle Temple, (called to the Bar, May 26, 1848,) and more to art, at Rome and other schools on the Continent, but finally settled on literature, and became a correspondent of The Times, (then under Barnes,) The New Monthly Magazine, (then under Maginn,) and that most humorous of English periodicals,—Punch. The readers of Fraser had long felt well acquainted with the author of the tales, sketches, and essays of Michael Angelo Titmarsh, the readers of Punch had long laughed over the letters of The Fat Contributor, Miss Tickletoe's Lectures, James's Diary, Punch in the East, Punch's Prize Novelists, The Snob Papers, The Traveller in London, Mr. Brown's Letters to a Young Man about Town, The Proser, and other productions in prose and verse of the same fertile pen, before they were able to thank their benefactor by his lawful patronymic. His Fraserian nom de plume, indeed, Mr. Thackeray retained (in several of his volumes) for some years after it had ceased to be a disguise to a large portion of his readers. He has given to the world the following volumes, many of which, it will be observed, are enriched by the illustrations of his own skilful pencil: to use his own phrase with reference to Vanity Fair, (declined by Colburn's Magazine,) "illuminated with the author's own candles."

1. The Paris Sketch-Book, by Mr. Titmarsh; with Numerous Designs, by the Author, on Copper and Wood, Lon., July, 1840, 2 vols. p. 8vo; 2d ed., Oct. 1840, 2 vols. p. 8vo; N. York, 1852, 2 vols. 16mo; Lon., 1866, p. 8vo. Commended by Lon. Times, Lon. Athen., Lon. Lit. Gaz., and Lon. Atlas, all 1840.

2. The Second Funeral of Napoleon: in Three Letters to Miss Smith, of London; and The Chronicle of the Drum, [a poem,] by Mr. M. A. Titmarsh, Lon., 1841, sq. 16mo. Commended by Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1841, 33; condemned by Lon. Athen., 1841, 52. The Second Funeral of Napoleon was republished in Cornhill Mag., Dec. 1865.

3. Comic Tales and Sketches; Edited and Illustrated by Mr. Michael Angelo Titmarsh, 1841, 2 vols. p. 8vo. Contain the Yellowplush Memoirs, from Fraser, and contributions to other periodicals. See Athen., 1841, 385; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1841, 260.

4. The Irish Sketch-Book, by Mr. M. A. Titmarsh, with Numerous Engravings on Wood drawn by the Author, 1843, 2 vols. p. 8vo; N. York, 1844, 8vo; 1847, 8vo; 2d ed., Lon., 1845, 2 vols. p. 8vo; new ed., Lon., 1857, or.

8vo; 3d ed., so called, 1860, cr. 8vo; 4th ed., so called, 1863, cr. 8vo; Phila., 1864.

"Mr. Titmarsh, though an honest, is far from an unprejudiced, man."—Lon. Athen., 1843, 457.

"Taken as a whole, the book is capital."—Lon. Spec., 1843.

Also favourably reviewed in Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1843, 314, 334, 350.

"Mr. Thackeray's inimitable Sketch-Book. . . The most enlightening book of its class."—J. PARTON: Life of Andrew Jackson, 1860, i., xiv, 34.

5. Notes of a Journey from Cornhill to Grand Cairo, by way of Lisbon, Athens, Constantinople, and Jerusalem, &c., by Mr. M. A. Titmarsh, author of "The Irish Sketch-Book," with Illustrations from Designs by the Author, Lon., Jan. 1846, p. 8vo; 2d ed., Sept. 1846, p. 8vo; N. York, 1846, 12mo; 1854, 12mo; 3d ed., Lon., 1865, p. 8vo.

"It is wonderful what a description of people and things, what numerous pictures, what innumerable remarks and allusions, it contains."—Douglas Jerrold's Magazine.

Favourably reviewed in Lon. Athen., 1846, 89, 118, (see, also, 879,) and Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1846, 75.

6. Mrs. Perkins's Ball; Depicted in Twenty-three Plates; containing Portraits of the Principal Persons Present, with their Characters, by Mr. M. A. Titmarsh, (Christmas Book,) Lon., Dec. 12, 1847, fp. 4to, 7s. 6d.; col'd, 10s. 6d.; 2d ed., Jan. 1847; 4th ed., 1864, sq. 16mo. See Lon. Athen., 1846, 1290, No. 10.

The works which follow, with the exception of those ascribed to M. A. Titmarsh, were published under Mr. Thackeray's own name.

7. Vanity Fair: Pen and Pencil Sketches of English Society, with Illustrations on Steel and Wood by the Author, 8vo, in monthly parts: i., Jan. 1, 1847, xx.-xxi., July 1, 1848: together, Vanity Fair; a Novel without a Hero, in 1 vol. 8vo, July 19, 1848; N. York, 1848, 8vo; Leipzig, 1848, 12mo; again, 3 vols.; without illustrations, Lon., 1853, cr. 8vo; 1854, cr. 8vo; 1856, cr. 8vo; 1865, cr. 8vo; N. York, 1865, 3 vols. p. 8vo; Cambridge, Mass., 1865, 3 vols. cr. 8vo.

"Immeasurably superior, in our opinion, to every other known production of his pen."—Edin. Rev., Jan. 1848, (87), art. ii., (same in Liv. Age, xvi, 271.)

"By far the best, the fullest of natural and amusing incident, and of characters with bold and firm outlines and fine and consistent details. . . One of the most remarkable books of this age—a book which is as sure of immortality as ninety-nine hundredths of modern novels are sure of annihilation."—Edin. Rev., Jan. 1854, (99), art. vi.

"One of the most amusing, but also one of the most distressing, books we have read for many a long year. We almost long for a little exaggeration and improbability to relieve us of that sense of dread truthfulness which weighs down our hearts, not for the Amelias and Georges of the story, but for poor kindred human nature."—Lon. Quar. Rev., Dec. 1848, (84), art. v., (same in Liv. Age, xix, 497.)

"Mr. Thackeray's pathos has an effect that is really refreshing. It reminds one of the exquisite touches which occur in Fielding's Amelia."—Lon. Times, 1848.

8. "Our Street," by M. A. Titmarsh; with Sixteen Plates by the Author, (Christmas Book,) Lon., Dec. 20, 1847, sq. 8vo, 5s.; col'd, 7s. 6d.; 1864, sq. 16mo, 3s. See No. 10.

"In most respects a more enticing book than Mrs. Perkins's Ball."—Lon. Athen., 1848, 87.

"Full of life and reality."—Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1848, 12mo.

9. The Book of Snobs, (for the first time collected, from Punch, with upwards of sixty illustrations by the author,) Jan. 1848, sm. 8vo; N. York, 1852, 16mo; with No. 11, in 1 vol., Leipzig.

10. Dr. Birch and his Young Friends, by Mr. M. A. Titmarsh, with Sixteen Illustrations by the Author, (Christmas Book,) Lon., Dec. 19, 1848, sm. 4to, 5s.; col'd, 7s. 6d.; N. York, 1853, 16mo; Lon., 1864, sq. 16mo, 3s. See Lon. Athen., 1848, 1322; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1848, 835.

New editions of Nos. 6, 8, and 10 were published together in 1 vol., sq. 12mo, Dec. 1856, 7s. 6d., in 1862, 7s. 6d., and in 1864, 8s.

11. The History of Samuel Titmarsh and the Great Hoggarty Diamond, (with illustrations by the author,) N. York, 1848, 8vo; Lon., 1849, sq. 16mo. See No. 9. Repub. from Fraser's Magazine. See Fraser's Mag., xiv. 324, 389; Lon. Athen., 1849, 137; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1849, 190.

12. The History of Pendennis; his Fortunes and his Misfortunes, his Friends and his Greatest Enemy, with Illustrations by the Author, 8vo, in monthly Parts: i.,

Nov. 1848-xxiv., 1850: together, (vol. i., Dec. 31, 1849, 8vo; 2d ed., 1850, 2 vols. 8vo; N. York, 1850, 2 vols. 8vo; Leipzig, 3 vols.; without illustrations, Lon., Nov. 1855, cr. 8vo; N. York, 1867, diamond ed., (Doolady;) 1867, 12mo, (Harpers.)

"Though Pendennis is full of true, brilliant, deep things,—though it contains many passages of clear and wholesome English, such as must rejoice all who are weary of the spasmodic and superb style of narration,—it cannot be described as an advance on Vanity Fair."—Lon. Athen., 1850, 1273, (same in Liv. Age, xliii. 594.) See, also, 1848, 1099.

"Pendennis has generally been thought inferior to Vanity Fair, and we are not inclined to dispute the verdict of the public."—Edin. Rev., Jan. 1854, (q. v., art. vi.)

See, also, N. Brit. Rev., xiii. 180, (same in Elec. Mag., xxi. 364); Fraser's Mag., xliii. 75; Lon. Times, (by S. Phillips;) Amer. Whig Rev., xiii. 395.

13. Rebecca and Rowena: a Romance upon Romance, &c., by Mr. M. A. Titmarsh, with Illustrations by Richard Doyle, (Christmas Book,) Lon., Dec. 20, 1849, sm. 4to, 5s.; col'd, 7s. 6d.; again, 1856. A mock continuation of Scott's Ivanhoe. See Lon. Athen., 1849, 1329.

14. The Kickleburys on the Rhine; a New Picture-Book, Drawn and Written by Mr. M. A. Titmarsh, with fifteen plates, (Christmas Book,) Dec. 21, 1850, sm. 4to, 5s.; coloured, 7s. 6d.; Leipzig, 1 vol.; Lon., 1866, sq. 16mo, 5s.; col'd, 7s. 6d. See Lon. Athen., 1850, 1340; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1850, 961. 2d ed., with a Preface entitled An Essay on Thunder and Small Beer, Jan. 11, 1851. The Essay (see Lon. Athen., 1851, 47, and Liv. Age, xxviii. 473) was provoked by the strictures of the London Times on the first edition. New ed., 1856.

15. The History of Henry Esmond, Esq., a Colonel in the Service of her Majesty Queen Anne; Written by Himself, Lon., Oct. 1852, 3 vols. cr. 8vo; N. York, 1852, 8vo; Leipzig, 1852, 2 vols. 18mo; 2d ed., Lon., Dec. 18, 1852, (dated 1853,) 3 vols. cr. 8vo; 1855, 3 vols. cr. 8vo; 1857, cr. 8vo; in French, by A. F. L. De Wailly.

"Esmond is a reproduction of the manners, feelings, thoughts, and even style which prevailed from one hundred and eighty to one hundred and forty years ago. It is a wonderful tour de force. . . We cannot, however, avoid thinking that this merit has been purchased too dearly. The reader feels always that he is listening to falsetto tones; that he is looking at the imitation of an imitation. If Esmond had been confined within as short limits, it might have taken rank with the 'Defence of Natural Society.' But a parody three volumes long becomes tiresome."—Edin. Rev., Jan. 1854, (xcix.), art. vi.

"There is a higher literary power and kindlier and truer humanity in this work than in any of its author's former productions."—Fraser's Mag., 1852.

"I have read, enjoyed, been interested, and, after all, feel as much ire and sorrow as gratitude and admiration. And still one can never lay down a book of his without the last two feelings having their part, be the subject or treatment what it may."—CHARLOTTE BRONTË: Mrs. Gaskell's Life of Charlotte Brontë, (q. v.)

"Esmond will, we think, rank higher as a work of art than either Vanity Fair or Pendennis; because the characters are of a higher type and drawn with greater finish, and the book is more of a complete whole: not that we anticipate for it any thing like the popularity of the former of these two books, as it is altogether of a graver cast, the satire is not so pungent, the canvas is far less crowded, and the subject is distant and unfamiliar; and, may be, its excellences will not help it to a very large public."—GEORGE BRIMLEY: Essays.

York, (with a Seventh Lecture—On Charity and Humour,) 1853, 12mo; 1858, 12mo; new ed., Lon., 1858, cr. 8vo; with No. 22, N. York, 1867, 12mo. "Models of writing, if not of biography. . . There is no man of taste who will not recognize in these sketches a master's touch, the work of a true humourist, and of a man accomplished in his art."—Westm. Rev., July, 1853, (lx.) Contemp. Lit. of Eng. See, also, April, 1853, Oct. 1860.

"Mr. Thackeray in his English Humourists resembles little Mr. Thackeray as a satirist. He is as indulgent to his real as he is severe towards his imaginary characters. . . The best of the lectures is, we think, that on Fielding."—Edin. Rev., Jan. 1854, (xcix.), art. vi.

"None will read these lectures, whether in agreement or in difference, without looking forward to the announcement of some future series from this shrewd and suggestive discourses."—Lon. Athen., 1853, 764.

"A most sensible piece of nonsense."—Lon. Athen., 1854, 1519.

"This most humorous and pleasant little book."—Lon. Exam., 1854.

"A book of broad fun."—Lon. Spec., 1854.

We have next to notice—19—a collective edition of Mr. Thackeray's early writings, complete in 4 vols. cr. 8vo, 6s. ea., (uniform with the Cheap Editions of Vanity Fair, Pendennis, Esmond, The Newcomes, and The Virginians), entitled Miscellanies in Prose and Verse: vols. i., ii., Nov., Dec., 1855, (2d ed., 1856;) iii., 1856; iv., 1857. Contents: vol. i., Ballads; The Snob Papers; The Tremendous Adventures of Major Gahagan; The Fatal Boots; Cox's Diary. Vol. ii., The Yellowplush Memoirs; Jeames's Diary; Sketches and Travels in London; Novels by Eminent Hands; Character Sketches. Vol. iii., Memoirs of Barry Lyndon, [this was translated into French by A. F. L. De Waile;] A Legend of the Rhine; Rebecca and Rowena; A Little Dinner at Timmins's; The Bedford Row Conspiracy. Vol. iv., The Fitzdoodle Papers; Men's Wives; A Shabby-Genteel Story; The History of Samuel Titmarsh and the Great Hoggarty Diamond. The contents of the 4 volumes are also pub. in 13 Parts, (viz.: vol. i. in 4 Parts; vol. ii. in 3 Parts; vol. iii. in 3 Parts; vol. iv. in 3 Parts,) sold separately; and a number of the above and of other fugitive pieces of the author have been repub. from time to time in New York, (e.g. Appleton, 1864, 5 vols. 12mo, Leypoldt & Holt, 1866, 8 vols. sq. 16mo,) Boston, and Philadelphia.

"Mr. Thackeray, by collecting his earlier writings in the volumes before us, [4 vols. cr. 8vo, Lon., 1855-57,] has done a service both to himself and the world. . . . It is impossible to read these volumes without seeing what a growing mind that of the author is."—Lon. Athen., 1857, 1220.

See, also, 1855, 1301, (same in Liv. Age, xlviii. 114,) and notice of his Ballads (repub. Bost., 1855,—some 1856,—16mo, pp. 228) in Chambers's Journal, 1856, (same in Liv. Age, xlix. 142,) and Putnam's Magazine, Dec. 1855, 623.

20. The Virginians; or a Tale of the Last Century, with Illustrations on Steel and Wood by the Author, Lon., 8vo, in monthly Parts: i., Oct. 31, 1857-xxiv., Oct. 1, 1859: together, in 2 vols. 8vo: i., Oct. 1858; ii., Oct. 1, 1859. Also pub. in Harper's (N. York) Monthly, Nov. 1857-Nov. 1859, and together, N. York, Nov. 1859, 8vo. New ed., without illustrations, Lon., Nov. 1862, cr. 8vo.

"The Virginians! is a sort of continuation of Esmond. . . . 'The Virginians' is neither antiquarian, nor, in the strict sense, historical. It is an attempt to create a good story and good characters and at the same time to call from its grave a past age, in which the writer happens, probably from his admiration and deep study of Fielding, to take a great interest. . . . In this hybrid sort of composition, between history and fiction, we think his powers misapplied. It is at best an expenditure of strength in a tour de force. . . . To say that this novel will not rank with Mr. Thackeray's best works is very slight blame; to say that it will rank with those of his works which are less good is no slight praise."—Edin. Rev., Oct. 1859, (cx.) 438-453.

"A popular writer, Mr. Thackeray, in The Virginians, has ventured to introduce Washington, in his youth, as a personage of fiction. The thought was rash and infelicitous, had the author succeeded in his daring attempt; but magnus eruditus ausus,—and never was failure more complete. Mr. Thackeray takes the satirical, the merely worldly, view of life and society; he can take no other. His characters are compounded of many virtues and few if any virtues; or, if the virtues predominate, the result is a fool. He has never drawn a true and dignified woman, nor a gentleman of the highest type. He has no conception of that simplicity in which nobleness of nature most largely consists."—PRESIDENT C. C. FELTON, of Harvard University: N. Amer. Rev., Oct. 1860, 580, (Everett's Life of Washington.)

21. Lovell the Widower, (with illustrations,) N. York, June 30, 1860, 8vo; Lon., Nov. 1861, cr. 8vo; 1866, p. 8vo. Originally pub. in The Cornhill Mag., Jan. 1860 et seq., and repub. in Harper's (N. York) Monthly, Feb. 1860 et seq.

"The sad failure of a man of genuine powers. . . . There is not one single touch to kindle in the reader a spark of generosity or kindly feeling; not one word to awaken or stimulate a noble thought. After closing the book, the reader will feel conscious of having suffered a moral deterioration from the intense ingrained vulgarity of spirit which pervades and shapes the whole story."—Lon. Athen., 1861, ii. 758.

22. The Four Georges: Sketches of Manners, Morals, Court and Town Life, (with illustrations,) N. York, Nov. 1860, 12mo; Lon., Nov. 1861, cr. 8vo; 1866, cr. 8vo. See No. 16. Delivered in the United States in 1855-56, and in Scotland and England in 1857. Originally published in The Cornhill Magazine, June, July, August, and October, 1860.

"An airy, humorous, and brilliant picture of English life and manners, produced by honest reading out of many books, and lighted with the glow of individual sympathy and intellect."—Lon. Athen., 1861, ii. 720.

The book was censored in Sir C. F. L. Wrexall's Remarkable Adventures, &c., 1863, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

23. The Adventures of Philip on his Way through the World; showing Who Robbed Him, Who Helped Him, and Who Passed Him By, (with illustrations,) Lon., July 21, 1862, 3 vols. cr. 8vo; N. York, Sept. 19, 1862, 8vo; Lon., 1866, p. 8vo. Originally published in the Cornhill Magazine, 1861-62, and republished in Harper's Monthly, 1861-62.

"Mr. Thackeray must look to his laurels. The world, whether it be the world of fine gentlemen or of innocent women—the world of the first or of the second table—will at last get tired of being led down alley after alley of 'Vanity Fair'. . . . The ear cannot bear too long the drone of a hurdy-gurdy, or the peal of an organ."—Lon. Athen., 1862, ii. 174.

"Plot bad, characters good, moral dubious. It leaves Mr. Thackeray's reputation just exactly what it was, and ourselves in a state of placid indifference as to whether he writes more or not."—Lon. Lit. Budget, Aug. 9, 1862, 111.

"We think that 'Philip' will prove to be one of the works by which Mr. Thackeray will be best known to posterity."—John Bull, 1862.

24. Roundabout Papers, (reprinted from The Cornhill Magazine, Jan. 1860 et seq., with illustrations,) Lon., Dec. 1862, cr. 8vo; N. York, 1863, 12mo. See Lon. Athen., 1862, ii. 739, 772, 809; Lon. New Rev., Sept. 1863.

The Cornhill Magazine, referred to above, was started by Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., 65, Cornhill, London, with Mr. Thackeray (at an enormous compensation) as editor, Jan. 1860, at one shilling per monthly number. Of No. 1 about 100,000, and of No. 2 about 70,000 copies, were sold. Mr. Thackeray retained the editorship until April, 1862. See Lon. Athen., 1860, i. 25; Lon. Lit. Budget, July 26, 1862, 265, (Mr. Thackeray as an Editor.)

Mr. Thackeray added the Short Notices to the Sketches after the English Landscape-Painters by L. Marvey, Lon. and Glasgow, 1850, sm. fol., 21s., col'd, 42s., and contributed a piece entitled Sketches of Travel to The Victoria Regia, Dec. 1861, sup. r. 8vo. The London Quarterly Review is to be added to the periodicals for which he has written. French versions of some of his works have been published from time to time in the periodicals of Paris. In the United States the sale of his works up to 1853 had been, it was asserted, (see H. C. Carey's Letters on International Copyright, Phila., 1853, 8vo, 43,) quadruple the sale in England.

The author of Jane Eyre was among the first to read the signs of the "coming man" in Mr. Thackeray's earlier acknowledged writings.

"Why have I alluded to this man? I have alluded to him, reader, because I think I see in him an intellect profounder and more unique than his contemporaries have yet recognised; because I regard him as the first social regenerator of the day—as the very master of that working corps who would restore to rectitude the warped system of things; because I think that no commentator on his writings has yet found the comparison that suits him, the terms which rightly characterise his talent. They say he is like Fielding; they talk of his wit, humour, comic powers. He resembles Fielding as an eagle does a vulture; Fielding could stoop on carrion, but Thackeray never does. His wit is bright, his humour attractive,—but both bear the same relation to his serious genius that the mere lamient sheet-lightning playing under the summer cloud does to the electric death-spark kind in its womb.”—CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

We quote a few later opinions:

‘It is Thackeray’s aim to represent life as it is actually and historically,—men and women as they are, in those situations in which they are usually placed, with that mixture of good and evil and of strength and foible which is to be found in their characters, and liable only to those incidents which are of ordinary occurrence. He will have no faultless characters, no demigods,—nothing but men and brethren. And from this it results that, when once he has conceived a character, he works downwards and inwards in his treatment of it, making it firm and clear at all points in its relations to hard fact, and cutting down, where necessary, to the very foundations.’—DAVID MASSON: British Novelists and their Styles, (1859.) Lect. IV.: Dickens and Thackeray. See, also, Lect. III.

‘If it were asked what one aspect of life Mr. Thackeray has distinctively exhibited, the answer could be given in one word,—the trivial aspect. The characters he draws are neither the best of men nor the worst. But the atmosphere of triviality which envelops them all was never so plainly perceivable. He paints the world as a great Vanity Fair, and none has done that so well.

‘The realism of Thackeray can hardly fail to have a good effect in fictitious literature. It represents the extreme point of reaction against the false idealism of the Minerva Press. It is a pre-Raphaelite school of novel-writing. And, as pre-Raphaelitism is not to be valued in itself so much as in being the passage to a new and nobler ideal, the stern realism of Thackeray may lead the way to something better than itself.’—PETER BAYNE: Essays in Biography and Criticism, First Series, (1857.) VII.: The Modern Novel: Dickens—Butcher—Thackeray.

‘Mr. Thackeray’s humour does not mainly consist in the creation of oddities of manner, habit, or feeling, but in so representing actual men and women as to excite a sense of incongruity in the reader’s mind—a feeling that the follies and vices described are “deviations from an ideal of humanity”—always present to the writer. The real is described vividly with that perception of individuality which constitutes the artist; but the description implies and suggests a standard higher than itself, not by any direct assertion of such a standard, but by an unmistakable irony. . . . No one could be simply amused with Mr. Thackeray’s descriptions or his dialogues. A shame at one’s own defects, at the defects of the world in which one was living, was irresistibly aroused along with the reception of the particular portraiture. But while he was dealing with his own age, his keen perceptive faculty prevailed, and the actual predominates in his pictures of modern society.’—GEORGE BRIMLEY: Essays, 1860.

‘There is one point in which Fielding is a model for all times, and in which Mr. Thackeray is his worthy disciple, and, we venture to think, perfectly his equal. That point is, style and beauty of composition. The last century was certainly more studious, generally speaking, of form than ours. You may open any page of Fielding at random, and read it with pleasure, without reference to the story or context, merely as a piece of exquisite writing. The same may be said of Mr. Thackeray. England in our day may regard it as some proof of her moral soundness that her greatest novelist is in all his sentiments and sympathies the deadly enemy of hypocrisy, but the constant friend of virtue.’—Edin. Rev., Oct. 1859, (cx.) 438–463.

‘On one point the reviewer (ubi supra) might have dwelt a little. He merely hints at the perfection of Thackeray’s composition. Now, this is his strong point. He writes the best and purest English of any author now living.’—R. SHELTON MACKENZIE, M.D., D.C.L., Nov. 23, 1859.

‘He is, we should say, one of the healthiest writers who has attained celebrity since the days of Scott and Byron. His style—and a man’s style is, as it were, his mind’s complexion—is an index of it. Agreeable, manly, colloquial English,—the English of cultivated men, but still with as little bookishness about it as possible,—such is the clear atmosphere we breathe in reading him. Very sparing of imagery, perfectly free from conceits, rarely touching the deep-toned chords of passion and sentiment,—he is always at once a master of himself, and never takes his eye off his reader. . . . What powers he has are in fair proportion with each other, and he has them all equally under control.’—Lon. Athen., Oct. 3, 1857, 1229, 1230.

In Mr. Lewes’s Life and Works of Goethe, 1856, 2 vols. 8vo, will be found a letter from Mr. Thackeray containing reminiscences of his residence at Weimar in his early years, and recollections of the great German poet. In July, 1857, Mr. Thackeray was an unsuccessful candidate—Cardwell 1085, Thackeray 1018—for the representation in Parliament of the city of Oxford. This result we find it impossible to regret—desiring that the maturer years of the graphic novelist and brilliant essayist should be devoted to those historical researches to which he has been earnestly invited by one of his late critics, (see Edin. Rev., Oct. 1859,) and trusting that there is some truth in the assertion (see Lon. Critic, March, 1861, notice of Lord Macaulay’s History of England, vol. v.) that he has accumulated materials for a History of England in the Reign of Queen Anne.

Since the above (with the exception of notices of new editions, &c.) was written, Mr. Thackeray has ceased to live.

“Suddenly,” remarks the London Times of Dec. 25, 1863, “one of our greatest literary men has departed. Never more shall the fine head of Mr. Thackeray, with its mass of silvery hair, be seen towering among us. It was but two days ago that he might be seen at his club, radiant and buoyant with glee. Yesterday morning he was found dead in his bed. With all his high spirits, he did not seem well; he complained of illness; but he was often ill, and he laughed off his present attack. He said that he was about to undergo some treatment which would work a perfect cure in his system, and so he made light of his malady. He was suffering from two distinct complaints, one of which has now wrought his death. More than a dozen years ago, while he was writing ‘Pendennis,’ it will be remembered that the publication of that work was stopped by his serious illness. He was brought to death’s door; and he was saved from death by Dr. Eliotson, to whom, in gratitude, he dedicated the novel when he lived to finish it. But ever since that ailment he has been subject every month or six weeks to attacks of sickness, attended with violent retching. He was congratulating himself the other day on the failure of his old enemy to return, and then he checked himself, as if he ought not to be too sure of a release from his plague. On Wednesday morning the complaint returned, and he was in great suffering all day. He was no better in the evening, and his servant, about the time of leaving him for the night, proposed to sit up with him. This he declined. He was heard moving about midnight, and he must have died between two and three in the morning of yesterday. His medical attendants attribute his death to ‘effusion on the brain.’ They add that he had a very large brain, weighing no less than 58½ oz.

“He thus died of the complaint which seemed to trouble him least. He died full of strength and rejoicing, full of plans and hopes. On Monday last he was congratulating himself on having finished four numbers of a new novel; he had the manuscript in his pocket, and with a boyish frankness showed the last pages to a friend, asking him to read them and see what he could make of them. When he had completed four numbers more, he said, he would subject himself to the skill of a very clever surgeon, and be no more an invalid. In the fulness of his powers he has fallen before a complaint which gave him no alarm.”

Since his death have appeared—25. Denis Duval, N. York, 1864, 8vo; Lon., 1867, p. 8vo. From Cornhill Mag., Mar. et seq., 1864.

“In respect of earnest feeling, far-seeing purpose, character, incident, and a certain loving picturesqueness blending the whole, I believe it to be much the best of all his works. That he fully meant it to be so, that he had become strongly attached to it, and that he bestowed great pains upon it, I trace in almost every page.”—CHARLES DICKENS.

The monument erected to Thackeray in the Poets’ Corner, Westminster Abbey, was uncovered Oct. 21, 1865. It consists of a bust by Baron Marchetti, (a friend of the deceased,) upon a base of red serpentine, mounted upon a bronze support, bearing a simple record of his name and the dates of birth and death. It is fixed against a wall column in the south transept, behind the statue of Addison. To our references we now add: Poems and Essays, by W. C. Roscoe, Lon., 1860, 2 vols. p. 8vo; Essays, by S. Thackeray's Humour, Illustrated by the Pencil of George Cruikshank, (24 designs, illustrating "The Fatal Boots" and "The Diary of Barber Cox," with letter-press descriptions, sm. 4to. A complete uniform edition of Thackeray's Works, with new matter, in 22 vols. r. cr. 8vo, 7s. 6d. each, was published by Smith, Elder & Co., of London, and J. B. Lippincott & Co., of Phila., 1868-69; an edition of his Novels, by Harpers, N. York, in 6 vols. 8vo, was issued in 1869; an edition of his Works, by Appletons, N. York, in 12 vols., appeared in 1869-70; and Household Editions of his Novels in 6 vols. 16mo, and of his Miscellanies in 5 vols. 16mo, were published, the first in 1869 and the last in 1869-70, by Fields, Osgood & Co., of Boston.

"It is long since England has lost such a son; it will be long before she has such another to lose. He was indeed emphatically English,—English as distinct from Scotch, no less than English as distinct from Continental. The highest, purest English novelist since Fielding, he combined Addison's love of virtue with Johnson's hatred of cant; Horace Walpole's lynx eye for the mean and ridiculous with the gentleness and wide charity for mankind, as a whole, of Goldsmith. Non omnis moriturus est. He will be remembered in his succession with these men for ages to come, as long as the hymn of praise rises in the old Abbey of Westminster, and wherever the English tongue is native to men, from the banks of the Ganges to those of the Mississippi."—HANNAY.

"In his subtle, spiritual analysis of men and women, as we see them and live with them; in his power of detecting the enduring passions and desires, the strengths, the weaknesses, and the deceptions of the race, from under the mask of ordinary worldly and town life,—making a dandy or a dancing-girl as real, as 'moving, delicate, and full of life,' as the most heroic incarnations of good and evil; in his vitality and yet lightness of handling, doing it once and forever, and never a touch too little or too much,—in these respects he stood and stands alone and matchless."—DR. Theobald, Lewis, a literary attorney-at-law, a native of Sittingbourne, Kent, d. September, 1744, already noticed as an editor of Shakspeare, (see SHAKSPEARE, WILLIAM: COLLECTIVE EDITIONS OF SHAKSPEARE'S PLAYS AND POEMS, No. 7.) and as the hero of the Dunciad, (see CIBBER, COLLEY,) was the author of A Critical Discourse on Homer's Iliad, Lon., 1714; A Translation of the First Book of the Odyssey, with Notes, 1716; Memoirs of Sir Walter Raleigh, 1719, 8vo; Shakspeare Restored; or, Specimens of Blunders Committed and Unamended in Pope's Edition of this Poet, (title-pages vary,) 1726, r. 4to; 20 or 21 forgotten plays, (see Biog. Dramat.); of several translations, pieces of poetry, essays, &c., and many articles in Mist's Weekly Journal, The Daily Journal, and The Censor. He commenced, but did not live to finish, an edition of Beaumont and Fletcher. See, also, WYCHERLEY, WILLIAM, No. 6. As an editor of Shakspeare, Dr. Johnson thus grades him:

"Pope was succeeded by Theobald, a man of narrow comprehension and small acquisitions, with no native and intrinsic splendour of genius, with little of the artificial light of learning, but zealous for minute accuracy, and not negligent in pursuing it. He collated the ancient copies, and rectified many errors. A man so anxiously scrupulous might have been expected to do more, but what little he did was commonly right."—Preface to Johnson's ed. of Shakspeare.

Later in the Preface he treats him with less respect; in his Life of Pope he calls him "a man of heavy diligence with very slender powers;" and he told Burney (see Boswell's Johnson, ch. xii.) that Warburton "would make two and fifty Theobalds, cut into slices." An eminent critic of our day gives a very different verdict:

"Among the commentators on Shakspeare, Warburton, always striving to display his own acuteness and scorn of others, deviates more than any one else from the meaning. Theobald was the first who did a little."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, iii. 93.

If Theobald did only a "little," doubtless many of the poet's editors have done too much. We think Theobald often very happy in his suggestions. See Nichols's Lit. Anec., vii. 417, 689. Thirlby, Styan, LL.D., a learned critic, was b. about 1692, educated at Jesus College, Cambridge, of which he became Fellow, studied successively medicine, civil law, and common law, and d. 1753. 1. University of Cambridge Vindicated, Lon., 1710. 2. Answer to Mr. [William] Whiston's Seventeen Suspicions concerning Athanasius, in his Historical Preface, (to Primitive Christianity Revived, 1710, 8vo.), 1712, 8vo. 3. Defence of the Answer, &c., Camb., 1713, 8vo. He added another pamphlet on the same subject. 4. Apologie Dues et Dial. cum Tryphone Judæo, a Styano Thirlbio, Gr. et Lat., Lon., 1722, fol., l. p. The Greek text is according to R. Stephen's edition; the version is Langius's corrected. Some dissertations of his will be found in Dr. Jortin's Miscellaneous Observations. He contributed to Theobald's Shakspeare, and left some MS. emendations of the text of the great bard; a portion of these were used by Dr. Johnson; thus comes Thirlby's name in his edition as a commentator. See, also, SCHMITZ, LEONARD, Ph.D., No. 4.

"If my early friend Dr. Thirlwall's History of Greece had appeared a few years earlier, I should probably never have conceived the design of the present work at all; I should perhaps not have been prompted to the task by any deficiencies such as those I felt and regretted in Mitford. The comparison of the two authors affords indeed a striking proof of the progress of sound and enlarged views respecting the ancient world during the present generation. Having studied of course the same evidence as Dr. Thirlwall, I am better enabled than others to bear testimony to the learning, the sagacity, and the candour which pervades his excellent work."—Grote's History of Greece, vol. i., 1846, Preface.

"This elaborate and invaluable work. . . . The style of his history is dry, terse, and exact, not fitted, perhaps, for the historical tyro, but most acceptable to the advanced student, who is in quest of things," &c.—SAMUEL WARREN: Introd. to Law Studies, 2d ed., 1845, 155.

"The Author expresses a confidence that he will be able to bring the whole within the compass of from 40 to 45 Parts. . . . The whole work will be capable of being bound in a single vol-ume if desired, forming, it is believed, the most complete and (taking into consideration its extent) the most convenient, and certainly the most learned, work of the kind ever published."—Publishers' Advert., Phila., Oct. 1869.

We have before us the commendatory verdicts of Messrs. W. C. Bryant, LL.D., O. W. Holmes, M.D., A. P. Peabody, D.D., W. D. Whitney, LL.D., J. R. Lowell, W. A. Wheeler, C. P. Krauth, D.D., &c., upon the early Parts of this invaluable work.

To a large volume on Special, General, and Micro-scopic Anatomy, edited by Dr. S. G. Morton in 1848-9, Dr. Thomas contributed the portion (specially com-mended by the Charleston Med. Jour., Mar. 1849) relat-ing to muscular action, the mechanism of locomotion, &c.; and in 1851-2 he published his First Book of Etymology, (see LYND, JAMES, Nos. 1, 2,) which was highly approved of by Dr. Barnas Sears and other scholars. He contributed geographical vocabularies to Webster's octavo Dictionary, 1847, 8vo, the University edition, 1856, 8vo, and the Unabridged Quarto edition of 1864, and also enriched the latter by a Pronouncing Vocabulary of Modern Biographical Names. In 1857 Dr. Thomas visited India, where he spent fourteen months in the study of the Sanscrit, Persian, and other Oriental tongues, principally with a view to tracing their philological relations with the languages of Europe. He also spent about three months in Egypt, for the purpose of making himself acquainted with the rudiments of the Arabic tongue. He was for some time Professor of Latin and Greek in Haverford College, and has taught the classics privately.

But what says the learned editor himself?

"Of the dialectics and physics of Plato, they are the only exposition at once full, accurate, and popular, with which I am acquainted; being far more accurate than the French and incomparably more popular than the German treatises on these departments of the Platonic philosophy."

"By Professor Thompson's Notes we think we may say that these lectures are doubled in value. . . . Of the series on Plato, . . . we are confident that every intelligent reader of these Lectures will join in the high encomium which the learned editor has pronounced upon them."—*Edin. Thomson, James, the author of "The Seasons," a son of the Rev. Thomas Thomson, was b. at Ednam, Roxburghshire, Scotland, September 11, 1700, and educated at the Grammar-School at Jedburgh and at the University of Dublin, where in 1719 he was entered as a student of divinity; abandoned his design on the pulpit, and in 1725 came to London in pursuit of fortune and fame; in 1726 sold to John Millan, for three guineas, his poem of Winter, (consisting when first published of only 413 lines,) of which three editions (the first fol., the 2d and 3d 8vo) were issued in this same year; in 1727 published Summer, 8vo, and a Poem on the Death of Sir Isaac Newton, fol.; in 1728 appeared Spring, 8vo, (for which Andrew Millar gave him 50 guineas;) in 1729, the poem of Britannia, (anonymously,) and a Poem on the Death of Congreve, (recovered by the Rev. H. F. Carey, and reprinted by Peter Cunningham for the Percy Society in 1843, p. 8vo, pp. 32;) and Feb. 28, 1729-30, was first acted—published 1730, 8vo and 4to—the Tragedy of Sophonisba; in 1730, 4to, was issued by subscription a collective edition of The Seasons, (including Autumn, then first published,) of which 387 subscribers took 454 copies; in the same year, by the influence of Dr. Rundle, accompanied Charles Talbot, eldest son of the Chancellor, in a tour on the Continent, where his observations of the working of despotic rule inspired his poem of Liberty, published in five separate 4to parts, 1735-36, but shortened after his decease, for his collective Works, by Sir George Lyttelton; rewarded for his attendance upon Mr. Talbot by the post of Secretary of Briefs,—the loss of which (in 1737) was partially supplied by a pension from the Prince of Wales of £100, and perhaps more than compensated by the subsequent appointment of Surveyor-General of the Leeward Islands, from which, after paying his deputy, he received about £300 per annum; in 1737 he published A Poem to the Memory of Lord Talbot, 4to; in 1738 edited his own Works, in 2 vols. 8vo, wrote a preface to Milton's Areopagitica, and produced and published his tragedy of Agamemnon, 8vo; in 1739 published—the representation was prohibited—his tragedy of Edward and Elenora, 8vo; in 1740, in conjunction with David Mallet, wrote the masque of Alfred, (1740, 8vo,) in which appears the national anthem Rule Britannia, ascribed by Bolton Corney, "on no slight evidence," to Mallet; in 1745 published his tragedy (taken from Gil Blas) of Tancred and Sigismunda, 8vo; in 1748 gave to the world his Castle of Indolence, an Allegorical Poem, written in imitation of Spenser, 4to; and on the 27th of August, in the same year, was "gathered to his fathers,"—a union hastened by imprudent exposure on the water between London and his cottage in Kew-foot Lane, Richmond, where now stands the villa of the Earl of Shaftesbury. His tragedy of Coriolanus, left in MS., was, by the zeal of Sir George Lyttelton, brought upon the stage "for the benefit of his family," and recommended by a Prologue, [by Lyttelton,] which Quin, who had long lived with Thomson in fond intimacy, spoke in such a manner as showed him "to be," on that occasion, "no actor." It was published in 1748, (some 1749.) 8vo.

"Mr. Thomson was at the Leasowes in the summer of 1745, and in the autumn of 1746, and promised when he came again into the country to make a longer visit; but at the time he was expected came an account of his death. It seems he waited too long for the return of his friend, Dr. [John] Armstrong, [p. 68, supra,] and did not choose to employ any other physician. He had nothing of the gentleman in his person or address; but he made amends for the deficiency by his refined sense, spirited expressions, and a manner of speaking not unlike his friend Quin. He did not talk a great deal, but after a pause of reflection produced something or other that accounted for his delay.

"The Seasons would make a fine poem in Latin. Its turgid phrases would lose their stiffness, and its vulgar idioms acquire a proper majesty; its propriety and description shine the same."—W. S., (i.e. WILLIAM SHENSTONE.) MS. note in his copy of The Seasons: see Lon. Gent. Mag., 1823, i. 226.

Collins's beautiful Ode on the Death of Thomson, "In yonder grave [or grove?] a Druid lies," is doubtless familiar to many of our readers. For arguments (by Bolton Corney, &c.) on "grave" and "grove," see Lon. Gent. Mag., 1843, i. 493, 602.

The Rev. Mr. Mitford, in a notice of Thomson's works, excited the curiosity, not to say the cupidity, of collectors, by the following statement:

"As 'fortune not only favours fools,' but is also not seldom seen at the elbow of the diligent and industrious, she crowned our earliest efforts by putting into our hands, at the price of one shilling and sixpence, what we would not exchange for the great ruby in the royal crown,—the edition of The Seasons of 1738, 8vo, Miller, interleaved, filled with Thomson's alterations in his own hand in every page, and with numerous alterations and emendations by Pope in his small and beautiful writing."—Lon. Gent. Mag., Dec. 1841, 564, (q. v.)

See, also, (by same,) Nov. 1845, 449, and Gray's Works, by Mitford, ii. viii., (ed. 1836.)

Mr. Peter Cunningham, an acute critic, remarks, "These corrections were in very many cases adopted by Thomson; but I cannot help thinking that the writing bears a greater resemblance to Lord Lyttelton's handwriting than to Pope's. The edition is that of 1736."—Cunningham's ed. of Johnson's Lives of the Poets, 1855, iii. 233, n.

See to the same effect a writer (whether Mr. C. or not we are not informed) in Lon. Athen., 1847, 485. At the sale of Mr. Mitford's library, in the spring of 1860, this volume was knocked down at £46.

CRITICAL OPINIONS ON THOMSON'S WRITINGS.

"As a writer, he is entitled to one praise of the highest kind: his mode of thinking, and of expressing his thoughts, is original. His blank verse is no more the blank verse of Milton, or of any other poet, than the rhymes of Prior are the rhymes of Cowley.

His numbers, his pauses, his diction, are of his own growth, without transcription, without imitation. He thinks in a peculiar train, and he thinks always as a man of genius; he looks round on Nature and on life with the eye which Nature bestows only on a poet,—the eye that distinguishes, in every thing presented to its view, whatever there is on which imagination can delight to be detained, and a mind that at once comprehends the vast and attends to the minute. The reader of 'The Seasons' wonders that he never saw before what Thomson shows him, and that he never yet has felt what Thomson impresses.

"His is one of the works in which blank verse seems properly used. Thomson's wide expansion of general views, and his enumeration of circumstantial varieties, would have been obscured and embarrassed by the frequent intersections of the sense which are the necessary effects of rhyme. His descriptions of extended scenes and general effects bring before us the whole magnificence of Nature, whether pleasing or dreadful. The gaiety of Spring, the splendour of Summer, the tranquillity of Autumn, and the horror of Winter, take in their turns possession of the mind. The poet leads us through the appearances of things as they are successively varied by the vicissitudes of the year, and imparts to us so much of his own enthusiasm that our thoughts expand with his imagery and kindle with his sentiments. Nor is the naturalist without his part in the entertainment; for he is assisted to recollect and to combine, to arrange his discoveries, and to amplify the sphere of his contemplation. The grand defect of 'The Seasons' is want of method; but for this I know not that there was any remedy. Of many appearances subsisting all at once, no rule can be given why one should be mentioned before another; yet the memory wants the help of order, and the curiosity is not excited by suspense or expectation."

"His diction is in the highest degree florid and luxuriant, such as may be said to be to his images and thoughts both their lustre and their shade; such as invests them with splendour, through which perhaps they are not always easily discerned. It is too exuberant, and sometimes may be charged with filling the ear more than the mind. . . . It may be doubted whether he was, either by the bent of nature or habits of study, much qualified for tragedy. It does not appear that he had much sense of the pathetic; and his diffusive and descriptive style produced declamation rather than dialogue. . . . 'Liberty' when it first appeared, I tried to read, and soon desisted. I have never tried again, and therefore will not hazard either praise or censure. . . . Upon this great poem two years were spent, and the author congratulated himself upon it as his noblest work; but an author and his reader are not always of a mind. Liberty called in vain upon her votaries to read her praises and reward her encomist: her praises were condemned to labour spiders, and to gather dust; none of Thomson's performances were so little regarded."

"The judgment of the public was not erroneous: the recurrence of the same images must tire in time; an enumeration of examples to prove a position which nobody denied, as it was from the beginning superfluous, must quickly grow disgusting." —DR. JOHNSON: Lives of the Poets, Cunningham's ed., 1855, lii. 239, 240, 241.

On this criticism see Sir S. E. Brydges, in his ed. of Phillips's Theat. Poet. Anglic., 1800, xlii.

"Thomson had a true poetical genius, the power of viewing every thing in a poetical light. His fault is such a cloud of words sometimes that the sense can hardly peep through. Shiel, who compiled 'Cibber's Lives of the Poets,' was one day sitting with me. I took down Thomson and read aloud a large portion of him, and then asked—Is not this fine? Shiel having expressed the highest admiration, 'Well, sir,' said I, 'I have omitted every other line.'" —DR. JOHNSON: Boswell's Johnson, by Croker, chap. iv. See, also, chaps. xvii., xxi., l., lvii., lviii., lxvii., lxxi., &c.

"Are then The Seasons and The Task great poems? Yes. Why? We shall tell you in two separate articles. But we presume you do not need to be told that that poem must be great which was the first to paint the rolling mystery of the year and to show that all its Seasons were but the varied God? The idea was original and sublime; and the fulfilment thereof so complete that, some six thousand years having elapsed between the creation of the world and of that poem, some sixty thousand, we prophesy, will elapse between the appearance of that poem and the publication of another, equally great, on a subject, external to the mind, equally magnificent." —PROFESSOR JOHN WILSON: Blackw. Mag., xxx. 483: An Hour's Talk about Poetry.

See, also, references to Blackw. Mag. and Wilson's Works, (infra.)

"Habits of early admiration teach us all to look back upon this poet as the favourite companion of our solitary walks, and as the author who has first or chiefly reflected back to our minds a heightened and refined sensation of the delight which rural scenery affords us. The judgment of cooler years may somewhat abate our estimation of him, though it will still leave us the essential features of his poetical character to abide the test of reflection. . . . It is almost stale to remark the beauties of a poem so universally felt,—the truth and genial interest with which he carries us through the life of the year; the harmony of succession which he gives to the casual phenomena of nature; his pleasing transitions from native to foreign scenery; and the soul of exalted and unfeigned benevolence which accompanies his prospects of the creation. . . . Between the period of his composing 'The Seasons' and 'The Castle of Indolence' he wrote several works, which seem hardly to accord with the improvement and maturity of his taste exhibited in the latter production. To 'The Castle of Indolence' he brought not only the full nature but the perfect art of a poet. The materials of that exquisite poem are derived from Tasso; but he was more immediately indebted for them to 'The Fairy Queen'; and in meeting with the paternal Spirit of Spenser he seems as if he were admitted more intimately to the home of inspiration. There he redeemed the jejune ambition of his style, and retained all its wealth and luxury without the accompaniment of ostentation. Every stanza of that charming allegory, at least of the whole of the first part of it, gives out a group of images from which the mind is reluctant to part, and a flow of harmony which the ear wishes to hear repeated." —THOMAS CAMPBELL: Essay on Poetry, P. Cunningham's ed., 1848, 265, 266.

Mr. Cunningham adds some criticisms from Cowper, Beattie, Coleridge, and Wilson, viz.:

"Thomson was admirable in description; but it always seemed to me that there was somewhat of affectation in his style, and that his numbers are sometimes not well harmonized. I could wish, too, with Dr. Johnson, that he had confined himself to this country; for when he describes what he never saw, one is forced to read him with some allowances for possible misrepresentation. He was, however, a true poet, and his lasting fame has proved it." —COWPER: Letter to Mrs. King, June 19, 1788.

"Thomson was an honour to his country and to mankind, and a man to whose writings I am under very particular obligations; for, if I have any true relish for the beauties of nature, I may say with truth that it was from Virgil and from Thomson that I caught it." —BEATTIE.

"The love of nature seems to have led Thomson to a cheerful religion, and a gloomy religion to have led Cowper to a love of nature. The one would carry his fellow-men along with him into nature, the other flies to nature from his fellow-men. In chastity of diction, however, and the harmony of blank verse, Cowper leaves Thomson immeasurably below him; yet I still believe the latter to have been the born poet." —COLERIDGE.

"Thomson's genius does not so often delight us by exquisite minute touches in the description of nature as that of Cowper. It loves to paint on a great scale, and to dash objects off sweepingly by bold strokes. Cowper sets nature before your eyes, — Thomson, before your imagination." —PROFESSOR WILSON.

Hazlitt's estimate of Thomson was very high:

"Thomson is the best of our descriptive poets; for he gives most of the poetry of natural description. Others have been quite equal to him, or have surpassed him, as Cowper, for instance, in the picturesque part of his art, in marking the peculiar features and curious details of objects;—no one has yet come up to him in giving the sum total of their effect, their varying influences on the mind. . . . It has been supposed by some that the Castle of Indolence is Thomson's best poem; but that is not the case. He has in it, indeed, poured out the whole soul of indolence, diffuse, relaxed, supine, dissolved into a voluptuous dream; and surrounded himself with a set of objects and companions in entire union with the listlessness of his own temper. . . . But still there are no passages in this exquisite little production of sportive ease and fancy equal to the best of those of The Seasons. . . . Thomson's blank verse is not harsh, nor utterly untuneable, but it is heavy and monotonous, it seems always labouring uphill. . . . The moral descriptions and reflections in The Seasons are in an admirable spirit, and written with great force and fervour. . . . His poem on Liberty is not equally good. . . . His plays . . . are never acted, and seldom read. The author could not, or would not, put himself out of his way to enter into the situations and passions of others, particularly of a tragic kind." —Lectures on the Eng. Poets, Lect. V.: on Thomson and Cowper.

We give some extracts from the Letters of the lively Horace Walpole:

"The town flocks to a new play of Thomson's, called 'Tancred and Sigismund.' It is very dull; I have read it. I cannot bear modern poetry; these refinements of the purity of the stage and of the incorrectness of English verse are most woefully insipid. I had rather have written the most absurd lines in Lee than I had rather have written [by Richard Glover] or 'The Seasons,' as I had rather be put into the round-house for a wrong-headed quarrel than sup quietly at eight o'clock with my grandmother." —TO SIR H. MANN, March, 28, 1745.

"You are very particular. I can tell you, in liking Gray's Odes; but you must remember that the age likes Akenside, and did like Thomson! Can the same people like both?" —TO GEORGE MONTAGU, August, 25, 1757.

"Lord Buchan is screwing out a little ephemeral fame from instituting a jubilee for Thomson. I fear I shall not make my count to Mr. Berry by owing I would not give him this last week's fine weather for all the four Seasons in blank verse. There is more nature in six lines of L'Allegro and Penseroso than in all the laboured imitations of Milton. What is there in Thomson of original?" —TO THE MISS BERRYS, Sept., 16, 1791.

"Thomson has lately published a poem called The Castle of Indolence, in which there are some good stanzas." —GRAY.

"In the original formation of this library (between the years 1806 and 1812) the sum of £16,533 was expended; and from that date to the present liberal accessions have been regularly made. Richard Porson was the first librarian, but his early death (25 Sept. 1808) made his term of office a very brief one. Nor, indeed, despite his brilliant scholarship and his other eminent endowments, was the office congenial to him. His successor, Mr. Maltby, has told us in the Porsoniana (appended to the Table-Talk of Samuel Rogers) that his attendance was so irregular as to draw from the directors on one occasion the pointed reproof, 'We only know you are our librarian by seeing your name attached to the receipts for your salary,' and from devoted friends the admission that the censure was merited. But he had an excellent assistant in Mr. William Upcott, who filled the office of sub-librarian for twenty-eight years. Mr. Maltby, too, continued to fill the office of principal librarian from the death of Porson to the midsummer of 1834. He was succeeded by Mr. Richard Thomson and Mr. E. W. Brayley as joint-librarians. To these gentlemen is mainly due that Catalogue of the Library of the London Institution, Systematically Classed, which is one of the best productions extant in its kind. The present number of volumes exceeds 62,000. The right of admission belongs of course exclusively to the proprietors and their nominees; but for a long time the library has been easily accessible for literary purposes."—EDWARD EDWARDS: Memoirs of Libraries, 1859, ii. 96.

"There is an excellent printed catalogue of this library, chiefly compiled by Mr. Thomson, in 4 vols. 8vo, printed between the years 1835 and 1852. . . . 10. Outlines of Mineralogy, Geology, and Mineral Analysis, 1836, 2 vols. 8vo; Phila., 1839, 2 vols. 8vo. Partly taken from his System of Chemistry, 7th edition. It gives an account of about fifty new minerals which he had discovered in little more than ten years. 11. Treatises on Brewing and Distillation, Edin., 1849, p. 8vo.

In 1813 he originated the Annals of Philosophy, and edited it until 1822, when it was undertaken by Richard Phillips, (supra). In 1827 the work was purchased by Richard Taylor, (supra), and by him merged in the Philosophical Magazine. (See TILLOCH, ALEXANDER, LL.D.) Of the Annals there are 28 vols. 8vo, 1813-26 inc., pub. at £21. It is claimed that in the Annals Dr. T. "introduced a system of giving annual reports on the progress of science; the first of these was published in 1813, and the last in 1819." See, also, SANDFORD, SIR DANIEL KEYTE, Knt., D.C.L. "Lot 92 of the sixth day's [Strawberry] sale is thus described in the Sale Catalogue:

"92. A folio volume, written upon vellum, of Old English Poetry, from the library of R. Thoresby, very curious."

"At Thoresby's sale Walpole gave £1 for this very valuable volume of York Miracle Plays, and at Walpole's sale the late Mr. Thomas Rodd gave £220 10s. for it. Mr. Rodd sold the volume to Mr. Bright, of Bristol, at whose sale in 1844 it was bought by the late Mr. Thorpe for £305. It is now the property of Lord Ashburnham. Walpole was not fully aware of its value; for there is no mention of it in his own account of Strawberry Hill."—Walpole's Letters, Cunningham's ed., (1861,) ix. 525.

The notice in Lon. Athen. (1861, ii. 643) was unfavourable; and so were the comments of a number of correspondents (F. Masson, L. Reeve, Henry McConnel, W. H. Carpenter, John Pye, Henry Elliot, and R. J. Lane) of that periodical: see 1861, ii. 691, 765, 808, 848, and 1862, i. 19, 51, 296, 331, 363. To Mr. Reeve and Mr. Pye Mr. Thornbury responded, (1862, i. 260.) See, also, Olphar Hamst's Hand-Book for Fictitious Names, 1868, 152, and Lon. Reader, 1865, i. 510. If we assert that Mr. Thornbury's book "came off with flying colours," the phrase must be understood in an artistic rather than in a military sense. But the reader must be his own judge. It is to be remembered that Mr. Thornbury is the author of the Life of Turner in Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xxi., Dec. 1860. 15. True as Steel, 1863, 3 vols. p. 8vo.

Thus Watt gives the date; Lowndes has it 1765, 4to; Croker remarks,

"In the original edition of this ode, now before me, the date on the title-page is 1749,—a mistake, no doubt, for 1769."—Croker's Boswell's Johnson, ed. 1848, ch. xvii, notes, (g. v.)

We find it noticed in Lon. Mon. Rev. for June, 1763, 479, 4to, (sine anno.) where it is said it was "written some years ago." The date 1749 was probably part of the joke. Dr. Johnson found more humour in it than Mr. Croker was able to discover.

2. The Comedies of Plautus; translated into Familiar Blank Verse, 1767, 2 vols. 8vo; revised, 1769, 2 vols. 8vo. The Merchant was translated by George Colman the Elder; the Captives, by Richard Warner. Warner translated the plays of Plautus not in these vols., and pub. them in 3 vols. 8vo, 1774. The whole are known as Thornton's translation, 1779-84, 5 vols. 8vo. Thornton's translations are considered the best in the volumes. The notes, from the best commentators, add to the value of this edition. 3. The Battle of the Wigs; an additional Canto to Dr. Garth's Poem of The Dispensary, 1768, 4to. This was followed by his City Latin, in ridicule of the inscription on Blackfriars Bridge. He contributed to The Student, (pub. at Oxford, Jan. 31, 1750-July 3, 1751: authors, T. Warton, C. Smart, G. Tickell, Thomas, son of the Rev. Richard Tickell, was b. at Bridekirk, Cumberland, 1686; took his degree of M.A. at Queen's College, Oxford, 1708, and was chosen Fellow, 1710; was introduced to literary circles and public employment by Addison, who in 1717, when he became Secretary of State, made Tickell Under-Secretary, greatly to the disgust of Steele; was appointed Secretary to the Lords Justices of Ireland in 1724, and held this post until his death, April 23, 1740. He gained Addison's eye by his complimentary verses on the great man's Rosamond, (in Tanson's Sixth Miscellany, 1709,) and later won his affections, which he never lost, by his personal merits and social virtues. 1. Poem to the Lord Privy Seal on the Prospect of Peace, Lon., 1713. Six editions. Praised in the Spectator. On the arrival of George I., Tickell celebrated the event in his Royal Progress, published in the Spectator. 2. The First Book of Homer's Iliad, Translated into English Verse by Thomas Tickell, Esq., 1715, 4to. We have already adverted (ADDISON, JOSEPH; POPE, ALEXANDER: 9. TRANSLATION OF HOMER) to Pope's suspicion (see Spence's Anecdotes, by Singer) that Addison was the translator of this book of Homer, and that it was produced for the express purpose of injuring his own translation.

"Is there any external evidence to support this grave accusation? The answer is short. There is absolutely none."—LORD MACAULAY: Life and Writings of Addison: Edin. Rev., July, 1843, and in his Essays.

Addison owned that he had corrected Tickell's lines, and Lord Macaulay—Warburton, Steele, and Young to the contrary notwithstanding—believes that he did no more. See, also, Biog. Brit., 2d ed., i. (1778) 56, art. "Addison."

"Addison declared that the rival versions were both good, but that Tickell's was the best that ever was made. . . . The palm is now given universally to Pope; but I think the first lines of Tickell's were rather to be preferred, and Pope seems to have since borrowed something from them in the correction of his own."—DR. JOHNSON: Life of Tickell, in his Lives of the Poets, P. Cunningham's ed., 1854, ii. 321, 323. See, also, Tickell's Poems, 1779, sn. 8vo, (Johnson's English Poets.)

See specimens of Tickell's version in Blackw. Mag., xxix. 670 et seq., and same in Professor Wilson's Works, viii., (1857:) Homer and his Translators. 10. An Epistle from a Lady in England to a Gentleman at Avignon, 1717. Anon. Five editions. In defence of the royal cause, during the dispute on the Hanoverian succession. Tickell's poems will be found in Chalmers's English Poets, vol. xi., and some of them in several of the collections of the British poets. An American edition of his Poems was published Boston, 1854, 16mo. See, also, PARNELL, THOMAS. The longest of his other poems not here noticed is Kensington Garden, first published in 1722: a greater favourite was his ballad of Colin and Lucy. He contemplated a translation of the whole of the Iliad, (which he abandoned in favour, or fear, of Pope,) and commenced translations of the Odyssey and Lucan; nor should it be forgotten that he contributed papers to The Spectator and The Guardian; but his fame will ever rest on his Elegy to Addison, prefixed to his edition of that poet's Works, (1721, 4 vols. 4to, some 1. p.), of which Dr. Johnson declares that there is not "a more sublime or more elegant funeral poem to be found in the whole compass of English literature." This eulogy has not escaped criticism; and Steele's verdict that the Elegy is only "prose in rhyme" has been recently (Knight's Eng. Cyc., Biog., vi., 1858, 52) cordially endorsed. Yet Johnson's commendation is supported by eminent authorities:

"This Elegy by Mr. Tickell is one of the finest in our language. There is so little new that can be said upon the death of a friend, after the complaints of Ovid and the Latin Italians in this way, that one is surprised to see so much novelty in this to strike us, and so much interest to affect."—GOLDSMITH.

"Many tributes were paid to the memory of Addison; but one alone is now remembered. Tickell bewailed his friend in an elegy which would do honour to the greatest name in our literature, and which unites the energy and magnificence of Dryden to the tenderness and purity of Cowper."—LORD MACAULAY: Life and Writings of Addison, (ut supra.)

"Tickell's verses on Addison's death perfect. Liked much of his Kensington."—C. J. Fox: Recollec. by S. Rogers, 1859, 58.

Ticknor, George, LL.D. For the following excellent biographical sketch of the historian of Spanish literature, I am indebted to a distinguished scholar, who stated that he "should be better pleased not to appear as the author." This decision—and, alas! it is now too late to solicit its reconsideration—I am bound to respect. Justice to myself—for I would not use as my own the production of another—demands that I say thus much; duty to my trust forbids me to say more.

"George Ticknor, a distinguished historical writer and man of letters, was born at Boston, Massachusetts, on the first of August, 1791. From a very early age he showed a passion for books, which, under the judicious nurture which he received at home, became still stronger as he grew in years. While yet a boy, he passed his examination for admission into Dartmouth College, Hanover, where he took his degree when hardly sixteen years old. Far from regarding this as the completion of his education, he wisely considered it as only the beginning of it. On returning home, he gave three years more to his favourite studies. In order to get a more thorough acquaintance with the ancients, he became a pupil of the Rev. Dr. Gardiner, an excellent divine, eminent for his classical attainments, and who had received his own education under the celebrated Dr. Parr.

"When nineteen years old, Mr. Ticknor entered the office of an eminent lawyer in Boston, and after the usual term of preparation was regularly admitted to the bar. But, although he had pursued his professional studies with assiduity, he was satisfied that his vocation—or, at least, his taste—lay in the direction of letters rather than of law. His father's circumstances were, fortunately, such as to enable the young student to consult his taste in the selection of his profession. Having thus chosen his career, Mr. Ticknor now resolved to make himself a scholar in the best sense of the word. In 1815 he went to Europe, where the well-stored libraries and admirable apparatus for instruction gave him greater facilities for accomplishing his purpose than he could have found in his own country. Two years he passed at Göttingen, attending the lectures of the University, and devoting himself to philological studies, especially to the ancient classics. Two years longer he remained in Europe, chiefly on the Continent, passing most of his time in the principal capitals, as affording obvious advantages for a critical study of the national literatures. During his absence he was [in 1817] appointed to fill the chair of Smith Professor of Modern Languages and Literature in Harvard College, Cambridge; and he accepted an office so congenial with his own taste and previous studies. In 1819 he returned to the United States, bringing with him a valuable library which he had collected in the different European capitals. This, in time, has grown to be one of the largest private collections in the country, and, for the rarity and importance of the books, is unsurpassed, in some of its departments, by any private collection in Europe. This is especially true of those departments which came within the range of his professorship, and which were admirably supplied with whatever could throw light on the academic career on which he was to enter. Lectures on modern literature form one of the chief duties of the Smith professor. Mr. Ticknor during his connection with the university gave long and elaborate courses on both the French and Spanish literatures. He also entered into a critical analysis of such writers as Dante, Götthe, Milton, Shakspeare,—those master-spirits who have stamped the peculiar character of their genius on the poetry of their nations. The audience of the lectures, instead of being confined to students, was increased by persons without the walls of the college, attracted not merely by the interest of the subject, but by the skill exhibited by the critic, his luminous and often eloquent diction, and the impressive manner of his delivery. After holding his office for fifteen years, Mr. Ticknor [in 1835] resigned it, preparatory to another visit to Europe, where he proposed to spend some years with his family. His labours were attended with signal benefit to the university. He was the first professor on the Smith foundation, and the duty devolved on him of giving a complete organization to the department, which includes a number of teachers. He, moreover, during his connection with Harvard, suggested several valuable improvements in the system of discipline, for which he had derived the hints from the German universities. Finally, he had greatly extended the range of intellectual culture among the students at the university, where literary instruction had hitherto been confined to the classics. Mr. Ticknor spent three years in his second visit to Europe, and after his return set about the preparation of his great work. At the close of 1849 the 'History of Spanish Literature' made its appearance in England and the United States. Humboldt, in a letter dated [June 19, 1850] shortly after its publication, pronounced its panegyric in a single sentence, declaring it 'a masterly work.' The judgment of the illustrious German was speedily confirmed by that of the leading journals both in Europe and our own country. The nature of the subject, it might be thought, would have restricted the demand for the book to a comparatively small number of readers. But the extent of the sales—to the credit of our country—proved the contrary, confirming the remark of the Edinburgh Review, [Oct. 1850, 400.] that 'perhaps of all compositions of the kind Mr. Ticknor's work has the most successfully combined popularity of style with sound criticism and extensive research within its own department.' The edition published in England met with the most cordial reception from the scholars of that country; while in Germany and in Spain translations soon appeared, under the auspices of eminent men of letters, who have added to the value of their labours by their own annotations. It is unnecessary to go into the discussion of a work the merits of which have been so well established in both hemispheres. We will dismiss it with the remark that, although purporting to be simply a history of literature, it is conducted on such principles as to exhibit most vividly the social civilization of the Peninsula; and, independently of its stores of bibliographical information for the use of the scholar, it will be no less serviceable to the student of history, who would acquaint himself with the character and condition of the Spaniard and see in what manner they have been affected by the peculiar institutions of the country."

To this sketch, written early in 1855, I append a supplement.

The first edition of the History of Spanish Literature, published, as we have seen, in 1849, (N. York, Harper & Brothers, 3 vols. 8vo; London, John Murray, 3 vols. 8vo,) was followed by a second edition (publishers ut supra) in 1854, 3 vols. 8vo, and by a third American edition, corrected and enlarged, Boston, Ticknor & Fields, 1863, 3 vols. 12mo. To these are to be added the following translations: I. Historia de la Literatura Española, por M. G. Ticknor; traducida al Castellano, con Adiciones y Notas críticas, por Don Pascual de Gayangos y Don Enrique de Vedia, Madrid, 1851-57, 4 vols. 8vo. II. Geschichte der Schönen-Literatur in Spanien, von Georg Ticknor; Deutsch mit Zusätzen herausgegeben, von Nikolaus Heinrich Julius, Leipzig, 1852, 2 vols. 8vo. See a notice of these translations in N. Amer. Rev., lxxvi. (Jan. 1853) 256. III. In French, by Magnabal, in preparation, 1870.

From the many reviews of this admirable work lying before me, a few lines each from eight or nine, written in different countries, must suffice:

"No one that has not been in Spain can feel half the merit of your work; but to those who have, it is a perpetual banquet. . . . It is well worth a lifetime to achieve such a work."—Washington Irving to the Author, Feb. 15, 1850: Irving's Life and Letters, iv. 69.

"Mr. Ticknor, who has displayed the resources of a well-stored and accomplished mind in his recent work on the Literature of Spain."—EARL OF CARLISLE: Two Lects. on the Poetry of Pope, and on his Travels in America, 1851.

"The work is, by general consent, the most complete history of Spanish literature in any language, full, minute, and precise in information, and eminently fair and candid in spirit. The author appears in his researches almost to have exhausted existing materials, whether bibliographical or biographical,—overlooking nothing and neglecting nothing."—Knight's Eng. Cyc., Biog., vi. 1858, 52.

ment au-dessus des livres de Bouterwek et de Sismondi."—TESCHNER: Bulletin du Bibliophile, Paris, 1850.

"Observaciones sobre la Historia de la Literatura Española, de Jorge Ticknor, ciudadano de los Estados-Unidos: por Don Andres Bello.

"La necesidad de una obra de esta especie se había hecho sentir largo tiempo en el estudio de la literatura española; i nos complacemos en anunciar que Mr. Ticknor ha llenado del modo mas satisfactorio este vacío. No solo ha concentrado, juzgado i rectificado cuanto se había escrito sobre el mismo asunto dentro i fuera de España, sino que a lo ya conocido añade de su propio caudal multitud de datos biográficos i bibliográficos que estaban al alcance de pocos, i que ha sabido traer a colación con mucha oportunidad i discernimiento. Los aficionados a las letras castellanas hallarán en el erudito Norte-Americano un juez inteligente, capaz de apreciar lo bello i grande bajo las formas peculiares de cada país i cada siglo; tan ajeno del vigorismo superficial que califica las producciones del injenio por las reglas convencionales de un sistema esclusivo, como de las ilusiones de aquellos que se saborean, no solo con lo tosco i bárbaro, sino hasta con lo trivial i rústico, si pertenecen a épocas o jeneros predilectos; desarraigan uno i otro nada raros, el primero en los siglos anteriores al nuestro, i el segundo en nuestros dias. Pero lo que mas realiza esta obra es, a mi juicio, la parte historica, el encadenamiento filosófico de los hechos, la sagacidad con que se rastrean las fuentes, la lucidez con que se pone a nuestra vista el desarrollo del jenio nacional en los varios ramos de literatura," &c.—Anales de la Universidad de Chile, Santiago, 1852, p. 197.

Mr. Ticknor's great work was preceded by several minor publications, viz.: 1. Syllabus of a Course of Lectures on the History and Criticism of Spanish Literature, Camb., 1823, 8vo, pp. 88. See Prescott's Ferd. and Isab., 11th ed., 1856, ii. 249, n., and his Miscell., ed. 1855, 126, 635, n. 2. Outlines of the Principal Events in the Life of General Lafayette, (from N. Amer. Rev., Jan. 1825, 147-180,) Bost., 1825, 8vo; Portland, 1825, 8vo; Lon., 1826, 8vo; in French, Paris, 1825, 8vo.

Joseph Buckminster and the Rev. Joseph Stevens Buckminster, (from Chris. Exam., Sept. 1849,) Camb., 1849, 8vo, pp. 29. He has also contributed to A Memorial of Daniel Webster from the City of Boston, 1853, 8vo, (see N. Amer. Rev., lxxvi. 263,) to Duyekineck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit., and to this Dictionary, (see BYRON, GEORGE GORDON, LORD SCOTT, SIR WALTER, &c.,) and in earlier life wrote a number of papers for The Monthly Anthology, North American Review, American Quarterly Review, (see especially iv. 308, on The Early Spanish Drama,) Christian Examiner, &c. His eloquent tribute to the virtues, learning, and accomplishments of the most intimate of his friends will be found in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society in Respect to the Memory of William Hickling Prescott, Feb. 1, 1859, Bost., 1859, 8vo, (see pp. 6-10, 29;) and he has since published: 9. Life of William Hickling Prescott, Bost., Ticknor & Fields, 1864, 4to, (illustrated,) 8vo, (Library,) and 12mo, (Popular;) Lon., Routledge, 1864, 8vo.

"We have in the work before us a delightful addition to the class of literary biography, for which we venture to predict a wide and enduring popularity. It is the biography of one who was not only an eminent man of letters, but also, in his private character and personal relations, one of the most frank, amiable, warm-hearted, and open-hearted of human beings. It is written by a man who from early youth was his intimate friend, and knew and understood him as well as one man can know and understand another,—whom all the common friends of the two would have pointed out as the most proper person to do the work which he has done."—GEORGE S. HILLARD: N. Amer. Rev., Jan. 1864, 1.

"His biographer—a life-long friend—appears to have wrought in a similar spirit, and to have produced a memoir whose perfect adequacy to its end leaves hardly any scope for criticism."—Lon. Reader, 1864, i. 258.

See, also, Atlantic Mon., Jan. 1864, and Amer. Quar. Church Rev. and Eccles. Reg., July, 1864.

"Our best literary biography, in the strict sense of the term, is Ticknor's 'Life of Prescott.' It is the work of a scholar and a friend; its facts are drawn from intimate personal knowledge; its spirit is inspired by rare intellectual sympathy, and its execution controlled by disciplined taste."—New York Tribune, Feb. 5, 1870.

This is a labour of love which the subject of it but little foresaw:

"I suppose," he remarked to Mr. Milburn, only a few hours before his sudden death, "that Ticknor will never write another book; but he has been doing perhaps better for the community and posterity, by devoting himself for several years to the interests of the Boston City Library, which may be taken in good part as his work; and a more valuable contribution to the good of the people has seldom been made. It is a rare thing for such an institution to get a man so qualified, by taste, knowledge, and accomplishment, to look after its interests with such energy and patience."—Prescott Memorial, N. York, 1859, xxvi.

But, as we have seen, Mr. Ticknor was to write at least one "other book,"—the Life of the friend of many years, who thus praised him from a full heart. On looking over Prescott's letters to myself, I find the following lines under date of Dec. 4, 1854:

"I hope it will be long before I am called on to do the good turn to my friend Ticknor of writing his obituary."

Mr. Ticknor has also since commemorated the talents and virtues of another friend, in his—10. Remarks on the Character of the Late Edward Everett, made at a Meeting of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Jan. 30, 1865; from the Memorial of Edward Everett, 1865, r. 8vo, i. p., pp. 16.

I should not forget to add, as a proof that Mr. Ticknor's zeal on behalf of the Public Library of the City of Boston has lost nothing of its ardour, that in 1860 he contributed to its shelves at one time nearly two thousand volumes.

Tighe, Mary, the daughter of the Rev. William Blachford, by Theodosia, the daughter of William Tighe, of Rosanna, co. Wicklow, Ireland, was married to Henry Tighe, M.P., of Woodstock, co. Wicklow, and d. March 24, 1810, after an illness of six years. Perhaps she is better known to many as the subject of Moore's touching lyric, "I saw Thy Form in Youthful Prime," and Mrs. Hemans's "Grave of a Poetess," than by her own exquisite verses. Her poem of Psyche, or the Legend of Love, (founded on the story of Cupid and Psyche as related in the Golden Ass of Apuleius), was privately printed (100 copies) by C. Whittingham, Lon., 1805, 12mo, pp. 214. After her death appeared: Psyche, with other Poems, by the Late Mrs. Henry Tighe, (with portrait,) 1811, large 4to, pp. 314; 3d ed., 1811, 8vo; Phila., 1812, 12mo; again, Lon., 1812, 8vo; 1813, 8vo; 1816, 8vo; Psyche, 1843, 24mo; also pub. with Apuleius's Golden Ass, 1853, p. 8vo, (Bohn's Class. Lib., li.) Psyche, written in the Spenserian stanza, managed with great skill, is in six cantos.

"The Psyche of Mrs. Tighe has a languid beauty, probably resembling that of her person. . . . See, also, Ecler. Rev., N.S., xxiii. 343, 360; Horne's Bibl. Bib., 335.

In 1789 he became a co-proprietor and the editor of The Star, and retained this connection until 1823; in 1798 he issued No. 1 of the Philosophical Magazine, (see NICHOLSON, WILLIAM; PERCY, SHOLTO and REUBEN; PHILLIPS, RICHARD; TAYLOR, RICHARD; THOMSON, THOMAS, M.D.,) and to this devoted many of his hours, until the illness which terminated his life. He also edited the Mechanic's Oracle, No. 1, July, 1824, (a weekly,) which was discontinued soon after his death. See the obituary notices of Dr. Tilloch in Imp. Mag., Lit. Chron., Philos. Mag., and Lon. Gent. Mag., all 1825.

Tillotson, John, D.D., the son of a Puritan clothier, was b. at Sowerby, Yorkshire; became a pensioner of Clare Hall, Cambridge, 1647, and a Fellow, 1651; left the Presbyterians, submitted to the Act of Uniformity, and became Curate of Cheshunt, Hertford, 1661-62; Rector of Kedington, Suffolk, 1663; Preacher to Lincoln's Inn and Lecturer at St. Lawrence Jewry, both in 1664; Preb. of Canterbury, 1669-70; Dean of Canterbury, 1672; Preb. of St. Paul's, 1675; Canon-Residentary of St. Paul's, 1677; Dean of St. Paul's, 1689; Archbishop of Canterbury,—greatly against his will,—1691; d. Nov. 22, 1694.

"He was buried in the church of St. Lawrence Jewry, near Guildhall. It was there that he had won his immense oratorical reputation. He had preached there during the thirty years which preceded his elevation to the throne of Canterbury. . . . His remains were carried through a mourning population. The hearse was followed by an endless train of splendid equipages from Lambeth through Southwark and over London Bridge. Burnet preached the funeral sermon. His kind and honest heart was overpowered by so many tender recollections that, in the midst of his discourse, he paused and burst in to tears, while a loud moan of sorrow rose from the whole assembly. The Queen could not speak of her favourite instructor without weeping. Even William was visibly moved. 'I have lost,' he said, 'the best friend that I ever had, and the best man that I ever knew.' . . . Such was his fame among his contemporaries that those sermons—left in MS.—were purchased by the booksellers for the almost incredible sum of two thousand five hundred guineas, the equivalent, in the wretched state in which the silver coin then was, to at least three thousand six hundred pounds. Such a price had never before been given in England for any copyright."—LORD MACAULAY: Hist. of Eng., iv. ch. xx. See, also, ch. xviii.; iii. ch. xl., xiv.; ii. ch. vi.; v., Notes to vol. iv.

EDITIONS OF TILLOTSON'S WORKS.

Tillotson himself published many single sermons and discourses, The Rule of Faith, 1666, 8vo, 2d ed., 1676, 8vo, 3d ed., 1688, 8vo, and several volumes of sermons, viz.: Sermons on Several Occasions, 1671, 8vo; same, with the addition of vol. ii., 1678, 8vo; Twelve Sermons, 1686, 8vo; Fifty-four Sermons, and the Rule of Faith, 1691, fol., (again, 1699, fol.; 1710, fol.) Four Sermons concerning the Divinity and Incarnation of our Blessed Saviour, 1693; Six Sermons on Several Occasions, 1694, 8vo, (vol. ii. pub. by Dr. Ralph Barker, 1696, 8vo.) Dr. Ralph Barker, his chaplain, edited his posthumous Sermons, (vide infra), pub. 1694, 14 vols. 8vo; again, 1695, &c., 14 vols. 8vo; 1704, 14 vols. 8vo. A collective edition of his Works—254 Sermons, Rule of Faith, Prayers, &c.—followed, in 3 vols. fol.: i., containing all the Sermons and Treatises published by himself, 1707; again, 1710; ii., iii., Sermons published after his decease by Dr. Ralph Barker, 1712. Later editions: 1712, 3 vols. fol.; 1714, 3 vols. fol.; 1717, 3 vols. fol.; 1720, 3 vols. fol.; 1722, 3 vols. fol.; 1723, 3 vols. fol.; 1728, 3 vols. fol.; 10th ed., 1735, 5 vols. fol.; 1738, 3 vols. fol.; 1739, 10 vols. 8vo; 1742, 10 vols. 8vo; 1742, 12 vols. 8vo; 1743, 12 vols. 8vo; Edin. and Glasg., 1747, 10 vols. 8vo; Lon., (Tonson,) with portrait by Nixon, 1748, 12 vols. sm. 8vo, also called 12mo, and in 18mo; with Life by Thomas Birch, D.D., [q. v.] compiled from his Original Papers and Letters, with portrait by Ravenet, 1752, 3 vols. fol. This is the best folio edition. The Life by Birch was also pub. separately, 1752, 8vo, 1753, 8vo, 1756, 8vo. Later editions: 1757, 12 vols. 8vo; Edin., 1760, 10 vols. 12mo; 1772, 10 vols. 12mo; Lon., 1796, fol., with Life by Birch, and Index, 1820, 10 vols. 8vo, £5 5s.: best library edition. Wisdom of Being Religious, new ed., 12mo. See, also, Morning Exercise at Cripplegate, 1709, 8vo; Tracts of Angl. Fathers, iv. 50. There are also: A Seasonable Vindication of the Trinity, collected from the Works of Dr. Tillotson and Edward Stillingfleet, by Wm. Assheton, 1697, 8vo; Tillotson's Maxims and Discourses, Methodized by Laurence Eehard, 1719, 8vo; his Sentiments of Popery, 1745, 8vo; Twenty of his Sermons, Abridged by David Henry, 8vo, 12mo, and 18mo; 2d ed., 1763; 4th ed., 1779; Nineteen of his Sermons, Selected, &c. by the Rev. R. R. Balderstone, 1810, 8vo; Twenty of his Sermons, 1820, 12mo; Thirty-two of his Sermons, Selected and Abridged, with Life, &c., by the Rev. John Dakins, 1822, 2 vols. 8vo. TILLOTSON'S STYLE.

Addison considered Tillotson the chief standard of our tongue; Locke recommends his works as models of perspicuity and propriety of language; Dr. Doddridge pronounces "his method admirably clear beyond almost any other man;" Dryden's opinion has been already quoted, (p. 524, supra: quotation from Congreve.)

One of the most eminent of his contemporaries tells us,

"He was not only the best preacher of the age, but seemed to have brought preaching to perfection; his sermons were so well heard and liked, and so much read, that all the nation proposed him as a pattern and studied to copy after him."—BISHOP BURNET: Hist. of Our Times, ed. 1833, 242.

"Tillotson taught by his sermons more ministers to preach well, and more people to live well, than any man since the apostles' days. He was the ornament of the last century, and the glory of his function; in the pulpit, another Chrysostom; and in the episcopal chair, a second Crammer."—Wilford's Memorials.

"The way to obtain this [perspicuity] is to read such books as are allowed to be writ with the greatest clearness and propriety, in the language that a man uses. An author excellent in this faculty, as well as several others, is Dr. Tillotson, late Archbishop of Canterbury, in all that is published of his."—JOHN LOCKE: Some Thoughts concerning Reading and Study.

"Art, eloquence, and perspicuity appear in the utmost perfection in Tillotson's sermons; and when I would labour to compose a sermon, I would prepare my mind, and consequently my style, with reading some few of those discourses beforehand."—DR. WATSON: On Studying Divinity.

"Happy is the man who can form his style on that of Tillotson!"—DEAN STANHOPE.

"He is all over natural and easy in the most unconstrained and freest elegance of thoughts and words: his course, both in his reasoning and his style, like a gentle and an even current, is clear and deep, and calm and strong. His language is so pure, no water can be more; it floweth with so free, uninterrupted a stream, that it never stoppeth the reader or itself. Every word possesseth its proper place."—DR. H. FELTON.

"His sermons interest the heart and convince the understanding. Ease and perspicuity, good sense and sincere piety, are their distinguishing character. His many excellencies considered, he will forever remain the boast of this nation, as one of its best writers, and probably as its ablest divine."—ARCHDEACON TODD.

"The unaffected of every country nearly resemble each other, and a page of our Confucius and your Tillotson have scarce any material difference."—GOLDSMITH.

"By reading Tillotson's works with care and observation, you will not only learn true notions of religion, but also the way and manner of writing English correctly and purely. His style I take to be the best standard of the English language."—ROBERT NELSON: Letters to George Harper.

Bickersteth thought his "notions of religion" not unexceptionable:

"His low views of sacrifices have been justly commented on by Archbishop Magee, [Discourses on the Atonement, ii. 219-231.] It is the general withholding of the all-enlivening and vivifying doctrines of the gospel, and frequent statements which tend another way, (statements to which the excesses of former times seem to have given rise,) that form our grand objections to the divinity of Tillotson."—Christian Student, 4th ed., 285. See, also, GIBSON, EDMUND, No. 9, (quotation from Bickersteth.)

"Tillotson's method is clear; his notions of religion are much in the Arminian strain; his style is defective both in harmony of numbers and energy of manner."—DR. WILLIAMS: Christian Student, 5th ed., 316.

"Simplicity is the great beauty of Archbishop Tillotson's manner. . . . His style is always pure, indeed, and perspicuous, but careless and remiss; too often feeble and languid; little beauty in the construction of his sentences, which are frequently suffered to drag unharmoniously; seldom any attempt towards strength or sublimity."—DR. BLAIR: Rhetoric and B-L, Lect. XIX., (q. v.) See, also, Lects. X., XI., XIII., XV.

"You cannot sleep with Taylor; you cannot forbear thinking with Barrow. But you may be much at your ease in the midst of a long lecture from Tillotson,—clear and rational and equable as he is. Perhaps the last quality may account for it."—BISHOP WARBURTON: Letters from a Late Em. Prelate, Lett. I.

"Without soaring to the height of eloquence, Tillotson refined the language of the pulpit."—CHATEAUBRIAND: Sketches of Eng. Lit., ii. 195.

"Tillotson's merit is unquestionably great; . . . but there are those who venture to suggest that he has been too much celebrated as a model of fine composition."—DR. KNOX.

"His words are frequently ill chosen, and almost always ill placed; his periods are both tedious and unharmonious, as his metaphors are generally mean, and often ridiculous."—WILLIAM MELMOTH: Fitzosborne's Letters.

"I should not advise a preacher at this day to imitate Tillotson's style; though I don't know; I should be cautious of objecting to what has been applauded by so many suffrages."—DR. JOHNSON: Life, by Boswell, ch. xlii.

"He [Johnson] could but just endure the smooth verbosity of Tillotson."—SIR JOHN HAWKINS.

"The sermons of Tillotson were for half a century more read than any in our language. They are now bought almost as waste paper, and hardly read at all. Such is the fickleness of religious taste, as abundantly numerous instances would prove. Tillotson is reckoned verbose and languid. He has not the former defect in nearly so great a degree as some of his eminent predecessors; but there is certainly little vigour or vivacity in his style. . . . Tillotson is always of a tolerant and catholic spirit, enforcing right actions rather than orthodox opinions and obnoxious, for that and other reasons, to all the bigots of his own age."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, iii. 297.

See, also, STILLINGFLEET, EDWARD, D.D., (quotations from Hallam and Burnet.)

"Archbishop Tillotson has pronounced an authoritative opinion in favour of Natural Religion as essential to the proof of Revealed. His admirable sermons abound in such statements,—thus, in the 41st. . . . The sermon on Steadfastness in Religion, one of the Archbishop's great masterpieces, and in which he demonstrates against Rome the right of private judgment, tallies with the 41st in the doctrine on Natural Religion."—LORD BROUGHAM: Discourse on Natural Theology, ed. 1856, 135, n.

"Mary [Queen of England] had a way of interrupting tattle about elopements, duels, and play-debts, by asking the tattlers, very quietly, yet significantly, whether they had ever read her favourite sermon, Dr. Tillotson's on Evil-Speaking. . . . Tillotson still keeps his place as a legitimate English critic. His brightest flights were indeed far below those of Taylor, of Barrow, and of South; but his oratory was more correct and equable than theirs. . . . His style is not brilliant; but it is pure, transparently clear, and equally free from the levity and from the stiffness which disfigure the sermons of some eminent divines of the seventeenth century. . . . The greatest charm of his compositions, however, is derived from the benignity and candour which appear in every line, and which shine forth not less conspicuously in his life than in his writings."—LORD MACAULAY: Hist. of Eng., iii. ch. xi., xiv.

Tindal, Matthew, LL.D., b. at Beer-Ferres, Devonshire, about 1657, studied at Lincoln College, Oxford, afterwards at Exeter College, and was finally elected to a law fellowship at All Souls'; LL.D., 1685, and soon afterwards joined the R. Catholic Church, in which he attended mass for the last time at Candemas, 1688,—publicly receiving the sacrament in his college chapel at Easter following; resided chiefly in London, where he frequently sat as Judge in the Court of Delegates, and d. there, August 16, 1733. 1. "This was not only the most important work that Deism had yet produced, composed with care, and bearing the marks of thoughtful study of the chief contemporary arguments, Christian as well as Deist, but derives an interest from the circumstance that it was the book to which, more than to any other single work, Bishop Butler's Analogy was designed as a reply."—FARRAR: Crit. Hist. of Free Thought, 1863, Lect. IV., (q. v.) See, also, Notes, Lect. VIII., p. 49.

Tindal left for publication a sequel in MS., but Bishop Gibson would not permit it to see the light. For further notices of Tindal and his works, we refer to Bliss's Wood's Athen. Oxon.; *Biog. Tindal, Nicholas, nephew of the preceding, was b. in Devonshire, 1687; M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, 1713; chosen Fellow of Trinity College; Vicar of Great Waltham, Essex, and Rector of Alverstoke, Hampshire; obtained the living of Colborne, Isle of Wight, 1740; became Chaplain of Greenwich Hospital; d. 1774. 1. History of Essex, Nos. 1 and 2, 1720, 4to. No more published. 2. Antiquities, Sacred and Profane: vol. 1., Lon., 1727, 4to. In Nos.: never completed. From the French Dissertations of A. Calmet. 3. History of England; translated from the French of M. de Rapin Thoyras, with Additional Notes, 1720–31, 21 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1732–33, weekly Nos., 2 vols. fol.; 3d ed., 1743, 2 vols. fol. (Trans. of the Continuation of Rapin's History, by Thomas Lediard, 1732–36, 3 vols. fol.) Continuation from 1688 to the Accession of King George II., by Tindal, 1744–47, in weekly Nos., 2 vols. in 3 Parts, fol.; 2d ed., 1751, 2 vols. fol. New edits. of the History and Continuation: 1755, 2 vols. 8vo; continued to 1757, 1757–59, 21 vols. 8vo; 1784–89, 5 vols. fol. There are some of the octavo ed. dated 1745 and 1747, and some of the folio ed. dated 1761. Of the Rapin and Tindal, 1743–47, 5 vols. fol., some of the former are on large and largest paper, and some of the latter are on fine paper. If you wish the best folio impression of the whole, (see collation in Bohn's Lowndes, 2047,) get the five vols. 1734–47, or 1734–51, (which include the Medallio History, 1745, also pub. sep.) if you seek the best octavo edition, secure that of 1757–59, 21 vols. 8vo. The portraits by Houbraken and engravings by Vertue add to the value of Rapin and Tindal's volumes. The Abridgment, or Summary, at the end of the Continuation, (also pub. sep. 1747, 3 vols. 8vo,) is ascribed to Philip Morant, who is said to have aided Tindal in the History and Continuation. Archdeacon Coxo asserts (Mem. of Sir R. Walpole, Pref.) that the Continuation was "principally written by Dr. [Thomas] Birch,"—assisted by "persons of political eminence." He praises the Continuation highly; both this and the History are very valuable.

Toker, Mrs. Anna, formerly Miss De Burgh. The Lady and the Lawyers; or, Honesty is the Best Policy, 1860.

Toland, John, (baptized Janus Junius,) b. in Londonderry, 1669 or 1670, of Roman Catholic parents, in his 16th year became a zealous Protestant, and at one time bade fair to be a Dissenting divine. Later in life, though still at times professing Christianity, he figured as a Pantheist and an enemy to revealed religion. He studied at the Universities of Glasgow, Edinburgh, and Leyden, spent some time amidst the learned men and books of Oxford, and acquired a larger fund of recondite lore than he was able to use to the good of himself or others. A life of unprofitable literary activity was arrested by death at Putney, March 11, 1722. Of his many treatises— theological, practical, and biographical, a few of which are in Latin—we notice:

1. Christianity not Mysterious, Lon., 1696, 8vo; 2d ed., with additions, Amst., 1702, 8vo. This infidel production (not admitted to be such by the author) was answered by Mr. Becconsal, Mr. Beverly, Mr. John Norris, Dr. Payne, Mr. Syngé, (afterwards Archbishop of Tuam), Peter Browne, (afterwards Bishop of Cork,) &c. See, also, LOCKE, JOHN, No. 5, (p. 1114.) By 1760 at least fifty-four answers had appeared. See Leland's Deist. Writers, Lett. IV.; Farrar's Crit. Hist. of Free Thought, 1862, Lect. IV., n. 31. After the publication of the 2d edition he withdrew it from sale. He answered some of his opponents in—2. An Apology for Mr. Toland, Lon., 1697, and No. 5. 3. Amyntor; or, A Defence of Milton's Life, and Various Notes now Added, 1699, 8vo; 1761, 8vo. See MILTON, JOHN, pp. 1299, 1322; HOLLIS, THOMAS, No. 1. This attack upon the Canon of the New Testament was answered by Samuel Clarke, D.D., (p. 392, supra), Jeremiah Jones, (q. v., No. 2.) Stephen Nye, (q. v., No. 2.) John Richardson, (q. v., No. 1.) &c. See Leland's Deist. Writers, Lett. IV. 4. Anglia Libera, 1701, 8vo. 5. Vindicius Liberius, 1702, 8vo. 6. Letters to Serena, (i.e. the Queen of Prussia,) 1704. 7. Socinianism Truly Stated, 1705. In the preface he designates himself a Pantheist. 8. Dissertationes duæ: Adeisidæmon et Origines Judaice, Hag. Com., 1709, 8vo. Vide Mélange de Remarques, &c., par El Benoist, Delft, 1712, 8vo. 9. Nazarenus, Lon., 1718, 8vo. See PATERSON, JAMES, No. 1. 10. Tetradyms, (four treatises,) 1720, 8vo. 11. Pantheisticon Cosmopolit., 1720, 8vo. Only a few copies privately printed: see De Bure. In English, Lon., 1750, 8vo. 12. Impartial History of Michael Servetus, 1724, 8vo. 13. A Collection of Several Pieces of Mr. John Toland, now first published from his Original Manuscripts, with some Memoirs of his Life and Writings, (by P. Des Maizeaux,) 1726, 2 vols. 8vo; again, 1747, 2 vols. 8vo. The History of the Druids, in this Collection, was republished, with a Life of Toland, Notes, &c., by Robert Huddleston, Montrose, 1844, 8vo. Some of his MSS. are still unpublished. Tomline, Sir George Pretymann, D.D., the son of George Pretymann, (the son added Tomline, for an estate, in 1803,) a tradesman of Bury St. Edmund's, was b. in that town, October 9, 1750; graduated A.B. (being Senior Wrangler and first of Smith's Classics) at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, 1772; Fellow and Public Tutor of his college, and private tutor to William Pitt, all in 1773; Rector of Corwen, Merionethshire, 1782; Preb. of Westminster, 1784; Rector of Sudbourne-cum-Offord, Suffolk, 1785; Bishop of Lincoln 1813; trans. to Winchester, 1820; d. Nov. 14, 1827. When Pitt was made First Lord of the Treasury, Tomline became his secretary, was by his influence from time to time promoted, and remained with him until he became Bishop of Lincoln. At the proving of his will his personal effects were sworn under £200,000. See Lon. Gent. Mag., 1828, i. 201. (Memoir.) 1. Sermon, Soc. P. G. F. This is called the 14th ed.; but the ed. of 1823, 2 vols. 8vo, was called the 15th ed., and the ed. of 1834, 2 vols. 8vo, was called the 16th ed. There was also an ed. in 1837, 8vo. An Abridgment by Rev. S. Clapham was pub. 1802, 8vo, (see Lon. Gent. Mag., lxxiii. 258,) and another in SMITH, J. B., D.D., No. 2. Animadversions on, by Dr. William Frend, appeared 1800, 8vo. Bishop Marsh (Lectures) and Dr. Stebbing (Pref. to his ed.) commend the Elements; Dr. E. Williams (C. Preacher) disapproves of the work, but allows it the merit of "much useful information." See, also, Green's Diary of a Lover of Lit., 1810, 4to, 220. It was divided into two volumes, each sold as a separate work, viz.: I. Introduction to the Study of the Bible; being the First Volume of the Elements of Christian Theology, 20th ed., 1845, fp. 8vo. An ad. pub. 1846, 12mo, is called the 19th ed.

"The possessor of that book [Tomline's Refutation] may felicitate himself on having a very fair compendium of Roman Catholic divinity."—J. PRY SMITH, D.D.

10. Charge, 1812, 4to; Dubl., 1812, 8vo. Severely censured in Edin. Rev., Feb. 1813, 91–102, by Rev. Sydney Smith: repub. in his Works, ed. 1854, i. 464–76; see, also, iii. 381, 391. The bishop was not in favour of granting relief from all political disabilities to Roman Catholics. "It is impossible," remarks Sydney Smith, in 1839, "to conceive the mischief which this mean and cunning prelate did at this period." (1812–13.) 11. Charge, Lon., 1822, 4to. See, also, PITT, RT. HON. WILLIAM, No. 2. Mathias's opinion of Bishop Tomline was more favourable than Sydney Smith's:

"He is a man of great learning, discernment, and ability; his writings are, in my opinion, distinguished by singular temper and moderation, by accuracy and a clear perception of the subject which he is treating, and by a zeal according to knowledge." (1796.)—Paradise of Lit., Dial. Third, n. 39. See, also, Introd. Lett. to ed. 1798.

Tomline was severely (it has been thought unjustly) satirized in the Probationary Odes for the Laureateship.

Tonna, Charlotte Elizabeth, only daughter of the Rev. Michael Browne, of Norwich, was b. in that city about 1792; married Captain George Phelan, R. Army, and after his death was united to L. H. J. Tonna; d. at Ramsgate, July 12, 1846. Under the name of Charlotte Elizabeth, she published many religious books and a number of tracts,—widely circulated and very useful,—of which it will be sufficient to give the titles of those comprehended in the American uniform edition in 12 vols. 16mo, pub. by C. Scribner, New York. Contents: Personal Recollections, with a Memoir by L. H. J. Tonna; Helen Fleetwood; Judah's Lion; Judaea Capta; The Siege of Derry; Letters from Ireland; The Rockite; Floral Biography; Principalities and Powers; Passing Thoughts; Falsehood and Truth; Izram, a Mexican Tale; Asrie, a Missionary Tale; Conformity; The Convent Bell, a Tale.

There is another American edition,—The Works of Charlotte Elizabeth, (Mrs. Tonna,) with an Introduction by Mrs. H. B. Stowe, N. York, 1845, 3 vols. 8vo,—and a collection entitled Charlotte Elizabeth Stories, new ed., Sheldon & Co., N. York, 1868, 8 vols. 16mo. Of some of her principal works the last London editions are: Floral Biography, 1860, 12mo; Judah's Lion, 24th 1000, 1868, cr. 8vo; The Siege of Derry, 1862, fp. 8vo; Rachel, 1862, p. 8vo; Helen Fleetwood, 4th ed., 1863, fp. 8vo; Chapters and Flowers, 10th ed., 1866, r. 8vo; Philip and his Garden, 1868, 12mo. She pub. English Martyrology, Abridged from Foxe, 1838, 2 vols. fp. 8vo; and from 1834 until her death, edited The Christian Lady's Magazine. Tooke, Rev. Andrew, b. in London, 1673, and educated at Clare Hall, Cambridge, was Usher of the Charter-House School from 1695 to 1728, and Master from that date until his death, and Professor of Geometry in Gresham College, 1704 to 1729; d. 1731. 1. Synopsis Græcæ Linguae. 2. Ovid's Fasti, with English Trans. and Notes, Lon., 1720, 8vo; 1722, 8vo, &c. 3. Pantheon, 10th ed., 1726; Edin., 1791, 12mo; 29th ed., Lon., 1793, 12mo; new ed., 1831, 12mo; Balt., 1845, 12mo. Originally written in Latin, by Francis Porrey. Tooke translated Puffendorf's Whole Duty of Man, with Barbeyrac's notes, into English, and Francis Gastrell's Christian Institutes into Latin; and contributed the supplement to the account of Gresham College to Strype's Survey of London. See Biog. Brit., Supp.; Ward's Gresham Professors; Nichols's Lit. Anec., v. 242, ix. 167, 168; Lon. Gent. Mag., 1839, ii. 605.

Tooke, George, of Popes, co. of Hertford, b. about 1595, was captain of a band of volunteers in Cecil's expedition against Cadiz, 1625; d. 1675. History of Cales Passion, or, as some will by-name it, the Mistaking of Cales, Lon., 1654, 4to; 1659, 4to. Tooke, John Horne, M.P., the son of John Horne, a poulterer, adopted his last name in compliment to his benefactor, William Tooke, Esq., of Purley. The subject of our notice was b. at Westminster, June 25, 1736, and educated at Westminster, Eton, and St. John's College, Cambridge; to please his father, was ordained deacon and priest, and officiated as clergyman for several years; to please himself, returned to the study of the law, (which his clerical orders debarred him from practising,) and soon became famous as a radical politician of the Wilkes school; in 1777 was prosecuted by the ministry for a libel,—having charged the king's troops with murdering the Americans at Lexington in 1775,—and condemned to a fine of £200 and an imprisonment of twelve months; in 1794 was arraigned for high treason, mainly, as it appears, on account of his connection with the Constitutional Society, and acquitted after a trial in which he displayed great tact and address; in 1790 and 1796 was an unsuccessful candidate for Parliament, to which, however, he was returned (for Old Sarum, by Lord Camelford) in 1801; passed his closing years in retirement at Wimbledon, where he d. March 18, 1812. Ample details of his political career—the discussion of which does not enter into the plan of our work—will be found in the authorities cited below.

1. The Petition of an Englishman, 1765. Consists principally of apologies for the private conduct and immoral writings of John Wilkes. 2. Sermon; before 1773. 3. Letter to John Dunning, Esq., 1778, 8vo. Noticed in Lon. Mon. Rev., 1778, ii. 116. Suggested by remarks on the particles employed by the attorney-general in his indictment and by the judges in his sentence. It was afterwards incorporated in No. 5. 5. Letter to Lord Ashburton [formerly John Dunning, Esq.] from Mr. Horne, &c., 1782, 8vo. On Parliamentary reform: noticed in Lon. Mon. Rev., Aug. 1782, 137. 6. ΕΠΕΑ ΠΤΕΡΟΕΝΤΑ, or the Divisions of Purley, 1786, 8vo; expanded to 2 vols. 4to: i., 1798; ii., 1805; Phila., 1806, 2 vols. 8vo. New edition, revised and Corrected by Richard Taylor, with Numerous Additions from the Copy prepared by the Author for Republication: to which is annexed his Letter to John Dunning, 1829, 2 vols. 8vo; again, 1840, 8vo; 1857, 8vo; 1860, 8vo; adv. to 15s., 1869, 8vo. To this work should be added: I. Criticisms on the Divisions of Purley, by John Cassander, 1790, 8vo. See BRUCKNER, JOHN. II. Anti-Tooke; or, An Analysis of the Principles and Structure of Language, by John Fearn, 1824, 2 vols. 8vo. III. A Sequel to the Divisions of Purley, &c., by John Barclay, 1826, 1827, demy 8vo. See, also, RICHARDSON, CHARLES, LL.D., Nos. 1 and 3; SALMON, NICHOLAS, No. 3; STACKHOUSE, THOMAS, No. 2. With'er's Aristarchus, 1822, 8vo, should also accompany the Divisions of Purley. Respecting the value of the last-named work, wide differences of opinion have always existed.

"Horne Tooke's is certainly a wonderful work; but the great merit was the original thought. The light which shines through such impenetrable words as articles and pronouns is admirable,—'the' and 'it.' No single book, perhaps, ever so much illustrated language: yet how much more might he have done, if he had known the collateral languages! Adelung's Dictionary alone would have rendered great assistance."—SIR JAMES MACINTOSH: Life, ii. ch. iii.

"He has made one of the driest subjects in the whole range of literature or science one of the most amusing and even lively of books; nor did any one ever take up the Divisions of Purley (as he has quaintly chosen to call it) and lay it down till some other avocation tore it from his hands. The success of this system has been such as its great essential merits and its more superficial attractions, combined, might have led us to expect. All men are convinced of its truth; and as every thing which had been done before was superseded by it, so nothing has since been effected unless in pursuing its views and building upon its solid foundations."—LORD BROUGHAM: States. Time of Geo. III., ed. 1866, li. 106: Mr. Horne Tooke.

See, also, JOHNSON, SAMUEL, LL.D., (p. 975, supra: quotation from Lord Brougham.)

"Dire have been the disappointments incurred by the Diversions of Purley,—one of the toughest books in existence. It has even cast a shade over one of our best story-books, The Diversions of Hillycoat, by the late Mrs. Johnstone."—JOHN HILL BURTON: The Book-Hunter, etc., (1860), Part 2: His Functions.

"The first acquaintance with the 'Diversions of Purley' must have formed an epoch in the life of many a student."—R. C. TRENCH: On the Study of Words.

"Horne Tooke . . . applied to grammar the general principles of the English sensualistic school."—VICTOR COUSIN: Course of the Hist. of Mod. Philos., Wight's trans., Lect. XIV.

"Every man who aspires to a thorough knowledge of the English language must carefully read this ingenious book, which is as interesting as it is instructive."—DR. E. WILLIAMS: Christian Preacher, 5th ed., 365.

"The Diversions of Purley is one of the most consummate compounds of ignorance and presumption that ever practised with success on human credulity. . . . We pronounce our sentence on it in the old formula, that what is true in it is not new, and that what is new is not true."—Blackw. Mag., April, 1840, (xlvii.) 484.

"The distance between what he has proved and what he wishes us to believe that he has proved is enormous."—EARL DUDLEY: Lon. Quar. Rev., June, 1812, (vii.) 321.

"In short, we know few books more instructive than the Diversions of Purley to those who are able and willing to think for themselves; but those who are content to take up their opinions on trust, that is to say, the great majority of readers, are as likely to be misled by its author as directed aright."—Lon. Quar. Rev., Sept. 1835, (liv.) 311.

Dugald Stewart (see the 5th of his Prelim. Essays and his Prelim. Dissert. to Encyc. Brit.) is a warm opponent of the Diversions of Purley.

Tooke, William, younger son of the preceding, b. in St. Petersburg, 1777, practised law for many years in London, and sat as M.P. for Truro, in the Liberal interest, 1835–37; d. in London, Sept. 20, 1863. He was one of the founders and long the Treasurer of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge. 1. Poetical Works of Charles Churchill, with Explanatory Notes and an Authentic Account of his Life, Lon., 1804, 2 vols. 8vo. Anon. Repub.—The Poetical Works of Charles Churchill, with Copious Notes and a Life of the Author, by W. Tooke, F.R.S., 1844, 3 vols. fp. 8vo, (Pickering Aldine ed.)

"It would be difficult to imagine a worse biographer than Mr. Tooke. As Dr. Johnson said of his friend Tom Birch, he is 'a dead hand at a Life.' Nor is he a more lively hand at a Note. In both cases he compiles with singular clumsiness, and his compilations are not always harmless. But, though Mr. Tooke is a bad biographer and a bad annotator, he is a worse critic."—JOHN FORSTER: Edin. Rev., Jan. 1845, 46; repub. in Forster's Hist. and Biog. Essays, 1858, 2 vols. p. 8vo.

"Diligence, impartiality, and superior means of acquiring intelligence to illustrate his subject, are the merits of Mr. Tooke's work,—merits displayed in the former and augmented in the present publication."—Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1844, 362.

"Mr. Tooke's version of French history is so obsolete, and his plan of compiling it so devoid of attraction, that we cannot say to what class of readers his book will be useful. . . . It is ostentatiously dull, at the same time that it is meagre and shallow."—Lon. Athen., 1855, 1055.

Mr. Tooke assisted his father in vols. i.–v. of the General Biographical Dictionary, compiled the chronicle and miscellaneous departments of Dodsley's Annual Register, 1791–1800, and contributed on subjects of law, politics, and literature, to several periodicals. Toup, Jonathan, (in his later writings he styles himself Joannes Toupius,) according to Dr. Charles Burney, one of the seven great critical luminaries of the eighteenth century, was b. at St. Ives, Cornwall, Dec. 1713, and educated at Exeter College, Oxford; Rector of St. Martin's, Exeter, 1750; Preb. of Exeter, 1774 Vicar of St. Merryn's, 1776; d. Jan. 11, 1785. His classical publications occupy the first rank.

et alios Lexicographos Græcos, Oxon., 1790, 4 vols. 8vo. Edited by Thomas Burgess, D.D., (p. 287, supra.) The Notæ Breves ad Toupii Emendationes and Notæ in Cursus Novissimas are by Porson. See PORSON, RICHARD, No. 4. This gained for him the friendship of his patron Bishop Warburton, whom he honoured by—2. Epistola critica ad celeberrimum Virum Gulielmum Episcopum Glocestriensem, Lon., 1767, 8vo. This contains corrections and explanations of passages in Greek authors. He contributed largely to Thomas Warton's edition of Theocritus, Oxon., 1770, 2 vols. 4to, and subsequently published—3. Curæ Posteriores, sive Appendicula Notarum atque Emendationum in Theocritum, Oxonii nuperimè publicatum, Lon., 1772, 4to. This must accompany Warton's Theocritus.

"This is the admirable edition which fixed the reputation of Mr. Toup, and which, for great erudition, excellent criticism, and elegant typography, may be compared to any of the editions of a classical author that this country has yet produced."—DR. WATT: Bibl. Brit., nom. Longinus.

"Mr. Toup shows great acumen and learning in his Notes, when he adheres to his Author, as well as when he digresses from him. He is sometimes too bold and precipitate in his criticisms, and too fond of inserting readings into the text upon his own authority. After all, no one can deny Mr. Toup the praise of an able and sagacious critic. There are many typographical errors; yet this edition may be pronounced to be by far the best."—HENRY KETT: Elem. of G. Knowl., 4th ed., 1803, ii. 442.

Warton, Warburton, and other English critics, and Ernestus, Hemsterhusius, Ruhnkenius, Valkenaer, Kluit, Brunck, D'Anse de Villosion, L'Archer, and other Continental critics, extol the learning of Toup. He contributed to a number of erudite publications by some of these scholars, and left a portion of the results of his investigations in MS. Edward Richard Poole issued, in 1828, Proposals for publishing Letters, Critical, Philological, and Literary, from Eminent Scholars of the Eighteenth Century to the Rev. Jonathan Toup, A.M., with Biographical and Historical Illustrations. Would that he had executed his project! For notices of Toup, see Nichols's Lit. Anec., vii. Townsend, Rev. Chauncy Hare, b. 1800, was educated at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1821, and M.A. 1824. He obtained the University prize for English verse ("Jerusalem") in 1828. During his last years he lived chiefly at Lausanne, "and thus, though master of one of the most exquisite and luxurious houses in London, adorned by every grace and refinement of hospitality, he passed out of public sight." (Lon. Athen., 1868.) He died in 1868. To Mr. Charles Dickens he bequeathed a sum of money, and many manuscripts, essays, letters, &c., some of which he desired to be published, believing that his religious sentiments would be conducive to the happiness of mankind. Mr. Dickens accordingly published in December, 1869: Religious Opinions of the Rev. Chauncy Townsend; Published, as Directed by his Will, by his Literary Executor, Longmans, p. 8vo, pp. 300. 1. Poems, Lon., 1821, cr. 8vo. Commended by Lon. Mon. Rev., 1822, i. 101, and *Lon. Trail, James Christie. New Parishes Acts, 1843, 1844, and 1856, with Notes, &c., Lon., 1857, 12mo.

Trail, Robert, an eminent Presbyterian divine, b. at Elly, Scotland, 1642, and educated at the University of Edinburgh and at Utrecht, was ordained in London, 1670; proceeded to Scotland, where he was imprisoned for private preaching; returned to England, 1677; was for many years pastor of a Scotch congregation in London; d. 1716. He published a number of theological treatises and discourses. After his death there appeared (from print and MSS.) collective editions of his Works: Edin., 1745, 4 vols. 12mo; 1754, 2 vols. 12mo; Glasg., 1776, 3 vols. 8vo; other edits., 1795, 4 vols. in 2, 8vo; 1806, 4 vols. 8vo; best ed.—Sermons on the Throne of Grace, on Justification, on Hebrews x., on Important Subjects, with Letters, &c.—Edin., 1810, 4 vols. in 2, 8vo. There are also new editions of his Sermons on the Lord's Prayer, 18mo, and Sermons on the Throne of Grace, (both pub. by Lon. Rel. Tract Soc.) and his Select Practical Writings, 17 Sermons, &c., all in 1 vol. 12mo, Edin., 1845.

"He was a workman that need not be ashamed. He knew how clearly to state and solidly to establish the faith of God's elect, and the doctrine according to godliness."—REV. JAMES HERVEY.

"The doctrine of grace devotionally and practically displayed."—Bickersteth's C. S., 4th ed., 45.

Wilson (History of Dissenting Churches) commends Trail's simple and evangelical strain; and Cecil, referring to a young minister's taking up his creed from second- or third-rate writers, continues, "Let him turn to a master on the subject. He will find such a man as Trail handling the Sovereignty of God, and such high points of doctrine, with a holy and heavenly sweetness." Tregelles, Samuel Prideaux, LL.D., b. Jan. 30, 1813, at Falmouth, Cornwall, was educated at the Classical Grammar-School, Falmouth, from 1825 to 1828; between 1828 and 1834 was engaged in the Iron-Works at Neath Abbey, Glamorganshire, and 1835-6 was employed in private tuition at Falmouth. In 1850 he received from the University of St. Andrew's the degree of LL.D. 1. Passages in the Book of Revelation connected with the Old Testament Scriptures, Lon., 1836, 8vo. 2. From 1836 to 1843 Dr. Tregelles was engaged in revising the MSS. and superintending the publication of: 1. The Englishman's Greek Concordance to the New Testament, 1839, imp. 8vo; 2d ed., 1844, imp. 8vo, £2 2s.; 1 p., £3 13s. 6d.; Index to, 1845, imp. 8vo, 3s. 4d. 2. The Englishman's Hebrew and Chaldee Concordance to the Old Testament, 1843, 2 vols. imp. 8vo, £3 13s. 6d.; 1 p., £4 14s. 6d. 3. The Book of Revelation in Greek, Edited from Ancient Authorities; with a New English Version and Various Readings, 1844, 8vo. "This very important edition of the Greek Testament has occupied Dr. Tregelles's attention for twenty years; and, as all the existing collations of ancient documents were far from being satisfactory to Biblical scholars, he found it was absolutely necessary that he should personally visit and minutely examine most of the great libraries on the Continent of Europe. Thus he has been able to re-collate almost every ancient document which contains the Greek Testament in whole or in part. The result of this laborious (and to Dr. T. very expensive) re-collation has been the acquisition of a very large number of important Various Readings, which had escaped the eye and attention of preceding critical editors of the Greek Testament. A full account of Dr. T.'s collations and critical studies will be found in No. 13, supra. The remainder of this most valuable work is advancing at the press with all practicable rapidity; but from the incessant labour both of the mind and of the eye, in order to secure correctness, its progress must necessarily be slow."—Thos. Hartwell Horne, D.D., to the author of this Dictionary, July 29, 1858. See SCRIVENER, FREDERICK HENRY, No. 6.

It will be remembered (see HORNE, THOMAS HARTWELL, D.D., No. 1) that Dr. Tregelles assisted Dr. Horne in vol. iv. of the 10th ed. (11th ed., in 4 vols. 8vo, £3 13s. 6d., was pub. in Nov. 1860, and 13th ed., by the Rev. J. Ayre and Dr. Tregelles, in 4 vols. 8vo, £2 2s., in Mar. 1869) of his Introduction.

"The critical portion of this volume," Dr. Horne writes us, "was written by Dr. T. with great accuracy and perspicuity."

The remainder of the volume (which is Dr. Horne's) is very carefully revised and edited by Dr. Tregelles, greatly to Dr. H.'s satisfaction." See, also, Lon. Athen., 1856, 1527.

15. Codex Zacynthius. E. Greek Palimpsest Fragments of the Gospel of Saint Luke obtained in the Island of Zante by the late General Colin Macaulay, and now in the Library of the British and Foreign Bible Society; Deciphered, Transcribed, and Edited by Samuel Prideaux Tregelles, LL.D., 1861, sm. fol. The Palimpsest Fragments of St. Luke are probably of the 6th century; the later writing is a Greek Lectionary of the Four Gospels, belonging (as Dr. T. supposes) to the 13th century.

The Trustees of the British Museum and the Rev. Dr. Cureton lent him their fac-simile types of the Alexandrian MS. (of the same date) now in that library: see BABER, REV. H. H. The English critical journals highly commend the learning and accuracy with which Dr. T. has edited this precious relic. One of the least tolerant of these dreaded censors thus commences its notice of the Codex Zacynthius:

"Among the scholars of this country there is no one to whom we are so much indebted as to Dr. Tregelles for his indefatigable labours in the textual criticism of the New Testament. On the Continent even he has no rival in this respect, with the single exception of Tischendorf. Between them they have collated or re-collated almost every known early MS. of the New Testament or its parts, not working all together, but independently of each other, though occasionally communicating on the subject of their labours."—Lon. Athen., Nov. 1861, 722, (q. v.)

16. Canon Muratori: Earliest Catalogue of the Books of the New Testament, Camb. and Lon., 1868, 4to. Three hymns by Dr. Tregelles will be found in Rogers's Lyra Brit., ed. 1868, 552. See, also, SMITH, WILLIAM, LL.D., Ph. D., (Editor, &c. of the Classical Dictionaries), No. 4. Among the literary and scientific pensions of 1863 there was awarded to Dr. Tregelles the sum of £100 per annum "on account of his valuable labours on subjects connected with Biblical criticism."

The church of Perranzabuloe, near Perran's Bay, Cornwall, is believed to stand on the site of an ancient British church, its name, in the original Cornish language, signifying "Pieran in the sand." The author labours to show that the English Church has always existed in the western counties.

Trench, Mrs. Richard, mother of the succeeding, and granddaughter and heiress of Dr. Richard Chenevix, (Lord Chesterfield's friend and correspondent,) Bishop of Waterford, 1745-99, was b. 1768; married Colonel St. George, of the British Army, and after his death became the wife of Richard Trench, and d. May 27, 1827. Much of her time—fortunately, as it has proved for the present generation—was spent on the Continent, and from her Diaries and Letters there written Nos. 2 and 3, and part of No. 1, have recently been compiled.

1. A Few Notes from Past Life, 1818-1832; Edited, from Correspondence, by the Rev. Francis Trench, Rector of Islip, Oxford, Oxf., 1862, cr. 8vo. At first privately printed. See notices in Lon. Athen., 1862, i. 357, 550. Contains letters which passed between the editor, in his youth, and his parents. 2. Journal kept during a Visit to Germany in 1799-1800; Edited by the Dean of Westminster, 1862. Privately printed.

"We cannot refrain from expressing our regret that the Dean of Westminster has only printed it for private circulation."—Lon. Athen., 1862, i. 356.

3. The Remains of the Late Mrs. Richard Trench; being Selections from her Journals, Letters, and other Papers; Edited by her Son, the Dean of Westminster, April, 1862, demy 8vo, pp. viii., 525; 2d ed., July, 1862, demy 8vo; red. to 6s., 1868.

"It makes a very charming book, and many readers will be glad to possess such a record of a good and sprightly woman."—Lon. Athen., 1862, i. 628.

"There was that in her character which grows on our regard the more intimately we become acquainted with her writings. . . . The volume has considerable worth, apart from the interest which her personal character excites. . . . No one could have edited such a volume with greater judgment and good taste than Dean Trench has exhibited in every part of it."—N. Amer. Rev., July, 1862, 255.

"Few books have been received with greater interest, or read with greater pleasure, than the Journal of Mrs. St. George, recently printed for private circulation by her distinguished son, the Dean of Westminster; and an equally flattering reception might safely be guaranteed to the letters of Lady Cere."—A. HAYWARD: Autobiog., ed. of Mrs. Piozzi, (Thrall), 1861, ii. 107, n.

Trench, Richard Chenevix, D.D., second son of the late Richard Trench, brother of the first Lord Ash-ton by Melesina Chenevix, (see TRENCH, MRS. RICHARD,) was b. September 9, 1807; graduated at Trinity College, 1829; took holy orders and engaged in a country curacy; became incumbent of Curdridge, a chapel in the parish of Bishop's Waltham, Hants; Curate to Archdeacon (now Bishop) Wilberforce at Alverstoke, near Gosport, 1841; Rector of Itchen Stoke, near Alresford, 1845; Examining Chaplain to Bishop Wilberforce, 1845; Hulsean Lecturer at Cambridge, 1845-46, and for a short time one of the Select Preachers of the University; Theological Professor and Examiner at King's College, London, 1847, and since appointed one of the Examiners for Engineer and Artillery Appointments at Woolwich; Dean of Westminster, 1856, and since of the Order of the Bath; consecrated Archbishop of Dublin, Jan. 1, 1864. He is Bishop of Kildare and Chancellor of the Order of St. Patrick. In 1832 he married his cousin, the Hon. Frances Mary Trench, sister of Lord Ash-ton, by whom he has had many children. 1. The Story of Justin Martyr, and other Poems, Lon., fp. 8vo, 1835; 2d ed., 1844; 3d ed., 1851; 4th ed., 1857; 5th ed., 1862.

"This is a delightful little volume, bearing throughout the indisputable impress of genius, and breathing throughout a spirit of religion."—Blackw. Mag., Sept. 1855, 417.

"In all of them we find true feeling and grace of expression enough to claim recognition."—Lon. Athen., 1835, 598. See, also, No. 5.

2. Sabbath, Honor Neale, and other Poems, fp. 8vo, 1838.

"His Sabbath is pervaded by a profound piety,—and assuredly he is among the foremost of our young poets."—Blackw. Mag., April, 1839, 544, (q. v. for two sonnets by Mr. Trench.)

"The author's best gift is truth and delicacy of feeling."—Lon. Athen., 1838, 230.

3. Notes on the Parables of our Lord, 8vo, 1841; 3d ed., 1847; 4th ed., 1850; N. York, 1851; 5th ed., Lon., 1853; 6th ed., 1855; same, being 2d Amer. ed., N. "From his 'Justin Martyr,' through his 'Elegiac Poems,' down to those From Eastern Sources, his course towards compositional excellence has been steady and evident. In the last-mentioned volume especially there are several poems of exquisite beauty, whose music lingers on the memory and refuses to be forgotten."—D. M. MORN: Poet. Lit. of the Past Half-Century, 3d ed., 1856, 284.

6. Genova, and other Poems, fp. 8vo, Dec. 1842. See No. 5. Noticed in Lon. Athen., 1843, 211. A volume of Trench's Poems, with an Introduction by the Rev. J. A. Spencer, D.D., was pub. in N. York, 1856, 12mo, pp. 336; new ed., fine paper, Mar. 1862. It professes to contain more than half of his published poems to that date, (1856,) and includes Justin Martyr, Genova, and smaller pieces. Dr. Spencer also edited No. 17, infra.

7. Five Sermons preached before the University of Cambridge in 1843, Camb., 8vo, 1843. 8. Tricoupi, or Trikupis, Spiridion, the author of a funeral oration on Lord Byron, delivered at Missolonghi, April 21, 1824, and printed by order of the Greek Government, (repub. in Selections from Modern Greek Writers, by C. C. Felton, Camb., Mass., 1856, 12mo), is said to have been educated at Eton. He is well known as the Greek Ambassador to England from 1838-39, 1842-44, 1852-54; succeeded by Charelaus Tricoupi.

"An able historian. His descriptions are graphic,—his style is clear and distinct,—and his language is so pure, that, though it is called modern Greek, it can be easily understood by any one who can read Xenophon in the original."—Lon. Athen., 1857, 1151: notice of vol. i.

The notices by the same periodical of vols. ii. (1854, 1323) and iv. (1857, 1317) are also highly complimentary, (see, also, 1861, ii. 508.) and so is the notice of vol. i. in Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1853, 1069, and the verdict of Lon. Sat. Rev., 1857.

"The language in which the work is composed may be described as composed entirely of ancient Greek words; but the author has not carried his imitation of ancient Greek so far as to introduce ancient inflections and forms of syntax remote from those of the modern language. The tone of the narrative is dignified and impartial, with perhaps a deficiency in warmth. On the whole, the history must be regarded as a work of great value."—*Knights' Eng. Less favourably noticed in vol. lii. 206.

"Now let us follow the march and observe the course pursued by Mrs. Trollope. She enters the house by the back premises, and takes her quarters for two years together in the kitchen. . . . Of the outside of the mansion which she has ventured to paint, she never saw the fiftieth part. In respect of its interior the Americans are a strict and prudish people. We have, to be sure, a general description of a public ball and private dinner. So far, however, from her having been admitted into the best parlour, the friend of Miss Wright seems, during the three years and a half she stayed among them, to have hardly had an opportunity of exchanging a word with the gentlemen and ladies of the house. . . . Mrs. Trollope's volumes contain as much provocation, whether by commission or omission, as the mere channel of private literature can possibly convey."—*Edin. "Thirty years ago my mother wrote a book about the Americans, to which I believe I may allude as a well-known and successful work without being guilty of any undue family conceit. That was essentially a woman's book. She saw with a woman's keen eye, and described with a woman's light but graphic pen, the social defects and absurdities which our near relatives had adopted into their domestic life. All that she told was worth the telling, and the telling, if done successfully, was sure to produce a good result. I am satisfied that it did so." &c.—ANTHONY TROLLOPE: North America, 1862, Intro., (q.v.)

Trübner, Nicolas, an eminent publisher and bookseller in London, equally well known as an accomplished bibliographer and philologist, especially as a Sanskrit scholar, was b. at Heidelberg in 1817.

1. Sketches from Flemish Life: Translated from the Flemish of Hendrik Conscience, and Illustrated with One Hundred and Thirty Engravings on Wood, from Designs by Flemish Artists, Lon., 1845, sq. A notice of this, the first volume translated from the Flemish into English, will be found in Lon. Athen., 1846, 37. 2. Trübner's Bibliographical Guide to American Literature; being a Classified List of Books, in all Departments of Literature and Science, published in the United States of America during the Last Forty Years; with an Introduction, Notes, Three Appendices, and an Index, Jan. 1855, pp. xxxii., 108. See notices in Lon. Spec., 1855, (same in Bost. Liv. Age, xlv. 448;) Lon. Athen., 1855, 460; Lon. Lit. Gaz., 1855, 265; Lon. Critic, 1857, 152. The whole edition of this work was sold in four months from the date of publication: thus encouraged, the author continued his researches and extended his plan, and, after four years' assiduous application, gave to the public, Trübner's Bibliographical Guide to American Literature; a Classified List of Books published in the United States of America during the Last Forty Years; with Bibliographical Introduction, Notes, and Alphabetical Index: Compiled and Edited by Nicolas Trübner, 1859, 8vo, pp. i.-x., Preface; Introduction: i.-xxxvi., Bibliographical Prolegomena, (in this division Dr. H. E. Ludewig assisted:) xxxvii.-civ.*, Contributions towards a History of American Literature, (by Benjamin Moran:) xcvi.-cxlx., Public Libraries of the United States, (by Edward Edwards;) 1-554, Bibliographical Guide and General Index. Of this important publication we have before us commendations from twenty-three periodicals, —nine English, thirteen American, and one French,—all published in 1858-59. Of one of these we claim the authorship, and will only add here that, if it were to be written now, after seven years' diligent use of the Bibliographical Guide, it would be even still more eulogistic. See Trübner & Co.'s Catalogue, 1868, 89; Lon. Reader, 1863, ii. 376; ROEBACH, ORVILLE A. 3. The Literature of American Aboriginal Languages, by Hermann E. Ludewig; with Additions and Corrections by Professor William W. Turner; Edited by Nicolas Trübner, 1858, 8vo, pp. i.-xxiv., 258. This volume, (complete in itself,) 2459

the first instalment of a projected enlarged edition of Vater's Linguarum totius Orbis Index, has already been noticed in this Dictionary: see LUDWIG, HERMANN E. That we did not overestimate the importance of the work has been proved since its publication by the attestations of Chevalier Bunsen, Sir George Grey, Thomas Watts, Max Müller, Dr. Buschmann, and twenty-one other authorities,—six English, two Scottish, four American, three French, and six German,—whom want of space forbids us to quote.

Mr. Trübner, we believe, occasionally contributes to periodicals, (see especially his paper on Lucien Bonaparte's Visit to the Basque Provinces in The Critic, Nov. 1, 1856, and Letters in Athenæum, 1856, 42, 75, 683;) but we shall hardly be satisfied without a more enduring record of the results of his linguistic researches.

Vols., Bost., 1865, 16mo. An admirable portrait of an admirable man. 6. A Useful Life and a Fragrant Memory; a Sketch of E. B. Preston, Phila., 1866, 16mo. 7. Memorial of E. B. Preston, Hartford, 1866, 8vo. 8. Falling in Harness; a Sketch of the Life of Rev. John W. Barton, Phila., 1867, 16mo. 9. Childhood Conversion: an Essay, Bost., 1868, 16mo. 10. The Captured Scout of the Army of the James; a Sketch of the Life of Sergeant Henry H. Manning, 24th Mass. Vols., 1869, 12mo. 11. Children in the Temple; a Hand-Book for the Sunday-School Concert, and a Guide for the Children's Preacher, &c., Springfield, Mass., 1869, 12mo, pp. 352.

Trumbull, J. Hammond, an eminent philologist, brother of the preceding, was b. at Stonington, Conn., 1821, and graduated at Yale College, 1842. He is Corresponding Secretary of the Connecticut Historical Society, and since 1847 (we write in 1870) has resided at Hartford, Conn. 1. The Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut prior to the Union with New Haven Colony, May, 1665, &c.; with Occasional Notes and an Appendix, Hartford, 1850, 8vo, pp. 614. Reviewed by Francis Bowen in N. Amer. Rev., lxxi. 34-51. 2. Ditto, 1665-1678, &c., with Notes and an Appendix, 1852, 8vo, pp. 616. 3. Ditto, May, 1678-June, 1689, with Notes and an Appendix, 1859, 8vo, pp. 538. He has also edited Roger Williams's Key to the Indian Language. Reprinted for the Narragansett Club, Providence, R.I., 1868, 4to, and Leachford's Plain Dealing, or News from New England, Reprinted from Edition of 1642, Bost., 1867, 4to, and has contributed to The New England Hist. and Trumbull, John, LL.D., b. in Woodbury, Connecticut, April 24, 1750; graduated at Yale College, 1767; tutor at Yale College, 1771 to 1773, when he was admitted to the Connecticut Bar; emigrated to Boston, and became a student in the office of Mr. (afterwards President) John Adams; near the end of 1774 returned to New Haven and commenced the practice of the law; removed to Hartford, 1781; was State Attorney for the county of Hartford, 1789; a member of the Legislature, 1800; Judge of the Superior Court, 1801 to 1819, when he retired to private life; removed to Detroit, 1825, and d. there, May 12, 1831.

Between 1771 and 1773 he contributed many humorous prose and poetical articles to the periodicals of Connecticut and Massachusetts, and, in conjunction with his friend Timothy (afterwards President) Dwight, published a series of papers, more than forty in number, in the manner of The Spectator. He published a poetical satire on the prevailing mode of education, entitled The Progress of Dulness in 1772, (a year later adding the second and third parts;) in 1774 appeared, anonymously, his Elegy on the Times,—a poem of sixty-eight stanzas on the Port Bill and other colonial themes; in 1775 he published McFingal, a Modern Epic Poem: Canto First, or The Town Meeting, Philadelphia, 12mo, (London, 1776, 12mo, &c.) and in 1782 gave to the world The Four Cantos in one volume, Hartford, 12mo. In McFingal (composed in Hudibrastic verse) the author proposed to himself to describe,

"in a poetic manner, a general account of the American contest, with a particular description of the character and manners of the times, interspersed with anecdotes, which no history could properly record or display, and, with as much impartiality as possible, satirize the follies and extravagances of my countrymen as well as of their enemies."—Trumbull's Letter to the Marquis de Chastellux, 1785.

McFingal, who represents the Tories, of course stands very little chance in his logical encounters with Honorius, the spokesman of the American Revolutionary Whigs. The unhappy Scotsman is, from the first, predestined to defeat, disgrace, and "tar and feathers,"—yet even beneath his gallinaceous robes maintains a loyal, if not an undaunted, spirit. The popularity of McFingal was great: "there were more than thirty different pirated impressions, in pamphlet and other forms, which were circulated by 'the newsmongers, hawkers, pedlars, and petty chapmen' of the day." A sixth edition was published in London, 1793, 8vo; a new edition, with Explanatory Notes, appeared Boston, 1826, 18mo; and three editions have appeared within the last few years, viz.: 1. Revised and Corrected, with Copious and Explanatory Notes; with a Memoir of the Author, Hartford, 1856, 8vo, pp. 183; II. With Copious Notes, Edited by Benson J. Lossing, N. York, 1860, r. 8vo; l. p., 100 copies; III. With Introduction and Notes by Benson J. Lossing, Hurd & Houghton, Riverside Press, 1864. It is only dangerous to cite a few opinions on a production once so famous:

"A poem which will live as long as 'Hudibras.' If I speak freely of this Piece, I can truly say, that altho' it is not equal to itself throughout (and where is the Poem that is so?) yet there are many parts of it equal to any thing in that kind of Poetry that ever was written."—JOHN (afterwards President) ADAMS: Letter to John Trumbull, Esq., Andover, April 28, 1785: Hist. Mag., 1860, 195.

"It may be observed, without any partiality, that McFingal is not inferior in wit and humour to Hudibras, and in every other respect is superior."—PRESIDENT DWIGHT.

"McFingal is a successful imitation of Hudibras."—Lon. Mon. Rev., 1793, i. 34, (q. v.)

"A Hudibrastic poem of great merit—far doggerel—rich, bold, and happy."—JOHN NEAL: Blackw. Mag., Feb. 1825, (xvii.) 202.

"A poem in the manner of Hudibras, and in many places hardly inferior to that chef-d'œuvre of the doggerel satirical."—REV. TIMOTHY FLINT: Lon. Athen., 1835, 819.

"Much the best imitation of the great satire of Butler that has been written."—DR. B. W. GRISWOLD: Poets and Poetry of America.

"His McFingal owes its decadence, not to a deficiency in genuine wit and humour of the Hudibrastic school, but to the lack of picturesqueness in the story and of all elements of permanent interest in its heroes."—A. P. PEABODY, D.D.: N. Amer. Rev., Jan. 1856, 241.

In conjunction with Joel Barlow, Dr. Lemuel Hopkins, Colonel David Humphreys, &c., Trumbull contributed American Antiquities, Extracts from the Anarchiad, and other papers, to the periodicals: see ALDER, RICHARD; HOPKINS, LEMUEL. There has recently been published, The Anarchiad: a New England Poem, Written in Concert by David Humphreys, Joel Barlow, John Trumbull, and Dr. Lemuel Hopkins: Now First Published in Book Form; Edited, with Notes and Appendices, by Luther G. Riggs, New Haven, 1861, 16mo, pp. 120. These papers originally appeared in the New Haven Gazette and Connecticut Magazine. See N. Amer. Rev., Oct. 1861, 587, (by A. P. Peabody, D.D.). In his old age Trumbull was anxious to give to the world a collective edition of his poems; but publishers had little faith in the selling capacity of Revolutionary poetry: at last (he was now about seventy) he found a publisher in S. G. Goodrich, (Peter Parley,) who issued in 1820 The Poetical Works of John Trumbull, LL.D., containing McFingal, a Modern Epic Poem, Revised and Corrected, with Copious Explanatory Notes; The Progress of Dulness; and a Collection of Poems on various Subjects, written before and during the Revolutionary War, Hartford, 2 vols. 8vo.

"I paid him," says Mr. Goodrich, "a thousand dollars, and a hundred copies of the work, for the copyright. . . . It did not come up to the public expectation, or the patriotic zeal had cooled, and more than half the subscribers declined taking the work. . . . I quietly pocketed a loss of about a thousand dollars. This was my first serious adventure in patronizing American literature."—Recollec. of a Lifetime, 1857, i. 111, 112.

Notices of Trumbull and specimens of his poetry will be found in Griswold's Poets and Poetry of America, and in Duyckinck's Cyc. of Amer. Lit. See, also, Ann. Reg., vii., and Amer. Quar. Reg., xiv. 1.

"Was, no doubt, the most conspicuous literary character of his day, in this country. . . . There was something about him that at once bespoke the man of letters, the poet, and the satirist."—S. G. GOODRICH: Recollec., &c., ii. 115.

F. Roberts, and Introductory Essay on the Genius of Hogarth, by James Hannay, all in 1 vol. fol., was announced by R. Griffin & Co., Lon. and Glasg., for Nov. 1860. See William Hogarth, &c.: Essays by G. A. Sala, 1866, p. 8vo. Trusler declared that he made £150 per annum by abridging the sermons of old divines, printing them in imitation of MS., and furnishing them to clergymen for pulpit delivery. It is in reference to this that Cowper describes him as one who

“Grinds divinity of other days
Down into modern use, transforms old print
To zigzag manuscript, and cheats the eyes
Of gallery critics by a thousand arts. . . .
Grand caterer and dry-nurse of the church.”

Abridged by the Author of “An Essay on the Principles of Human Action,” (William Hazlitt,) 1807, 8vo. The Abridgment is said to be excellent; but the whole work, (1848, 2 vols. 8vo,) pub. at £1 10s., is now sold for 15s.

“I have found in this writer more original thinking and observations upon the several subjects that he has taken in hand, than in any other, not to say than in all others put together. His talent also for illustration is unrivalled. But his thoughts are diffused through a long, various, and irregular work. I shall account it no mean praise if I have been sometimes able to dispose into method, to collect into heads and articles, or to exhibit in more compact and tangible masses, what in that excellent performance is spread over too much surface."—DR. PALEY: Principles of Moral and Polit. Philos., Preface.

See, also, PALEY, WILLIAM, D.D., No. 1, and near the end of the article. A very eminent authority, after quoting and, with some qualifications, endorsing the above, remarks,

"But I must be permitted to add that as a metaphysician he seems to me much more fanciful than solid, and, at the same time, to be so rambling, verbose, and excursive as to be more likely to unsettle than to fix the principles of his readers."—DUGALD STEWART: First Prelim. Dissert. to Encyc. Brit., 7th ed., i. 114, n.

We cite some more opinions on The Light of Nature Pursued:

"A work which, after much consideration, I think myself authorized to call the most original and profound that has ever appeared on moral philosophy."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH: Discourse on the Law of Nature and Nations.

"It is in mixed, not in pure, philosophy that his superiority consists. In the part of his work which relates to the intellect he has adopted much from Hartley, hiding but aggravating the offence by a change of technical terms; and he was ungrateful enough to countenance the vulgar sneer which involves the mental analysis of that philosopher in the ridicule to which his physiological hypothesis is liable. . . . (Light of Nature, I. cxviii., of which the conclusion may be pointed out as a specimen of perhaps unmatched fruitfulness, vivacity, and felicity of illustration. The admirable sense of the conclusion of chap. xxv. seems to have suggested Paley's good Chapter on Happiness. The alteration of Plato's comparison of reason to a charioteer, and the passions to the horses, in chap. xxvi., is of characteristic and transcendent excellence.) . . . Take him all in all, however, the neglect of his writings is the strongest proof of the disinclination of the English nation, for the last half-century, to Metaphysical Philosophy."—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH: Dissert. Second, Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., i. 387, 388.

See, also, his Miscell. Works, ed. 1851, 83–85, or ed. 1854, i. 177–181, and his Life, i. ch. ix., ii. ch. ii.

"Tucker's Light of Nature is a work in which the noblest philosophy was brought down by a master hand and placed within the reach of every man of sound understanding."—ROBERT HALL. See HALL's Works, 11th ed., 1853, v. 48.

"One of the most attractive books in our language, both to those who read to be themselves instructed on these questions, and to those who read with the view of imparting such instruction to others. So judged Paley in the last generation; and such is manifestly the opinion of Archbishop Whately, and of Bishop Copleston, with many other writers, of our own. Amongst the many who have drawn at this fountain, the latest would appear to be the author of 'The Physical Theory of a Future Life' [see TAYLOR, ISAAC, the second, No. 11]."—SIR JAMES STEPHEN: Edin. Rev., lxxi. 242; repub. in Stephen's Essays.

"These two great philosophers, [Bishop Butler and Dr. Hutcheson], then, may be reckoned the founders of the received and sound ethical system to which Tucker, by his profound and original speculations, added much."—LORD BROUGHAM: Philos. of the Time (of Gen. III.: Adam Smith, ed. 1855, 167).

"I do not know of any work in the shape of a philosophical treatise that contains so much good sense so agreeably expressed."—WILLIAM HAZLITT. See Pref. to his Abridgment.

The Dean warmly advocated a peaceable separation of the American Colonies from Great Britain.

"A case in which the whole British nation were, in one particular, manifestly puzzle-headed, except one man: who was accordingly derided by all. In the dispute between Great Britain and her American Colonies, . . . Dean Tucker, standing quite alone, wrote a pamphlet to show that the separation would be no loss at all, and that we had best give them the independence they coveted, at once, and in a friendly way. Some thought he was writing in jest, the rest despised him as too absurd to be worth answering. But now (and for above half a century) every one admits that he was quite right, and regrets that his view was not adopted. . . . Of all the clever men, then, that at that time existed, and many of whom spoke eloquently, on each side, Tucker was the only one who was not puzzle-headed. And he obtained some small share of late credit, but present contempt."—ARCHBISHOP WHATELY: Bacon's Essays, with Annotations: Of Honour and Reputation. See, also, Edin. Rev., Jan. 1846.

Mr. Tudor left many valuable MSS.; and we renew the plea ineffectually urged many years since (i.e. in 1851, ut supra) by Josiah Quincy, (b. Feb. 4, 1772; d. July 1, 1864,) that, "at some not far distant day, what remains of his writings will be put in possession of the public." The collection should be prefaced by a copious Memoir, illustrated by notices of Tudor's early contemporaries.

Tuke, William, founder of the York Retreat for the Insane, was b. at York, 1732; d. June 6, 1822, aged about 90. 1. Letter from William Tuke (to Benjamin Haines) On the Death of John Woolman, (York, 10th mo. 26th, 1772;) Comly's Miscellany, vol. viii. 229, Phila., 1836, 12mo. 2. Several Letters on the Abuses of the York Asylum. See A Complete Collection of the Papers respecting the York Lunatic Asylum, Published Originally in the York Newspapers during the Years 1813, 1814, and 1815. Nil Desperandum, York, 1816, 8vo. See, also, A Memorial of York Monthly Meeting, held the 14th of 5th Month, 1823, concerning William Tuke, (an Elder), 1823, 8vo.

"The commencement of improvements in the internal management of our lunatic asylums, and the actual treatment of their inmates, may be dated from the foundation of the Retreat by the Society of Friends. It is a curious coincidence that the origin of the Retreat was coeval with the liberation by Pinel of the lunatics of Bicêtre: the two events had no connection. The foundation of the Retreat was suggested by some complaints relative to a female belonging to the Society of Friends, who had been confined and died in York Asylum. It was opened in 1793, under the direction of the Tukes of York, whose name will be handed down among those of the benefactors of mankind."—Lon. Quar. Rev., Oct. 1844, 321.

"About the time when Pinel's great work of reformation was effected in France, and many patients were liberated after being chained for many years, a similar work was provisionally commenced in a provincial city of England. . . . Of this admirable asylum the chief promoter was the late William Tuke, of York. . . . And for renders desirous to know the views which ought to prevail in all lunatic asylums, I could not, even now, refer to any work in which they are more perspicuously explained than in Samuel Tuke's account of the Retreat. [See Tuke, Samuel, No. 2.] In the valuable works of Pinel and his learned successor Esquirol, we find graphic descriptions of all varieties of mental disorders, and lucid views of treatment; but in none are the details of management, economic, medical, and moral, of an institution for the insane, to be found more convincingly set forth than in the works of Samuel Tuke. . . . All of us who have followed in the path of William and Samuel Tuke, at however great a distance, must ever gratefully acknowledge the extent of our debt to them. It is true that neither they nor Pinel ventured wholly to abolish mechanical coercion: this was left for Charlesworth to attempt, and for Gardiner Hill to carry out at Lincoln, and for Hanwell to confirm on the largest scale; but when the emulation produced by the changes made in asylums during the last twenty years has subsided, every historian of these establishments must point to Pinel and to Tuke as the men who led the way for the more complete system of non-restraint."—*DR. Tupper, Martin Farquhar, D.C.L., eldest son of the late Martin Tupper, Esq., surgeon, was b. in London, 1810; educated at the Charter-House and at Christ Church, Oxford, (where he graduated 1831,) and was subsequently called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn. Instead of practising law, Mr. Tupper has found a more congenial field in literature. He resides on his handsome country-seat of Albury, in Surrey, the owner of which, it is said, is soon to be complimented by a baronetage. His first volume was a collection of poems, published anonymously in 1832. He has since given to the world: 2. Proverbial Philosophy: A Book of Thoughts and Arguments originally treated, Lon., 1838, 12mo; Second Series, 1842, 12mo; together, 30th ed., 75th 1000, 1857, p. 8vo; 115th 1000, 1865, sq. 16mo. Sale in America to 1863,—edits. 4to, 8vo, 12mo, 16mo, 24mo, and 32mo, in N. York, Boston, Phila., and Rochester,—over 500,000 copies.

Illustrated ed., Lon., 1854, '59, '66, 4to. Library ed., new ed., 1860, cr. 8vo. Pocket ed., new ed., 1866, fp. 8vo. Illustrated eds., Phila., sm. 4to, and N. York, 8vo. In French, Lon., 1851, fp. 8vo; 1853, fp. 8vo; Phila., 12mo. There have been several French translations, by George Metivier, &c.

On the appearance of the first series, the London Athenæum (1838, 287) expressed the opinion that Proverbial Philosophy was not "a book likely to please beyond the circle of a few minds as eccentric as the author's." The unlooked-for popularity of the work, and the later effusions of the successful author, have failed to convert the critics of this periodical to faith in Mr. Tupper's poetical genius: see 1857, 1553; 1860, i. 611, 821; 1861, i. 18, et infra. On the other hand, The London Literary Gazette, in a notice of the 21st edition, remarks that

"The popularity of the 'Proverbial Philosophy' is a gratifying and healthy symptom of the present taste in literature, the book being full of lessons of wisdom and piety, conveyed in a style startling at first by its novelty, but irresistibly pleasing by its earnestness and eloquence."—1855, 739.

Proverbial Philosophy, Third Series, Lon., May, 1867, cr. 8vo.

"A great man once put the wisdom of his life into sayings which the world has chosen to call by his happy name; but from his usage it would seem that a proverb is a short word, a terse and easy phrase, clear to the eye and the mind. The lines in which the Albany Solomon dispenses his eccentric wisdom seem to be of another kind. They are not short. They are not sharp. They are not clear. On the contrary, they are so exceedingly serpentine, so flabby, and so obscure, as to make one doubt whether the Hebrew king was an adept in the lighter branches of his art. He certainly fell far below this imitator in his comical effects. You cannot get a laugh out of Solomon; while in reading Tupper it is just impossible to be grave. Was it not Lord Russell who defined a proverb as the wisdom of many in the wit of one? Mr. Tupper, we suspect, could tell his lordship that a proverb means the 'folly of many for the profit of one'; but in doing so he would have to confess how long he has been laughing at 'Proverbial Philosophy' in weak, twaddling, and insincere; and therefore, we suppose, will find the same sort of public which has bought the previous works."—Lon. Athen., May, 1867.

34. Our Canadian Dominion: Half a Dozen Ballads about a King for Canada, 1868, 8vo. With prose comments "to the effect that, as he fears the Canadians may some day wish to separate from the mother-country, he has written these ballads to prevent the catastrophe."

Thus the critics will make game of Mr. Tupper: The Saturday Review, about Jan. 1867, boasted, "With the exception of two young ladies,—both, we may safely state, under twenty,—we never met any one who pleaded guilty to the possession of one of Mr. Tupper's works;" "The English critics," writes one, in 1870, "are felicitating themselves on an accident that recently happened to Mr. Martin F. Tupper, by which his right hand was disabled;" The Round Table, of New York,—I am obliged to confess that my countrymen are not guiltless herein,—late in 1867 thought it "a matter for no little patriotic exultation that as yet Mr. Tupper's third series" was "without an American publisher." Indeed, in 1870 the London Times came to the rescue by the rather tardy suggestion that Mr. Tupper, "who for considerably more than a quarter of a century has occupied the position of chief butt for metropolitan critics and professional jokers, should be allowed to retire from that disagreeable eminence."

But, on the other hand, a number of the admirers of the famous proverbialist not long since (in 1867) exerted themselves to get up a testimonial in his honour; and one of these devotees—who, by the operation of a well-known law, became an imitator of that which he admired,—not perhaps without a willingness to share in the laurels which he was about to bestow—appeals in these soul-stirring—let us hope, pocket-stirring—strains to the gratitude of the nation:

"Give him back a tithe of the cost of those pearls of wisdom:
Give it in postage-stamps, or, better, in post-office orders,
Or cheque crossed Herries & Co., to account of the minstrel-diver."

N.B. The testimonial's form will probably be as simple
As the bard's own simple taste,—namely, paid in cash to his order." Lon. Spectator.

35. Twenty-one Protestant Ballads; Published from the Rock, 1868, 8vo. Mr. Tupper's Hymn For All Nations, (No. 14, supra), Thanksgiving Hymn, and Trust in God, will be found in Dr. Rogers's Lyra Britannica, 2d ed., 1868, 559–61. He contributed to Our Year, by Walter Severn, 1864, sm. fol.: has written for several periodicals, and used some influence on behalf of The Anglo-Saxon, a short-lived magazine, vol. 1., Lon., 1849, 8vo. In 1851 he paid a visit to the United States. In addition to the authorities already cited, see notices of his productions in Eccl. Rev., 4th Ser., v. 40; De Bow's Rev., xi. 12, (by J. G. "The discoveries and inventions relating to the uses which have hitherto been made of the atmosphere, and the mathematical deductions which so clearly teach us to hope for the practicability of an aerial navigation, have never yet been described in a manner worthy of the lives hitherto sacrificed in unavailing attempts, nor of the confidence in ultimate success with which those are now inspired who have patiently and laboriously considered the question in a mathematical and scientific point of view. Since the publication of Mr. Thornbury's (not eminently successful) Life of Turner the following announcement has been made:

"It is said that the executors of the late Royal Academician Turner are in possession of unpublished letters and papers which illustrate in a new way altogether the details of Turner's life."—Lon. Athen., 1861, ii. 630.

"Turner is my great favourite of all the painters here. I went to see his pictures yesterday, and was delighted, as I always am with them. He combines the highest poetical imagination with an exquisite feeling for all the truth and individuality of nature; and he has shown that the ideal, as it is called, is not the improving of nature, but the selecting and combining objects that are most in harmony and character with each other."—C. R. Leslie to Miss Leslie, London, Dec. 12, 1816: Autobiog. Recollec., 1860.

"Mr. Ruskin, in a lecture he delivered at Edinburgh, draws a touching picture of the neglect and loneliness in which Turner died. This picture, however, must lose much of its intended effect when it is known that such seclusion was Turner's own fault. No death-bed could be more surrounded by attentive friends than his might have been had he chosen to let his friends know where he lived. He had constantly dinner-invitations, which he seldom even answered, but appeared at the table of the inviter or not, as it suited him. His letters were addressed to him at his house in Queen Ann Street; but the writers never knew where he really resided. . . . It is greatly to be regretted that Turner never would sit for a portrait, excepting when he was a young man, and then only for a profile drawing by Dance. This is, therefore, the only satisfactory likeness of him extant."—C. R. LESLIE: Autobiog. Recollec., ch. x.

"His sketch of St. Paul's life and character, in the imposing volume, 'The Saviour with his Apostles and Prophets,' edited by Bishop Wainwright, furnishes a specimen of his power to succeed in the more ornate and eloquent style when he saw fit to attempt it. The Chronicon of Eusebius closed the list; and he had several other works nearly ready for the press. Among his manuscripts, his full, exact, and elaborate exposition of Messianic texts; his large notes upon the Gospels; his notes upon the Epistles to the Corinthians, with other portions unfolded, and single difficult passages interpreted, besides many elaborate sermons, involving important discussions, with a memoir of certain passages of his personal theological history, must all combine to furnish much valuable material for future publication."—REV. DR. S. R. JOHNSON: ubi supra.

16. Autobiography of the Rev. Samuel H. Turner, D.D., 1862, 12mo.

"Dr. Turner stands by common consent at the head of the expositors of Scripture in the Protestant Episcopal Church. In the range and accuracy of his Biblical learning he has no equal in that church, and few in other churches take higher rank."—Amer. Theolog. Rev., (Presbyterian), Feb. 1860, 174.

"We have more than once expressed our high sense of Professor Turner's merits as a Biblical critic. We can hardly conceive of a nicer mutual equilibrium than exists in his mind between reverence and learning, faith and freedom, loyalty to the voice of revelation, and fearless inquiry as to what that voice actually utters and means."—A. P. FEAUDY, D.D., (Unitarian) N. Amer. Rev., Jan. 1857, 273.

"Dr. Turner and myself have corresponded for at least twenty-five years. He is a ripe and good scholar, and most worthy man. . . . All of his publications are valuable."—REV. T. H. HORNE, D.D., (Church of England:) Letter to S. Austin Allibone, London, Aug. 31, 1858.

Turner, Sharon, b. in London, Sept. 24, 1768, after many years of successful practice as an attorney in the Temple, in 1829 retired to Winchmore Hill, where he resided until within a few weeks of his death, which occurred in London, Feb. 13, 1847. See Lon. Gent. Mag., 1847, i. 434, (Obituary.)

He is best known by his History of England from the Earliest Period to the Death of Elizabeth, which consists of the following portions, separately published: 1. History of the Anglo-Saxons; comprising the History of England from the Earliest Period to the Norman Conquest, Lon., 1799-1805, 4 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1807, 2 vols. 4to; 3d ed., 1820, 3 vols. 8vo; 4th ed., 1823, 3 vols. 8vo; 5th ed., 1828, 3 vols. 8vo; 6th ed., 1836, 3 vols. 8vo; 1839, 3 vols. 8vo; Paris, (Baudry), 1840, 3 vols. 8vo; Phila., 1841, 3 vols. 8vo; 7th ed., Revised by [the author's son] the Rev. Sydney Turner, Lon., 1852, 3 vols. 8vo.

"So much new information was probably never laid before the public in any one historical publication."—ROBERT SOUTHBY: Letter to John May, Aug. 5, 1805: Southey's Life and Correspond., ch. xi.

"Though apparently a most patient antiquarian, his imagination is so active that his style is unexpectedly loaded with metaphors to a degree that is not only inconsistent with historic composition, but with all composition."—PROF. SMYTH: Lects. on Mod. Hist., Lect. V. See, also, Lect. VIII.

It is commended in Courtenay's Life of Sir W. Temple; Dibdin's Lib. Comp., ed. 1825, 151, 154, 245; A. Cunningham's Biog. and Crit. Hist. of Lit., &c.; Warren's Introd. to Law Stu., 2d ed., 245; Hoffman's Leg. Stu., xxxiv. 146; and N. Amer. Rev., lv. 249; and commended, with qualifications, in Edin. Rev., iii. 360, (by Mr. Cohen, afterwards Sir F. Palgrave); and in Spalding's Hist. of Eng. Lit., ch. xv. See, also, Lon. Gent. Mag., 1847, i. 137; PALGRAVE, SIR FRANCIS, K.H., No. 4, (quotation from Edin. Rev., lv. 535.) A notice of vol. i. in the Critical Review for Jan. 1800, assailing the authenticity of some ancient British poems, elicited from Mr. Turner—2. A Vindication of the Genuineness of the Antient British Poems of Aneurin, Taliesin, Llywarch, Hen, and Merdhin, with Specimens of the Poems, 1803, 8vo, pp. 284. This Vindication, which was appended to the successive editions of his History of the Anglo-Saxons, was unfavourably noticed in Edin. Rev., iv.

198-206, and in Thomas Watts's Sketch of the History of the Welsh Language and Literature, Reprinted separately from C. Knight's "English Cyclopædia," xxiii. On the other hand, George Ellis styles Turner "the able and successful champion of Welsh literature." 3. History of England from the Norman Conquest to the Year 1509, (since styled History of England during the Middle Ages, comprising the Reigns from William the Conqueror to the Accession of Henry VIII., &c.) 1814-15-23, 3 vols. 4to; 2d ed., 1825, 5 vols. 8vo; 3d ed., 1830, 5 vols. 8vo; 5th ed., Revised by the Rev. Sydney Turner, 1853, 4 vols. 8vo.

"Many curious particulars may be collected, and much instruction may be derived, from his learned and often amusing work."—PROF. SMYTH: Lects. on Mod. Hist., Lect. V.

"A small part of Henry's reign occupies the great bulk of the work, while the remainder is dispatched in a few pages."—ROBERT LEMON, (p. 1083, supra), as quoted by T. Moore: Moore's Memoirs, vii. 196.

"We will venture to assert that not ten persons in the realm have had the patience to toil through half the wearisome length of its seven hundred pages."—Lon. Mon. Rev., Jan. 1827, 1.

"The circumspect and conscientious Sharon Turner."—W. H. PRESCOTT: Miscell., ed. 1855, 101.

"Thank you for your new History, which I have read with great attention, great pleasure, and great advantage. . . . I could wish that the style had in some places been less ambitious."—ROBERT SOUTHLEY, Nov. 12, 1826: Southley's Life and Correspondence, ch. xxx.

5. History of the Reigns of Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth. (being the Second Part of the Modern History of England,) 1829, 4to; 1829, 2 vols. 8vo; 2d ed., 1835, 2 vols. 8vo.

"Turner's History of England, [i.e. Nos. 3, 4, 5, supra], though distinguished by the same research and acuteness, [as No. 1, supra], is not of equal merit; and, unfortunately, the peculiarities and uncouthness of its style, as well as a strange attempt to introduce novelty in spelling, have hindered the work from acquiring the popularity which it really deserves."—SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON: Hist. of Eng., 1815-1852, ch. v.

See, also, ALISON's Essays, 1850, iii. 425.

"Turner's History of England down to the lives of the Tudors is replete with Anglo-Saxon and other ancient learning; and it is written with dignity, purity, and eloquence. Turner surpasses Hume in the depth and extent of his researches, and in the spirit and tenor of his moral reflections."—CHANCELLOR KENT: Course of Eng. Read., ed. 1853, 22.

"His works, in my fancy, without any presumption, compare with any of the Varro's, Columella's, or Palladio's of Rome."—GOOGE.

"Googe set Tusser on a level with Varro and Columella and Palladius; but I would rather compare him to old Hesiod."—STILLINGFLEET.

"It must be acknowledged that this old English Georgic has much more of the simplicity of Hesiod than the elegance of Virgil."—WARTON: Hist. of Eng. Poet., ed. 1840, iii. 252.

"Whether he bought or sold, he lost; and when a renter, impoverished himself and never enriched his landlord. Yet hath he laid down excellent rules in his 'Book of Husbandry and Housewifery,' (so that the observer thereof must be rich,) in his own defence."—FULLER: Worthies, (ul supra.)

"The great merit of Tusser's book, independent of the utility of its agricultural precepts, consists in the faithful picture which it delineates of the manners, customs, and domestic life of the English farmer, and in the morality, piety, and benevolent simplicity which pervade the whole. In a poetical light its pretensions are not great."—DR. DRAKE: Shakspeare and his Times, i. 667.

"Such was the ancient farmer's year, which Tusser has described with wonderful spirit, even to the minutest detail, and such were the operations of husbandry that the boy Shakspeare would have beheld with interest amidst his native corn-fields and pastures."—CHARLES KNIGHT: William Shakspeare: a Biography, i. Pictorial Shakspeare, 2d ed., 1867, viii. 55.

"The precepts of Tusser are excellent, and show very much cool collected sense."—DONALDSON: Agr. Bing., 8.

"In the scansion of his lines Tusser is considered to be remarkably correct according to the pronunciation of his day."—BLACKIE, Mag., xlv. 461.

"That he [Lord Eldon] had all the natural qualities and all the acquired accomplishments which go to form the greatest legal character is undeniable. To extraordinary acuteness and quickness of apprehension he added a degree of patient industry which no labour could weary, a love of investigation which no hardness in the most uninteresting subject could repulse."—LORD BROUGHAM: States, Time Geo. III., ed. 1856, ii. 59.

"The great element of Lord Eldon's success, both in legal and political life, was the remarkable simplicity which characterized his moral nature, his intellect, his opinions, and his purposes. Even his prodigious industry, which seemed to rejoice in the accumulation of toils on those which would stupefy men who are accounted laborious, was a subordinate power to this singleness of being and aim."—SIR T. Tyndale, or Tindale, William, otherwise Hitchins, the Reformer, translator, and martyr, was b. about 1477 to 1484, according to Foxe about the borders of Wales, according to other biographers at Hunt's Court, parish of Nibley, Gloucestershire, and was educated at Oxford and Cambridge. After acting as tutor to the children of Sir John Welch, where he exposed himself to danger by his advocacy of the doctrines of the Reformation, he came to London, unsuccessfully sought admission into the household of Cuthbert Tunstall, Bishop of London, and subsequently became an inmate of the family of Humphrey Mummuth or Monmouth, (a merchant and alderman), who entertained him for six months and then settled upon him ten pounds per annum to support him in Germany. Settling at Antwerp, he busied himself in a translation of the New Testament from the Greek into English, the publication of which exposed him to a savage persecution, which resulted in his being strangled and burnt for heresy, under an imperial decree, at Vilvoorden, six miles from Brussels, October 6, 1536. He was the author of a number of theological works, already noticed: see Fox, or Foxe, JOHN; FIRTH, or FRYTH, JOHN; RUSSELL, THOMAS. Since Russell's publication, new editions of Tyndale have appeared, viz.: I. Doctrinal Treatises, and Introductions to Different Portions of the Holy Scriptures; Edited for the Parker Society by the Rev. Henry Walter, B.D., F.R.S., Camb., 1848, 8vo. II. Expositions and Notes on Sundry Portions of the Holy Scriptures, together with the Practice of Prelates; Edited for the Parker Society by the Rev. H. Walter, 1849, 8vo. III. An Answer to Sir Thomas More's Dialogue: The Supper of the Lord after the True Meaning of John 6 and 1 Cor. 11; and William Tracy's Testament Expounded, 1850, 8vo. See, also, Richmond's Fathers, i. 1; Tracts of Angl. Fathers, ii. 7.

Of Tyndale's translation of the New Testament the first quarto edition was printed, it is believed, in 1525, and, it would appear, at Cologne, in the office of Peter Quentell, finished at Worms by Peter Schoeffer. Only a fragment of a copy, 31 leaves, (in the Grenville collection, British Museum,) is known to be in existence. The first octavo edition, 1525 or 1526, (of which only two copies, one in the Baptist Museum, Bristol, the other in the Library of the Chapter of St. Paul's,—both imperfect,—are known to be extant,) is supposed to have been printed at Worms by Peter Schoeffer: Reprinted, with a Memoir of Tyndale's Life and Writings, &c., by George Ofor, Lon., (S. Bagster,) 1836, cr. 8vo; i. p., sm. 4to. A copy with red borders to every page, the portrait painted, initials illuminated, Luscombe, in 1854, morocco joints, in a mahogany box, £7 7s. See Lon. Gent. Mag., 1837, i. 176, 1851, ii. 303; DAPNEY, J. P. There is a lithographic fac-simile reprint of this first octavo edition, with an Introduction by Francis Fry, F.S.A., Bristol, printed for the Editor, 1862, sm. 8vo, £8, 177 copies, of which 26 are in quarto. A few copies are on old paper, a few on vellum, and a few illuminated like the original one in the Baptist College.

"Though it is far from a perfect translation, yet few first translations will be found preferable to it. It is astonishing how little obsolete the language of it is, even at this day; and in point of perspicuity and noble simplicity, propriety of idiom, and purity of style, no English version has yet approached it."—DR. ALEX. GEDDES: Prospect. for a New Trans. of the Holy Bible, 1788, 4to, 88.

"What he undertook was to be admired as glorious; what he performed, to be commended as profitable; and wherein he failed is to be excused as pardonable."—FULLER: Church History, book v.

"He, by God's Word and Spirit's inspiration, The Gospel light respread throughout our nation."

QUARLES.

"Tyndale's translation of the New Testament is the most important philological monument of the first half of the sixteenth century, perhaps I should say of the whole period between Chaucer and Shakespeare, both as a historical relic, and as having more than any thing else contributed to shape and fix the sacred dialect and establish the form which the Bible must permanently assume in an English dress."—GEOR. P. MARSH: Lects. on the English Language, 1860, Lect. V. See, also, Lects. VII., XII., XVIII., and Note, XXVI., XXVIII., and XXX.

Tyndale's translation, with his latest revisions, (1534, 12mo,) was republished in The English Hexapla, 1841, 4to, (Bagster.) See, also, A Collation of Tyndale's Version [1534] with the Authorized Version [1611] of the New Testament, by Wilmot Marsh, Chester, 1846, 8vo, and The Gothic and Anglo-Saxon Gospels in Parallel Columns, by J. Bosworth, D.D., Lon., 1865, 8vo.

His translation of The Pentateuch into English was Emprinted at Marlborough in the Land of Hesse, in the Yere of our Lorde MCCCCXXX. A copy which had been Heber's was resold, Gardner, July, 1854, for £159; and another copy, (see Amer. Pub. Circ., Aug. 1, 1863, 271, by J. Sabin,) at Bishop Daly's sale, Sotheby, June 26, 1858, for £155.

Prof. Childs, of Cambridge, Massachusetts, is said to be employed on a new edition. 7. Dissertatio de Babrio, Fabularum Æsopiarum Scriptore, 1776, 8vo. Other learned classical works, &c., for which see authorities cited below. His notes on Euripides are, in the opinion of Dr. Harwood, the most valuable part of what is called Musgrave's edition, (see MUSGRAVE, SIR SAMUEL, M.D.;) he contributed much useful matter to Stevens's and Reed's Shakspeare of 1778 and 1785, and published several excellent papers in the Archæologia, &c. After his death appeared—3. Aristotelis de Poetica Liber, Græce et Latine: Lectionem constituit, Versionem refinxit, Animadversionibus illustravit Thomas Tyrwhitt, (curante T. Burgess et J. Randolph,) Oxonii, 1794, 4to, 1. p., 30 copies, fol. Bishop Randolph's 1. p. copy was sold, at his sale in 1814, for £37 16s., and was afterwards bought for the library at Chatsworth for £60. See Dibdin's Lib. Comp., ed. 1825, 682, n. Ibid., 1794, 8vo, some fine paper; 1806, 8vo, some l. p.; 1817, 8vo, some l. p.

To 2d ed.

was added Vipera Caudisoma Americana; or the Anatomy of a Rattle-Snake. The Anatomy of the Pygmie "is Tyson's best and most valuable work. . . . It was a chimpanzee; and the later labours of Professors Owen and Vrolik, though they have added to what Tyson described, have proved the complete accuracy of nearly all his observations. . . . Haller, with full justice, says, 'We have nothing in comparative anatomy that can be compared to this work, excepting the works on insects;' by which last he probably means those of Swammerdam."—*Knights's Eng. Mr. Tytler undertook this work at the request of Sir Walter Scott, who reviewed (with mingled censure and praise) vols. i. and ii. in the Quarterly Review for November, 1829, 328-59, and "meant to criticise the work throughout in similar detail." (Lockhart: Life of Scott, ch. lviii., n.) In his History of Scotland, Sir Walter remarks that "the tenor of the work in general reflects the highest honour on Mr. Tytler's talents and industry." Vol. vii. was reviewed in the same periodical for March, 1841, 303-44, by Lord Mahon, who predicted that the work would "become, and long remain, the standard history of Scotland." See, also, Dec. 1839, 53.

"He possesses in a very high degree many of the qualities of a great historian. Indefatigable in industry, accurate in detail, trustworthy in spirit, he unites with these qualities—which are the foundation of history—the poetic temperament and fervent spirit which are essential to the superstructure. . . . The defect of his work . . . is that it contains too many quotations from original documents, or letters, in the text."—SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON: Hist. of Europe, 1815-1852, ch. v.

In early life he contributed to Edin. Mag., Blackwood's Mag., and Thomson's Select Melodies of Scotland, Edin., 1822-25, 6 vols. r. 8vo; he was the author of the article Scotland in Encyc. Rev., lxx. 62;) and in conjunction with Mr. Hog, of Newliston, and Adam Urquhart, edited Memoirs of the War carried on in Scotland and Ireland, 1689-91, by Major-General Hugh Mackay, presented to the Bannatyne and Maitland Clubs in 1833. He wrote a number of songs adapted to his own voice, and with these, and a ready and nimble wit, was wont to delight his friends. In politics he was a Conservative; in religion, an Episcopalian. In 1844 he was complimented by a royal pension of £200 per annum for "literary services to the country." Notices of Mr. Tytler, a worthy son of a worthy sire, will be found in Chambers's and Thomson's Biog. Dict. of Em. Scots., ed. 1855, v. 583-90, and in Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., xxi., 1859, 412-15. The author of the last-named article has published a more extended sketch, (which we have not seen,) entitled The Portrait of a Christian Gentleman: a Memoir of Patrick Fraser Tytler, Author of the "History of Scotland;" by his Friend, the Rev. John W. Burgon, M.A., Fellow of Oriel College, Lon., March, 1859, cr. 8vo; 2d ed., Aug. 1859, cr. 8vo, pp. 372.

Mag., lxxx.; Eastwood and Wright's Bible Word-Book, 1866, Pref., vii. Udall was not unwilling to reward his boys by penning plays for their performance; but one of the most famous of his pupils, Thomas Tusser, bears plaintive evidence that in handling the rod he was, at least on one memorable occasion, equal to his famous Westminster successor, Dr. Busby:

"From Paules I went, to Eton sent,
To learn straight waies the Latin phrases,
Where fiftie-three stripes given to me
At once I had:
The fault but small, or none at all,
It came to pass thus beat I was:
See, Udall, see, the merchie of thee
To me, poore lad!"

Metrical Autobiography: see TUSSER, THOMAS.

Little did the stern pedagogue suppose, as the "poore" country "lad" trembled in his vigorous grasp, that the sound of that day's castigation would be echoed in future ages, so long as men should admire and compare the Georgics of Virgil and the Husbandry of Tusser.

This catalogue formed the text of an article in Lon. Quar. Rev., lviii. 414-64. (Manners of the Eleventh and Twelfth Centuries.) Upcott was one of the compilers of a Biographical Dictionary of Living Authors of Great Britain and Ireland, 1816, 8vo, which has been ascribed (see Notes and Queries, x. 451, xi. 34) to John Watkins and Frederick Shoberl, and also to the Rev. David Rivers, of Highgate, London. Now, as the publisher's advertisement (before us) states that "several eminent men have together bestowed a laborious application of three years in the compilation of the Dictionary," it is quite likely that each of the above had a hand in it. In Bohn's Lowndes, Part 1, (1857), 205, A-C are ascribed to Upcott, and the remainder to Shoberl.

Urquhart, or Orchard, Sir Thomas, according to his own account, a descendant of the Urquharts of Cromarty, himself "by line the 143d, by succession the 153d, from Adam," (see No. 4,) was knighted by Charles I. at Whitehall; taken prisoner when fighting for Charles II. at the battle of Worcester; came to his death, according to one account, by immoderate laughter at—according to another, by immoderate vinous celebration of—the restoration of his royal master, Charles II.

Usher, or Ussher, (in Latin, Usseus,) James, D.D., one of the most eminent scholars of modern times, a descendant of the Nevilles, an ancient English family, was b. in Dublin, Jan. 4, 1580; educated at, and became Fellow of, Trinity College, Dublin, where he was for thirteen years (1607 et seq.) Professor of Divinity; Chancellor of the Cathedral of St. Patrick, 1607; Bishop of Meath, 1620; Privy Counsellor of Ireland, 1623; Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of Ireland, 1624; Preacher of Lincoln's Inn, 1647–54; d. in the house of his devoted friend the Countess of Peterborough, at Ryegate, Surrey, March 21, 1656, and, by the order of Cromwell, was interred with great magnificence in Erasmus Chapel, Westminster Abbey, the funeral service being performed according to the liturgy of the Church of England.

"He was easy, affable, and cheerful in conversation, and extremely charitable. He was of so sweet a temper that I never heard he did an ill office to any one man, or revenged any of those that had been done to him. He envied no man's happiness, or vilified their persons or parts; nor was he apt to censure or condemn any man upon bare reports. Though he could rebuke sharply in the cause of virtue and religion, yet he was not easily provoked to passion."—DR. RICHARD PARR, (Usher's chaplain): Life of Usher, 1686, fol.

He was wont to hold learned conferences with Dr. John Preston, "the most celebrated of the Puritans;" and at the conclusion of these interviews it was very common with the good archbishop to say, "Come, doctor, let us say something about Christ before we part."

Idem, accedunt ejusdem J. Usseri Tractatus duo, viz.: Chronologia Sacra Veteris Testamenti; Dissertatio de Macedonum et Asianorum Anno Solari: cum Indicibus, Opera et Studio A. Lubini, Paris, 1673, fol., (with a fine brilliant portrait by Landry.)

Idem, accedunt tria ejusdem Opuscula de Chronologia Veteris Testamenti: de Macedonum et Asianorum Anno Solari; et de Romanæ Ecclesiæ Symbolo Apostolico Vetere, alisque Fidei Formulæ: una cum Vita, à Tho. Smitho conscripta, Genève, 1722, fol., some 1 p. Optima edita.

The only addition to the Geneva ed. is the Diatriba de Symbolis: otherwise the Paris and Geneva edits. are the same, the latter ed. having taken the indexes from Lubin's ed.

Each of the edits. contains all of Usher's chronological works. Other edits.: Bremæ, 1686, fol.; Veronæ, 1741, fol.

The chronology of Usher is followed in the margins of our larger Bibles.

"I have with no small eagerness and delight turned over these your learned and accurate Annals, wondering not a little at that your indefatigable labour which you have bestowed on a work fetched together out of such a world of monuments of antiquity; whereby your Grace hath better merited the title of Χαλεκτερος and φιλοσοφος than those on whom it was formerly bestowed."—Bishop Hall to Archbishop Usher, on the receipt of a copy ex dono auctoris.

Along with the reading of the historical books of the Scripture I would recommend Usher's Annals, which is a work perfect in its kind, and which well digested will give a very sound knowledge of the history of the world, sacred and profane, and the destruction of the second temple; which knowledge will upon innumerable occasions be of unspeakable use."—DR. WOTTON: Thoughts, &c. of Studying Divinity.

"This book is indispensable to the study of sacred chronology. There is none like it in the English language. Its value cannot be too highly appreciated."—DR. S. DAVIDSON.

"This is a work of great labour and research, which has been followed by the greater part of modern chronologists, though the system of Dr. Hales [see HALES, Wm., D.D., No. 2] is perhaps more correct."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., 442.

"This has been the chronology generally adopted by English historians, as well as by Bossuet, Calmet, and Rollin, so that for many years it might be called the orthodox scheme of Europe. No former annals of the world had been so exact in making dates and connecting sacred history with profane. It was, therefore, exceedingly convenient for those who, possessing no sufficient leisure or learning for these inquiries, might very reasonably confide in such authority."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, iii. 256.

"The first writer who instituted a systematic inquiry into the Septuagint version was Archbishop Usher. . . . This is a work of great merit; it displays much original inquiry, and may be regarded as the ground-work of later publications on the Septuagint."—BISHOP MARSH: Lect. on Divinity, Part II., 2d ed., 1811, Lect. XII., 121.

He published other works, and others of his appeared after his death: we notice—15. Eighteen Sermons, with Preface on his Life by S. Gower, Lon., 1660, 4to.

A vol. of "Twenty Sermons" was pub. 1677, fol., 1678, fol.; again,—really nineteen sermons,—with No. 6, with Life of the Author, (Rel. Tract Soc.,) 18mo, 1831, 1847, and 1853.

"Truly valuable, practical, and experimental Sermons, taken in short-hand at Oxford. Eighteen of these Sermons were printed in 4to, (1660), and they have been republished by the Tract Society."—Bickersteth's C. S., 4th ed., 496. See, also, 246.

"Displays as much as any of the other writings of Usher his very extensive erudition."—Orme's Bibl. Bib., 443.

"He shows himself fully competent to meet the Romanists in all their subtleties."—Bickersteth's C. S., 476.

It is asserted (see Lowndes's Brit. Lib., 1068) that the use of the Latin language in the Church services was not introduced until the reign of Charlemagne, (crowned A.D. 800.)

See, also, BERNARD, NICHOLAS, D.D., for other posthumous publications of works by Usher. The only collective edition of Usher's Whole Works, edited, vols. i.–xiii. by Professor C. R. Elrington, D.D., vols. xiv.–xvi. by J. H. Todd, D.D., was pub. (save vol. xiv., which appeared in Aug. 1862) Dublin University Press, 1841–48, 16 vols. 8vo, £9 12s.; to which add (vol. xvii., June, 1864) Index to the whole. Rev., Jan. 1862, 125; BERNARD, NICHOLAS, D.D.; SANDERSON, ROBERT, D.D. As a boy he was a marvel of erudition, and, when only about twenty years of age,*

"having met with Stapleton's Fortress of Faith, he tasked himself to read the Fathers thoroughly, being resolved to examine the truth of that learned Author's quotations from them. He spent eighteen years in this study without interruption, only by way of refreshment spending some hours occasionally in searching into and collecting the antiquities of his country. . . . In prosecuting this study, his method was to make notes and observations upon their writings, taking them in order, and marking the passages which were genuine, and which spurious and forged. In this compass of time he not only read the Greek and Latin Fathers, but most of the considerable Schoolmen and Divines from the first to the thirteenth century. He intended to have published these collections, under the title of Bibliotheca Theologica, after a book of that title published by one Johannes Molanus, Professor of Divinity at Louvain."—Biog. Brit., 2d ed., vol. vi., Part I, (1763,) 4064-5.

The MS. of this work he confided on his death-bed to Dr. Gerard Langbaine, (p. 1057, supra;) but he also died without completing it. Dean Fell then endeavoured, but in vain, to have it prepared for the press; and it now reposes in the British Museum. Will not the syndics of the Dublin University Press confide it to a competent editor and give it to the world, from which it has too long been withheld?

We have omitted one reference, and an important one: in Blount's Censura Celebriorum Authorum, 1590, fol. 701-4, will be found many eulogiums (chiefly in Latin and from foreign scholars) on the erudition of the great archbishop. It is asserted that he was solicited to accept a professor's chair at Leyden, and was invited by Cardinal Richelieu to settle in France, with a promise of protection in the exercise of his religion.

"The writings of our Irish primate Usher, who maintained the antiquity of his order, but not upon such high ground as many in England would have desired, are known for their extraordinary learning, in which he has perhaps never been surpassed by an English writer. But for judgment and calm appreciation of evidence the name of Usher has not been altogether so much respected by posterity as it was by his contemporaries."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, ii. 365.

Five autograph letters of Archbishop Usher to Sir Henry Spelman were sold by Puttick & Simpson, Lon-

Usher, James, a descendant of the preceding, b. about 1720, in the county of Dublin, was successively a farmer, a linen-draper, a priest of the Church of Rome, and a school-teacher, (for a time in partnership with Mr. John Walker, author of the Pronouncing Dictionary, &c.,) and d. 1772. 1. New System of Philosophy, founded on the Universal Operations of Nature, Lon., 1764, 8vo. He censures Locke, as leaning too much towards naturalism. 2. Clio; or a Discourse on Taste; addressed to a Young Lady, 1772, 2 vols. 8vo. To this was subsequently added an Introduction to the Theory of the Human Mind, which Thomas Green tells us (see his Extracts from the Diary of a Lover of Lit., 1810, 128) he "read with much interest." 3. An Elegy, &c., 8vo. Privately printed: 1860, with MS. notes by Porson, £3 10s. Usher was a contributor to The Public Ledger. See European Mag., 1766.

It consists of treatises (by Vallancey, the editor, and others) on Irish coins, the literature, geography, history, and other antiquities of the country. See Bohn's Lowndes, 2749. It is not without value, but must not be relied on as a guide.

"It is a difficult and rather unpleasant task to follow a writer so rambling in his reasonings and so obscure in his style: his hypotheses are of a visionary nature."—GEORGE PETRIE.

"We allude to a precious scheme of Mr. Valpy's, now in progress, of republishing the very worst edition of the Latin Classics. This indefatigable and zealous printer does not seem to have had the remotest idea that the value of the original Delphine editions consisted almost entirely in their scarcity.—a merit which his own publication of course cannot possess. The Regent Classics are minute volumes, with short prefaces in bad Latin by a Mr. Carolus Coote."—BISHOP BLOMFIELD: Lon. Quar. Rev., xxii. (Jan. 1820) 303, n.

At the end of the Preface to the collection is a Latin tribute to Mr. Dyer for his great industry and critical acumen.

"The unhappy subscriber finds he has got only two-thirds of Cicero,—the very author on whose fame rests the literary character of the Augustan age." See Lon. Gent. Mag., ubi infra.

Vanbrugh, Sir John, a descendant of a Flemish family, was b., according to the memoir prefixed to the collection of his plays, 1759, 2 vols. 12mo, in the parish of St. Stephen's, Wallbrook, London, 1666; entered the army as an ensign at the age of nineteen, and rose to the rank of captain; was for some time imprisoned in the Bastille; by the nomination of the excellent John Evelyn, was made Secretary to the Commissioners for completing Greenwich Hospital, 1695; Clarencieux King-at-Arms, 1705-25; knighted, 1714; Comptroller of the Royal Works, Jan. 6, 1714-15; Surveyor of the Works at Greenwich Hospital, Aug. 17, 1716; d. Mar. 26, 1726. Vanbrugh acquired distinction as a dramatic author and as an architect. The plays—all comedies, save The Country House, which is a farce—which appeared under his name are the following: 1. The Relapse; or, Virtue in Danger, 1697, 4to. Altered by Sheridan, 1777, to A Trip to Scarborough, 1781, 8vo. 2. The Provok'd Wife, 1697, 4to. 3. Æsop, in two Parts, 1697, 4to. Plot from the French. 4. The Pilgrim, 1700, 4to. From Fletcher. 5. The False Friend, 1702, 4to. 6. The Confederacy, 1705. Plot from the French of Dancour. 7. The Concoct, 1706. Not printed. Adapted from Molière. 8. Squire Treeloby, 1706. Pub. 1734, 8vo. Adapted from Molière. 9. The Mistake, 1706, 4to. Adapted from Molière. 10. The Country House, (1715), 12mo. 11. A Journey to London: left unfinished: completed by Cibber, (who assures us that he did not alter a word of the original), and published as The Provoked Husband, 1728, 8vo. Collective editions of his Plays, (to those of 1759 and 1776 an Account of his Life and Writings was prefixed,) each in 2 vols. 12mo, were published in 1730, 1735, 1759, and 1776. See, also, CONGREVE, WILLIAM; FARQUHAR, GEORGE: this volume was first published in 1840, r. 8vo. To Vanbrugh's Short Vindication of The Relapse and The Provoked Wife from Immorality and Profaneness, by the Author, 1698, 8vo, and the response to it, we have already alluded, (COLLIER, JEREMY, p. 409.) That neither the "Author" nor any other champion could successfully "vindicate" the indecency of these pieces will be readily granted. In his Æsop, and A Journey to London, he seems disposed to make some atonement for his offences against morality and common propriety.

"Sir John Vanbrugh has spirit, wit, and ease; but he is to the last degree gross and indelicate. He is one of the most immoral of all our comedians. His 'Provoked Wife' is full of such indecent sentiments and allusions as ought to explode it out of all reputable society. His Relapse is equally censurable; and these are his only two considerable pieces."—DR. BLAIR: Lects. on Rhet. and Belles-Lettres, Lect. XLVII.

"Vanbrugh, who wrote with more nature and fire, though with more faultless art and precision, [than Congreve]."—SMOLLETT: Hist. of England: George I., Notes.

"Vanbrugh and Farquhar, inferior to Congreve in real wit, and falling into the next period, were perhaps his equals in the composition of acting plays."—SIR WALTER SCOTT: Essay on the Drama, in Encyc. Brit., and in his Prose Works.

"Vanbrugh comes next, and holds his own fully with the best. He is no writer at all, as to mere authorship; but he makes up for it by a prodigious fund of comic invention and ludicrous description, bordering on caricature. Though he did not borrow from him, he was much more like Molière in genius than Wycherley was, who professedly imitated him. He has none of Congreve's graceful refinement, and as little of Wycherley's serious manner and studied insight into the springs of character; but his exhibition of it in dramatic contrast and unlooked-for situations, where the different parties play upon one another's failings and into one another's hands, keeping up the jest like a game at battledore and shuttlecock, and urging it on to the utmost verge of breathless extravagance, in the mere eagerness of the fray, is beyond that of any other of our writers."—HAZLITT: Lects. on the Eng. Comic Writers, Lect. IV.: On Wycherley, Congreve, Vanbrugh, and Farquhar.

"In humorous conception our admirable play The Provoked Husband, the best parts of which are due to Vanbrugh, seems to equal any thing he [Molière] has left. . . . The Relapse and The Provoked Wife of Vanbrugh have attained a considerable reputation. In the former, the character of Amanda is interesting; especially in the momentary wavering and quick recovery of her virtue. This is the first homage that the theatre had paid, since the Restoration, to female chastity; and, notwithstanding the vicious tone of the other characters, in which Vanbrugh has gone as great lengths as any of his contemporaries, we perceive the beginnings of a reaction in public spirit which gradually reformed and elevated the moral standard of the stage. The Provoked Wife, though it cannot be said to give any proofs of this sort of improvement, has some merit as a comedy; it is witty and animated, as Vanbrugh usually was; the character of Sir John Brute may not have been too great a caricature of real manners such as survived from the debased reign of Charles; and the endeavour to expose the grossness of the older generation was itself an evidence that a better polish had been given to social life."—HALLAM: Lit. Hist. of Europe, 4th ed., 1854, iii. 614, 528.

"Vanbrugh almost as great a genius as ever lived. Sir John Brute—And this woman will get a husband! Confederacy, from the French; with so much the air of an original! Who would have thought it?"—CHARLES JAMES FOX: Recollec. by S. Rogers, 1859, 32.

"How Van wants grace, who never wanted wit."—POPE.

As an architect Sir John is best and most favourably known by the lofty piles of Blenheim and Castle Howard. His edifices did not escape the witticisms of the satirists of the day, and the poetical shafts of Dean Swift and Dr. Abel Evans (p. 564, supra) formed a permanent lodgment, from which they will never be displaced, in his castle-walls. But the "goose-pie" and the "mouse-trap" similitudes of the former were far less happy than Evans's famous epitaph:

"Lie heavy on him, Earth, for he Laid many a heavy load on thee!"

But in some of these "heavy loads" great merits have been recognized:

"To speak of Vanbrugh in the language of a painter, he had originality of invention; he understood light and shadow, and had great skill in composition. . . . Vanbrugh's fate was that of the great Perrault. Both were the objects of the petulant sarcasms of factious men of letters, and both have left some of the fairest monuments which, to this day, decorate their several countries,—the façade of the Louvre, Blenheim, and Castle Howard."—SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS: Works.

"The heaviness and enormity of Blenheim Castle have been greatly criticised; perhaps too severely. We may be too much bigoted to Greek and Roman architecture. . . . What made Vanbrugh ridiculous was his applying to small houses a style of architecture which could not possibly succeed but in a large one. In a small house, where the grandeur of a whole cannot be attempted, the eye is at leisure to contemplate parts, and meets with frequent occasion of disgust."—WILLIAM GILPIN: Observations on the Mountains and Lakes of Cumberland and Westmoreland.

"Vanbrugh's faults were generally those of Michael Angelo. He was a painter's architect, and did not understand beauty of proportion and detail so well as the pictorial arrangement of lights and shadows; to produce which, in the Quincunco, it is almost necessary to part with all the higher beauties of architecture."—PROF. WILLIAM HOSKING, of King's College, London: Encyc. Brit., 8th ed., iii. 1853, 455, art. Architecture.

Vane, Sir Henry, the Younger, son of Sir Henry Vane, of Hadlow, Kent, was b. 1612; became a gentleman commoner of Magdalene College, Oxford, about 1628; gave offence to the court and church by his puritanical tendencies, and in consequence thereof emigrated to New England, 1635; was elected Governor, 1636, and returned to England, 1637; made Co-treasurer and subsequently sole Treasurer of the Navy, which office, then worth £30,000 per annum, he voluntarily relinquished; knighted and M.P., 1640; became a leader of the Independents, but disapproved of the military dictation to Parliament, and of the execution of Charles I.; opposed Cromwell, and by him was imprisoned in Carisbrook Castle; unjustly sentenced and executed for high treason, at the instigation of the despicable Charles II., June 14, 1662. He was the author of a number of theological and political works, of which a list will be found in Upham's Life of Vane, (see UPHAM, CHARLES WENTWORTH,) 401-3. Among these are: 1. “The royalists have spoken of Vane with extreme dislike; yet it should be remembered that he was not only incorrupt, but disinterested, inflexible in conforming his public conduct to his principles, and averse to every sanguinary or oppressive measure: qualities not very common in revolutionary chiefs, and which honourably distinguished him from the Lamberts and Haslerigs of his party.”—HALLAM: *Lit. “Sir Henry Vane was one of the most profound minds that ever existed,—not inferior, perhaps, to Bacon. Milton has a fine sonnet addressed to him,—

“Vane, young in years, in sage experience old.”

His works, which are theological, are extremely rare, and display astonishing powers. They are remarkable as containing the first direct assertion of the liberty of conscience. Vaughan, Thomas, b. 1621, twin-brother of Henry Vaughan the Silurist, (supra), and also educated at Jesus College, Oxford, of which he became Fellow, after officiating as Rector of St. Bridget, Brecknockshire, retired to Oxford, where he became famous as a disciple and teacher in the school of Cornelius Agrippa. He died in

Oxfordshire, Feb. 27, 1665, "as it were suddenly, when he was operating strong mercury, some of which by chance getting up into his nose killed him."

"He was a great chymist, a noted son of the fire, an experimental philosopher, a zealous brother of the Rosie-Crucian fraternity, an understander of some of the Oriental languages, and a tolerable good English and Latin poet. . . . Stiles himself, in all or most of his writings which he published, Eugenius Philalethes."—Wood: Athen. Oxon., Blisse's ed., iii. 722, 726, (q. v.)

A biographical sketch of Mr. Vaux (with portrait) was published in the Democrat. Rev., xxi. 167.

Vaux, Roberts, the descendant of an ancient family which re-emigrated to England (where the name had long been eminent: see VAUX, LAURENCE; VAUX, THOMAS, LORD VAUX) in 1600, b. in Philadelphia, Jan. 21, 1786, at an early age devoted himself to those philanthropic pursuits which enlisted his zealous interest during the whole course of his active and most useful life. To his freely-conferred and self-denying exertions the causes of public education, the maintenance and instruction of the blind, deaf, and dumb, the care of the insane, prison-discipline, the relief and employment of the poor, the reformation of the vicious, and other excellent objects were more largely indebted than to any other citizen of his native State. Nor should his interest in the subjects of internal improvements and penal codification—on which he corresponded with De Witt Clinton and Edward Livingston—and agriculture fail of an honourable record. For a short time before, and at the time of, his death, Jan. 6, 1836, he was one of the Associate Justices of the Court of Common Pleas. Judge Vaux was a member of the religious Society of Friends.

"Roberts Vaux, well known in his life for intelligent philanthropy and active benevolence, and not forgotten now."—SIDNEY GEORGE FISHER: Oration on the Centen. Anniv. of the Foundation of Germantown Academy, April 21, 1860, 1860, 8vo, 19.

Of this excellent man it may truly be said that "he delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless, and him that had none to help him: the blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon him, and he caused the widow's heart to sing for joy." Let the names of such be held in everlasting remembrance.

Vaux, Vaulx, or Vaus, Thomas, Lord Vaux of Harwedon, the son of Lord Nicholas Vaux, (q. v.), to whom his poems have incorrectly been ascribed, attended Cardinal Wolsey in his embassy to the Emperor Charles V. in 1527; took his place in Parliament as a Baron, 1530; accompanied Henry VIII. to Calais and Boulogne, 1532; Knight of the Bath, 1533; surrendered the office of Captain of the island of Jersey, 1536; d. early in the reign of Philip and Mary. Brydges and Ritson hint that, after all, it may be William, Lord Vaux, (eldest son of this nobleman,) who was really the poet known as Lord Vaux. But the current of critical opinion runs in favour of Lord Thomas. A number of Lord Vaux's poems will be found in Tottell's Surrey, (see HOWARD, HENRY, No. 1.) The Paradise of Daynty Deuses, 1576, &c., (see EDWARDS, RICHARD,) and later collections, (see below.) Among the best-known of his pieces are The Assault of Cupid, The Aged Louer Renounceth Loue, No Pleasure without some Paine, Of the Instability of Youth, Of a Contented Minde, Of Beyeing Asked the Occasion of his White Heade.

"Piers Plowman was full plaine,
And Chaucer's spreet was great;
Earle Surrey had a goodly wayne,
Lord Vauxe the marke did beat."

"In the same time, or not long after, [Surrey and Wyatt] was the Lord Nicholas [Thomas] Vaux, a man of much facility in vulgar makings, [vernacular poems]."—PUTTENHAM: Arte of English Poetrie, 1589, 4to.

"The compositions of Lord Vaux are uniformly of a moral and pensive cast, and breathe a spirit of religion and resignation often truly touching, and sometimes bordering on the sublime."

Veitch, John, b. in Peebles, Scotland, 1829; entered the University of Edinburgh, 1845, and passed through the regular curriculum, (completed in 1851,) gaining honours especially in logic and moral philosophy; in 1855–56 acted as assistant to Sir William Hamilton, and subsequently to his successor, Professor Fraser, until 1860, when he was appointed by the University Court of St. Andrews to the professorship of Logic, Metaphysics, and Rhetoric in the University of St. Andrews, which office he held until 1864.

1. Discourse on the Method of Rightly Conducting the Reason, and Seeking Truth in the Sciences; by Descartes; Translated from the French, with an Introduction, Edin., 1850, 12mo. See No. 2.

"An introduction which contains one of the most acute and sound expositions of the principles of that philosophy with which I am acquainted."—Prof. H. L. MANSEL.

See, also, Edin. Rev., Jan., 1852.

2. The Meditations, and Selections from the Principles of Philosophy, of Descartes; Translated from the Latin and Collated from the French; with Preface, Appendix, and Notes, with 2d ed. of No. 1, 1853, 12mo.

"The translation appears to be executed with care, skill, and literal truth,—possessing that elegance of writing and limpidity of style which so greatly distinguish the original."—Lon. Athen., 1853, 966.

3. With MANSEL, REV. H. L., Edited Lectures on Metaphysics and Logic by Sir William Hamilton, Bart., (q. v.) Metaphysics, 1859, 2 vols. 8vo; Bost., 1859, r. 8vo; 2d ed., Edin., Nov. 1861, 2 vols. 8vo; Logic, 1860, 2 vols. 8vo; Bost., 1860, r. 8vo.

"The editors have done their part of the work in the best style of laborious and conscientious workmanship."—Lon. Athen., 1860, ii. 625. See, also, 705, 751, 792, 793.

The editorial execution of the Lectures on Metaphysics (those on Logic were not then published) was commended by Prof. A. C. Fraser, Count de Rémusat, and Samuel Tyler, all 1859. The student should add to these volumes and to those noted on page 777, supra, The Metaphysics of Sir William Hamilton, by Frances Bowen, Bost., 1861, 12mo; The Logic of Sir William Hamilton, by Henry N. Day, D.D., LL.D., Cin., 1863, 12mo. Read, also, the lives of Hamilton in Brit. Contemporary, Jan. and Feb. 1861, (by Samuel Neil,) and Edinburgh Essays, 1856, 241, 300, (by T. S. Baynes.) To Rev. Dr. H. L. Mansel's works (p. 1215) add—The Limits of Religious Thought, 1858, 8vo, 4th ed., 1859, p. 8vo, (and pamphlets—see SMITH, GOLDWIN, LL.D.,—and papers elicited thereby;) Metaphysics; or, The Philosophy of Consciousness, 1860, p. 8vo. Mr. Veitch's Memoirs of Stewart have been already noticed, (STEWART, DUGALD.)

In 1859 there were published Testimonials bearing on the Qualifications of John Veitch, M.A., for the Chair of Logic in the University of Aberdeen: these consisted of letters of the most complimentary character from Victor Cousin, Count de Rémusat, Dr. Ch. A. Brandis, Professors A. C. Fraser, H. Mansel, George Wilson, Samuel Tyler, and eleven others. In Sept. 1864 he was elected to the Chair of Logic in Glasgow University. Mr. Veitch's Memoir of Sir William Hamilton was published by Blackwoods, Edin., May, 1869, 8vo. See, also—I. See, also, A Translation of Polydore Vergil's History of the Reigns of Henry VI., Edward IV., and Richard III., from a MS. in the Royal Collection, British Museum; Edited by Sir Henry Ellis, K.H., F.R.S., Sec. S.A., Lon., 1844, sm. 4to, (Camden Soc. Pub., xxix.) Polydore Vergil's English History: vol. i., to the Conquest; Edited by Sir Henry Ellis, K.H., F.R.S., Sec. S.A., 1846, sm. 4to, (Camden Soc. Pub., xxxvi.) So far as regards literary merit, Vergil perhaps stands at the head of the English Latin historians.

"Polydore Vergil was the most accomplished writer for elegance and clearness of style that this age afforded. So much the severest enemy he had acknowledged of him; and on this score alone some have unreasonably extolled him. But there is so little of the other more necessary qualifications of a good historian—truth and fair dealing—in all his twenty-six books, that he has been justly condemned by our critics; and it is no wonder that some of them have expressed an indignation suitable to the abuses put upon their country."—BISHOP NICOLSON: Eng. Hist. Lib., ed. 1776, 57. See, also, 31, 102, 152.

"Polydorus, ut homo Italus, et in rebus nostri Hospes, et (quod caput est) neque in Republicis versatus, nec magni aliqui, vel iudicii, vel ingenii; paucæ ex multis delibans, et falsa plerumque pro veris amplexus, Historiam nobis reliquit, cum cætera mendosam, tum exiliter sanè, et jejunè conscriptum."—SIR HENRY SAVILE: Epist. Ded. ad 3 Script. post Bedam.

Humphrey Lloyd and others also attack Vergil, and Caius (De Antiq. Cantab.) states it as a thing "not only reported, but even certainly known, that Polydore Vergil, to prevent the discovery of the faults in his History, most wickedly committed as many of our ancient and manuscript histories to the flames as a wagon could hold." According to another account,—we vouch for neither of these stories,—he sent the original documents from which he prepared his History to Rome. His History was undertaken at the command of Henry VIII. It is thought to be unjust to the Reformers. Bale says that Vergil, though a Roman Catholic, approved of the marriage of ecclesiastics and disapproved of the worship of images. Passages in his book De Rerum Inventoribus are condemned in the Indices Librorum Prohibitorum et Expuratorio. He published the 1st. ed. of Gildas's Epistola: see GILDAS. See Genl. Vernon, Thomas, a lawyer, and, according to Lord Kenyon, "the ablest man in his profession," was at one time secretary to the Duke of Monmouth, and subsequently M.P. for Whitechurch, 1710, '13, '14, and '22. He d. at his seat, Twickenham Park, Aug. 22, 1726. After his death the MSS. of his Reports became the subject of a suit in chancery (see Acherly v. Vernon, in 10 Mod., 529, 530) between his widow, his residuary legatee, and his heir-at-law: therefore, by order of Lords Macclesfield and King, the papers were confided to the editorial care of William Melmoth and William Peere Williams for publication. They appeared as follows: Reports of Cases in Chancery from 23 Ch. II. to 5 Geo. I., Lon., 1726-28, 2 vols. fol.; again, 1736, 2 vols. fol. This edition was so inaccurate that, at the suggestion of Lord Eldon, Mr. John Raithby published a new edition, 1806-7, 3 Parts, 2 vols. r. 8vo; 3d ed., 1828, 2 vols. r. 8vo; Brookfield, 1829, 2 vols. 8vo. Lord Eldon (16 Vesey, Jr., 24) says Raithby's Vernon is a very valuable edition.

"The volumes have, therefore, much more value now than when first published; but . . . they are often extremely meagre and incorrect."—Wallace's Reporters, ed. 1855, 310, (q. v.)

"Vernon's Reports are the best of the old reports in chancery. . . . In 1806 Mr. Raithby favoured the profession with a new and excellent edition of Vernon. . . . These reports include part of the judicial administration of Lord Nottingham and the whole of the time of Lord Somers; but they give us nothing equal to the reputation of some great men. They bring the series of equity decisions down to the conclusion of Lord-Chancellor Cowper's judicial life."—1 Kent, Com., 492.

Villiers, George, second Duke of Buckingham, b. in London, 1627, educated at Christ Church, Oxford, d. of a fever in the house of one of his tenants at Kirkby Moorside, (not in "the worst inn's worst room," as Pope romances in his Moral Essays,) April 16, 1688, was the author of The Rehearsal, a Comedy, Lon., 1672, 4to, The Battle of Sedgemoor, a Farce, 1707, 8vo, 1714, (The Chances, 1682, 4to, is an alteration of Beaumont and Fletcher's Chances, and The Restoration, 1714, 8vo, is not his,) some poems, prose tracts, speeches, &c., q. v. in Park's Walpole's R. and N. Authors, iii. 304–15. The admirable comedy of The Rehearsal, (in which he is said to have had assistance,) and the portrait (Zimri) it provoked from a great lunner, we have already noticed, (DREYDEN, JOHN, p. 523, supra.) A collection called his Miscellaneous Works was published 1704, 8vo; his Works, so styled, ("a bookseller's miscellany, containing various poems and speeches of all times:" Horace Walpole, ubi supra.) 1715, 2 vols. 8vo; Works, 1721; Works, (said to contain his genuine works,) Edin., 1754, (Ruddiman.) Vine, Rev. H. Pleasant Fruits: Tales, &c. for the Young, Collected and Edited, Lon., 1857, 18mo.

Viner, Charles, d. at Aldershot, Hampshire, June 5, 1756, already noticed under BLACKSTONE, SIR WILLIAM, was, according to the gentleman just named, employed for more than half a century on A General Abridgment of Law and Equity, Alphabetically Digested under Proper Titles, with Notes and References to the Whole, Aldershot, 1742–51, 23 vols. fol.; to which (making 24 vols.) is added An Alphabetical Index to all the Abridgments of Law and Equity, &c., by Robert Kelham, Lon., 1758, fol. Viner had his work printed in his own house, from paper (marked with the numbers of the volumes, or the letters C. V.) manufactured for the purpose. It is based upon Rolle, (see ROLLE, SIR HENRY, No. 1); and as D'Anvers's translation concludes with Extinguishment, (see p. 475, supra), Viner began at Factor, and, after concluding the alphabet, proceeded to the title Abatement and worked up to his starting-point. 2d ed., Lon., 1791–94, 24 vols. r. 8vo. To which add a Supplement by Several Gentlemen in the Respective Branches of the Law, (J. E. Watson, S. Comyn, J. Sedgwick, H. Alcock, J. Wyatt, J. Humphreys, A. Anstruther, and M. Nolan,) 1799–1806, 6 vols. r. 8vo. The vol. known as Viner on Evidence is vol. xii. of his Abridgment, which was sold separately.

"When a question of Evidence of any novelty or difficulty arises, fail not to search the 12th vol. of the last edition of Viner's Abridgment."—PROFESSOR WHITESTIDE.

We quote some opinions on Viner's Abridgment:

"Brother Viner is not an authority. Cite the Cases that Viner quotes—that you may do."—FOSTER, J.

"Notwithstanding all its defects and inaccuracies, it must be allowed to be a necessary part of every lawyer's library."—HARGRAVE: 3 Co. Litt., 9 a, note 3.

"The writer who abridges least is most to be relied on: hence Viner, as the repository of certain and ample information, is, perhaps, of all others, except the books of reports, the safest for reference."—HOFFMAN: Leg. Stu., 388. See the note to this.

"He [the young practitioner] will find a great deal of important matter there which cannot be found elsewhere without great difficulty and inconvenience."—WARREN: Law Stu., 2d ed., 1845, 780.

"It is a cumbersome compilation, by no means accurate or complete in its citations, and difficult to use. . . . It often rewards the labor when all other resources have failed the diligent searcher for authorities."—JUDGE STORY: 26 N. Amer. Rev., 9; republ. in his Miscell. Writings, ed. 1852, 388, 389.

See 6 N. Amer. Rev., 74, (republished in his Miscell. Writings, 88.)

"A convenient part of every lawyer's library; . . . but, after all that can be said in its favour, it is an enormous mass of crude, undigested matter, and not worth the labour of the compilation."—1 Kent, Com., 510.

"Read Viner's title of Pleadings yesterday and to-day. It is not so copious nor so instructive as what Bacon says under the same title."—DANIEL WEBSTER: Diary, Sept. 24, 1804: Webster's Priv. Correspond., 1857, i. 179.

Church Quar. Rev., &c. See, also, The Christian Sabbath, N. York, 1862, 12mo.

Vinton, Francis, D.D., b. in Providence, R.I., 1809; graduated at West Point, (rank each year one of the five head cadets,) 1830, at the Law School, Harvard University, 1833, and at the General Theological Seminary, N. York, 1839; was a Lieutenant U.S. Army, 1830-39; Civil Engineer on several railroads, 1830-34; ordained in the Prot. Episcopal Church, deacon, 1839, priest, 1840; elected Bishop of Indiana, and declined, 1847; Rector of Grace Church, Brooklyn Heights, 1847 to 1855, and Assistant Minister of Trinity Church, N. York, 1855 to the present date, (1870;) Professor of Ecclesiastical Polity and Law in the Episcopal General Theological Seminary, New York, March, 1869. He has published Arthur Tremaine, or Annals of Cadet Life, 1830, and single sermons, pamphlets, &c., 1840-64; contributed to Lectures on the Evidences of Christianity, Phila., 1855, 8vo, &c., (see, also, Fast-Day Sermons, N. York, 1861, 12mo;) and delivered public lectures on Dante, the Gentleman, &c. We notice especially his excellent Oration on The Annals of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, N. York, 1863, 8vo.

"It abounds in historical facts, and is copiously illustrated with notes of great interest and value."—J. R. BARTLETT: Bibliog. of Rhode Island, 1864, 8vo, 266.

We apply the same language to Mr. Bartlett's book.

Vinton, Frederic, an industrious bibliographer, formerly connected with the Public Library of the City of Boston, deserves honourable notice as one of the compilers of the Indexes to the excellent Catalogues of that institution,—viz.: I. Index to the Catalogue of a Portion of the Public Library of the City of Boston, Arranged in the Lower Hall, 1858, r. 8vo, pp. iv., 204; II. Index to the Catalogue of Books in the Upper Hall of the Public Library of the City of Boston, 1861, r. 8vo, pp. vii., 902; III. Index to the Catalogue of Books in the Bates Hall of the Public Library of the City of Boston: First Supplement, 1866, r. 8vo, pp. iv., 718, 21.

Mr. Vinton is now pursuing his useful labours in the Library of Congress at Washington, D.C., (see SPORRON, A. R.) Let us hope that the treasures of that too-much-neglected collection will be rendered so easily accessible that it can no longer be said, "The American Congressman reads nothing but the newspapers,"—and those only of his own party.

Vrooman, Ada Eugenie, b. in New York, 1846, has contributed many prose and poetical articles to periodicals. Her Zenobia and her Cleopatra have been called "wonderful productions for a young woman, exhibiting a knowledge of the human heart seldom given to a female." Why not as often to a "female" as to a male? A volume of Miss Vrooman's Poems has been promised.

"Really a new and very superior work, as far as research and wider experience could render it so."—Lon. Athen., 1860, ii. 388. See, also, 733.

Of Dr. Waagen's History of Painting, a translation into French, by L. Hymans and J. Petit, in three volumes, was announced some years since. The following important work is now (1870) in preparation: A Critical and Commercial Dictionary of the Works of Painters, (comprising 8850 sale-notes of pictures and 980 original notes on the subjects and styles of various artists who have painted in the schools of Europe between A.D. 1250 and 1850,) by F. P. Seguier. To be published by Longmans & Co.

Wace, Master, Anglo-Norman poet, b. in the island of Jersey about 1112, was a canon in the cathedral church of Bayeux from 1161 to 1171, and is supposed to have d. in England about 1184. 1. Le Roman de Rou, et des Ducs de Normandie, par Robert Wace, Poète Normand du XI^e Siècle, publié pour la première fois d'après les Manuscrits de France et d'Angleterre, avec des Notes pour servir à l'Intelligence du Texte, par Fred. Pluquet, (et Auguste Le Prevost,) Rouen, éd. Frère, (Paris, de l'imprim. de Crapelet,) 1827, 2 vols. 8vo, 20 fr.

"Il a été tiré 60 exemp. sur papier Vélin Jésus, 40 fr.; 3 sur Jésus de Hollande, et 2 sur papier Hollande un peu plus petit. Un des trois sur Gr. Pap., avec fig. coloriées et rehaussées d'or, ayant de plus les Observations et le Supplément ci-dessous, également en pap. de Hollande, 130 fr. Le Prevost, en 1857. Première édition complète d'une des productions les plus remarquables de notre ancienne littérature; on n'en avait encore publié que des fragments."—BRUNET: Man., 5th ed., v. (1864) 1391.

Wakefield, Gilbert, b. Feb. 22, 1756, in the parsonage-house of St. Nicolas of Nottingham, and the third son of the Rev. George Wakefield, rector of that parish, was educated at, and in 1776 became Fellow of, Jesus College, Cambridge; in 1778 became Curate of Stockport, Cheshire, and Curate of St. Peter's, Liverpool, and in the next year took the post of classical tutor in the Dissenting Academy at Warrington, which he held until the dissolution of the establishment in 1783; from 1784 to 1790 resided at Nottingham, (deserting the Church of England in 1786,) where he taught school; from July, 1790, to June, 1791, was classical tutor in the Dissenting Academy at Hackney; from May 30, 1799, to May 29, 1801, was imprisoned in Dorchester jail for "a seditious libel" (A Reply to some Parts of the Bishop of Llandaff's Address to the People of Great Britain, Lon., 1798, 8vo, pp. 51,) during which his political friends presented him with £5000 as an evidence of their sympathy and esteem; d. in London, Sept. 9, 1801. After his desertion of the Church of England, of which he became a bitter assailant, he never joined any religious society; and in his Enquiry into the Expediency and Propriety of Social Worship (1791, 8vo; 3d ed., 1792) he advocated the negative with no little asperity: see Lon. Mon. Rev., 1792, i. 435. This tirade was answered by Dr. Disney, Mr. Wilson, Eusebia, and others.

"Gilbert Wakefield was a diligent and, we believe, a sincere inquirer after truth, but he was unhappily so framed in temper and habits of mind as to be nearly certain of missing it, in almost every topic of inquiry. . . . He was as violent against Greek accents as he was against the Trinity, and anathematized the final V as strongly as Episcopacy."—Brit. Crit., xxvi.

19. T. Lucretii Cari de Rerum Naturâ Libros Sex, &c.; et cum Animadversionibus Ricardii Bentleii, non ante vulgatis, aliorum subinde miscuit Gilbertus Wakefield, 1796-97, 3 vols. 4to, £5 5s.; l. p., 50 copies, imp. 4to, or sm. fol., £21. Many copies were destroyed by fire. Of the l. p., very beautiful, Heathcote's copy was sold for £50 8s., and for another Mr. Drummond paid Mr. Payne £70. The collations are said to be inaccurate, and the commentary has been characterized as more prolix than judicious. See the review in the Classical Journal, by Peter Elmsley; PORSON, RICHARD, No. 14. But it was highly praised by German critics. Editio altera ad Exemplar Gilberti Wakefield, cum ejusdem et R. Bentleii Notis, Glasguae, 1813, 4 vols. 8vo, £3 3s.; l. p., r. 8vo, £6 6s. Of the portion of vol. iv. containing the Variae Lectiones, 24 copies were struck off on 4to, to range with the original ed. of 1796-97.

"Beyond a doubt, the best critical edition of Lucretius extant. It is a faithful reprint of that of Gilbert Wakefield, [1796-97,] containing in addition the collation of the Editio Princeps, and the inedited notes of Bentley, which Wakefield had left untouched."—DUMAS.

Dr. Busby, in his English translation of Lucretius, 1813, 2 vols. 4to, according to the (London) Quarterly Review, xi. 103, is largely indebted for "poetical illustration" to "the mine of Wakefield." The scholar must also procure Titi Lucretii Cari de Rerum Naturâ Libri Sex, with a Translation and Notes by H. A. J. Munro, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, Camb., 1865, 2 vols. 8vo.

"A new edition of Lucretius, with a literal translation and a whole volume of notes, will supersede all its English predecessors, and proves that scholarship is not so dead among us as is sometimes asserted. . . . His book is that of a learned and industrious scholar, and his short introduction bears ample testimony to the zeal and patience with which he has collated manuscripts, compared and examined the works of past and present critics and commentators, and spared no pains to make his work as trustworthy and complete as possible."—Westm. Rev.

"Every part of his work affords ample proof that he has shunned no exertion to render himself thoroughly qualified for the successful performance of his useful task; and he has accomplished it in such a manner as to reflect honour upon English scholarship. He has produced a work which may take rank with the best German editions of ancient authors, and will long serve as a standard authority."—Lon. Athenæum, Jan. 1865.

20. In Euripidis Hecubam Londini nuper publicatum Diatribe extemporalis, 1797, 8vo. On Porson's Hecuba: see PORSON, RICHARD, No. 12, and the critique in Lon. Mon. Rev. (which also reviews this of Wakefield's) there indicated.

Porson treated the first-named of these critics with little respect; for on being asked for a toast with a sentiment from Shakspeare he gave "Gilbert Wakefield: 'What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba?'" and, says Dr. Thomas Young, "there was quite as much of truth as there was of neatness in the application."

Charles James Fox, in the Years 1796-1801, chiefly on Subjects of Classical Literature, 1813, 8vo, pp. 232. Reviewed in Lon. Quar. Rev., ix. 313-28, (by J. W. Ward, afterwards Earl Dudley.) See, also, Ward's De Clifford; T. Moore's Memoirs, iv. 228.

We quote a few opinions on the general characteristics of Wakefield:

"A writer certainly of classical taste and of elegant attainments. . . . Whose professed attachment to truth and candour was too often biased by prejudice and disgraced by sarcasm."—DR. LAURENCE.

"Wakefield possesses exquisite taste and a most luxuriant fancy, as a critic; and one grieves that he should ever have misapplied his powers to politics and religion."—GREEN: Diary of a Lover of Lit., 63.

"He wanted time or patience for that discrimination which would have made his conjectures fewer, indeed, but more probable, and his principles more exact: [yet] I shall ever think of him as one of the best scholars produced by my own country in my own age."—DR. PARR.

See Wakefield's Memoirs, 2d ed., ii. 437-53. Heyne and his pupil Jacobs commended him highly.

"Partly from imperfections in the manner in which he had been educated, partly from defects of mental character, he was not, and never could have become, either a profound or a refined scholar. Both his Latin style and his English are vicious and barbarous in the extreme."—Knight's Eng. Cyc., Biog., vi., 1858, 474, (q. v.)

"He had the pale complexion and mild features of a saint, was a most gentle creature in domestic life, and a very amiable man; but when he took part in political or religious controversy his pen was dipped in gall."—H. C. ROBINSON: Diary, &c., ed. Bost., 1870, i. 36. See Index.

Wakefield, Robert, according to Wood "the greatest linguist of his time," was b. in the North of England, and educated at Cambridge and on the Continent; taught Greek, Hebrew, Chaldaic, and Syriac in France and Germany; in 1519 left his Hebrew professorship at Louvain, returned to England, and became chaplain to Dr. Pace; opened a public lecture in Greek at Cambridge in 1524, made by Henry VIII., whom he favoured, after opposing, in the affair of his divorce from Katherine: Professor of Hebrew at Oxford, 1530; Canon of Wolsey's College, 1532; saved Hebrew and Greek MSS. at the dissolution of the lesser monasteries in 1536; d. in London, Oct. 8, 1537. 1. Oratio de Laudibus et Utilitate trium Linguarum Arabicæ, Chaldaicæ et Hebraicæ atque Idiomatibus Hebraicis cum in vtroque Testamento inveniuntur, Londini, apud Winandum de Worde, (1524), 4to. The first book printed in England in which the Hebrew and Arabic characters—these were evidently cut in wood—were used. The author complains that he was obliged to omit his whole third part because the printer lacked Hebrew type. See Dibdin's Typ. Antiq., ii. 254. 2. Kotser Codicis, quo præter Ecclesiæ Sacrosanctæ Decretum, probatur Conjugium cum Fratria carnaliter cognita, illicitum omnino, &c., 1528, 4to; 1625, 4to. Walker, George, D.D., the heroic defender of Londonderry after it had been basely abandoned by its governor, was b. in Tyrone, of English parents, and educated at the University of Glasgow; was Rector of Donoughmore, near Londonderry, when James laid siege to that city; successfully resisted the royal army, and was rewarded by the thanks of the House of Commons, the degree of D.D. from Oxford, and £5000 and nomination to the bishopric of Derry from William III.; killed at the battle of the Boyne, July 1, 1690, "while exhorting the colonists of Ulster to play the men."

He published a True Account of the Siege of Londonderry, &c., Lon., 1689, 4to, Edin., 1698, 8vo, and A Vindication of the True Account, Lon., 1689, 4to. Other tracts were published on this subject, some of which will be found in A Collection of Papers relative to the Siege of Derry, &c., Londonderry, 1794, 8vo. A lofty pillar on the walls of Londonderry still attracts the attention of the stranger:

"On the summit is the statue of Walker, such as when, in the last and most terrible emergency, his eloquence roused the fainting courage of his brethren. In one hand he grasps a Bible. The other, pointing down the river, seems to direct the eyes of his famished audience to the English topmasts in the distant bay."—LORD MACAULAY: ubi supra, ch. xii.

Law Jour., 1842 et seq., and editor of Phila. Legal Intelligencer, (established by him in 1844,) 1854-64 et seq. To Wallace's Reports add, Reports of Election, Equity, and other Important Cases Argued and Determined principally in the Courts of the County of Philadelphia, by F. Carroll Brewster, Phila., vol. i., 1869.

Wallace, Horace Binney, youngest son of John Bradford Wallace, and nephew of Horace Binney, was b. in Philadelphia, Feb. 26, 1817; studied for two years at the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated at Princeton, 1835; studied medicine, chemistry, and law, but never practised either; travelled in Europe, 1849-50, and 1852, and d. at Paris, Dec. 16, 1852. To Mr. Wallace's services to the literature of the law (written between his 27th and 32d years) we have already referred, (see HARE, J. I. CLARKE, and WALLACE, HORACE BINNEY:) these annotations are characterized by an eminent authority as "The fruits of an accomplished a legal mind as any man in any country at his early age has shown. . . . There is not a note or remark in the whole body that does not show the mind of a lawyer, imbued with the spirit of the science, instinctively perceiving and observing all its limitations, its harmonies, its modulations, its discords, as a cultivated ear perceives, without an effort, what is congruous or incongruous with the harmonies of sound."—HORACE BINNEY: see CLEVELAND'S Comp. of Amer. Lit., 1859, 702.

Also highly commended by Bost. Law Journal, N. Amer. Rev., lxxxi. 220, &c. Mr. Wallace's early death prevented the preparation of a series of volumes on Civil Law, Commercial Law, and perhaps other subjects, which we have every reason to think would have been highly valued by the profession. At the age of twenty-one he published a novel entitled Stanley; or, The Recollections of a Man of the World, Phila., 1838, 12mo, which, ignorant of the authorship,—for it appeared anonymously,—we remember reading with great interest. He also contributed largely to periodicals, (see, also, GRISWOLD, RUFUS WILMOT, D.D., No. 10;) and some of the articles thus given to the world will be found in two volumes published since his death, viz.:

1. Art and Scenery in Europe; with other Papers; being chiefly Fragments from the Portfolio of the Late Horace Binney Wallace, Esquire, of Philadelphia, Phila., 1855, 12mo; enlarged and stereotyped, 1856, 12mo.

"The book was a surprise to all except the circle of his familiar friends. It exhibits so much taste and sensibility, such power of thought and flowing richness of style, that it has at once placed him among the eminent writers of the day."—N. Amer. Rev., lxxxi. 220, (by S. G. Fisher.)

"The style is elegant, fanciful, and easy, indicating an amateur's fondness for technicalities, but disfigured by affectation."—Lon. Athen., 1855, 789. See, also, Putnam's Mag., June and Sept. 1855.

2. Literary Criticisms, and other Papers, by the Late Horace Binney Wallace, Esquire, of Philadelphia, 1856, 12mo; revised, 1856, 12mo.

"He is one of the few in this our day and generation who can appreciate the solution of a black-letter question."—Letter of Chief-Justice Gilson, of Pennsylvania, July 7, 1851.

"The development of great characters has always been one of my most favourite studies; and I doubt whether history displays, at thirty years of age, a loftier nature, or one more usefully or profoundly cultivated."—DANIEL WEBSTER: quoted in Knickerbocker Mag., July, 1856.

"In him heart, intellect, and character united in so rare combination and harmony, that he would have aided powerfully in advancing the difficult transition through which the nineteenth century has to pass. . . . I do not exaggerate his merits in ranking him as the equal of the greatest American statesmen."—AUGUSTE COMTE: ubi supra.

A Memoir of this excellent man, by his widow, was privately printed in 1848, Phila., 8vo, pp. 27.

Wallace, John William, son of the preceding, b. in Philadelphia, Feb. 17, 1815; graduated at the University of Pennsylvania, 1833; Master in Chancery for the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania; Reporter of the Supreme Court of the United States in place of Judge Black, (who resigned,) March 21, 1864—69 et seq. 1. The Reporters, Chronologically Arranged; with Occasional Remarks upon their Respective Merits, 1843, 8vo; 2d ed., 1845, 8vo; 3d ed., 1855, 8vo, pp. 424. A work of great value, already referred to: see BRIDGMAN, RICHARD WHALLEY.

"A very useful and well-prepared work. . . . Some such work as this is essentially necessary to guard against the indiscriminate reception of the old Reporters, especially the Chancery Reporters, as authority."—HORACE BINNEY: Argument in the Case Vidal v. the City of Philadelphia, Sup. Ct. of U.S., 1844, 88, n.

"It is a valuable and solid contribution to the stock of professional learning; and no lawyer ought to remain ignorant of its contents."—PROF. S. GREENLEAF.

"Mr. Wallace's interesting and instructive work."—PROF. THEOPHILUS PARSONS.

"The fullest account which has yet been given of the Reporters—their chronological order, their respective merits, the history, public and private, of the volumes, with biographical sketches of the authors—is presented in an American work, 'The Reporters, Chronologically Arranged; with Occasional Remarks on their Respective Merits.' The author (Mr. Wallace) spent a considerable time at Lincoln's Inn, and at the Temple, London, from the libraries of which he collected much history hitherto not generally known. In the case of Farrell vs. Hilditch, 94 English Common Law, p. 885, the work received from the judges of the court of common pleas, sitting in banc at Westminster, the characterization of 'highly valuable and interesting,' and one to which 'they could not refrain from referring' on a question involving the reputation of one of the early English reporters."—2 Bouvier's Law Dict., 443, 12th ed., 1868, art. Reports,—very valuable.

"Mr. Wallace's excellent volume on the Reporters."—Amer. Law Rev., Boston, April, 1868.
